Japan Warns Powers From 80 Miles of The Yangtze

Says Flags 'Insufficient' to Protect Ships as Strife Spreads.

China Bombs Sink Tokyo War Vessel

17 of Invaders' Planes Destroyed on Ground in Air Raid.

By the Associated Press.

Shanghai (Saturday), July 9.—Japanese authorities warned the United States and other neutral powers today that neutral vessels and citizens along an 80-mile stretch of the Yangtze River were endangered by spreading warfare.

The warning, in memoranda sent to diplomatic representatives of the neutral powers, stressed the "desirability of voluntary evacuation" along the Yangtze between Pukow, opposite Nanking, and Wanghsikong, half way to Hankow, China's provisional capital.

Flags Held "Insufficient."

The area outlined included Kiukiang itself, where there were American and British gunboats and citizens, and Kuling, a hitherto untouched mountain resort where a number of Americans and other foreigners have sought safety.

The announcement referred to previous communications asking evacuation of river stretches, which American and British authorities had rejected, and declared Japanese "regretted" the replies which pointed out the neutral naval vessels had their flags painted on awnings.

The statement said such identification was insufficient and contained an element of danger.

Paint Request Repeated.

Chinese have laid hundreds of mines in the Yangtze and many still drifting are a source of danger, the memorandum said. It also asserted retreating Chinese were continuing their minelaying in every creek, adding to the hazards of river traffic.

Chinese air headquarters at Hankow reported a Japanese warship turned over on its side and apparently went down yesterday when Chinese bombers scored direct hits in a raid on enemy naval concentrations in the Yangtze River.

Chinese airmen were busy from daybreak to sunset as successive

Civil War Veteran Is A.W.O.L. at 104

Philadelphia, July 8 (U.P.).—Jim Handock, 104, was recovering tonight from a slight cold contracted some time between Tuesday night, when he went A. W. O. L. from the Gettysburg reunion of Civil War veterans and last night when he was found asleep on a Chinatown sidewalk.

From his bed in Naval Hospital, old Jim explained he had traveled all the way from Confederate Veterans' Home in New Orleans only to find he had to "take care of those 90-year-old kids" at Gettysburg.

Party Cheats Death In Colorado Rapids

By the Associated Press.

Lee's Ferry, Ariz., July 8.—Six death-defying adventurers, their food supply exhausted, sailed into this outpost of civilization today—victors over 300 turbulent miles of that menacing river called the Colorado.

Two women botanists and four men, tired but determined, rested here tonight—in beds for the first time in 18 thrill-filled dangerous days of sailing from Green River, Utah, to this northern Arizona hamlet in untried, home-made, motorless boats.

LOIS JOTTER.

ALZADA CLOVER.

To bespectacled Alzada Clover, 40-year-old University of Michigan botanist, and her tall, athletic-type assistant, Miss Lois Jotter, 25, the voyage to this point was "exciting," but "swell."

They belittled such nerve-wracking experiences as:

Losing a boat.

Spending a chilly night alone on the river bank.

"We had a swell time," the women chorused as they stepped to shore here, ending several days of eager watching by a handful of persons.

Arabs Strike as Violence Is Renewed; Party of U. S. Clerics Guarded.

By the Associated Press.

Jerusalem, July 8.—A wave of Arab strikes spread through Palestine today, complicating the problem of British authorities endeavoring to crush a bloody outbreak of Jewish-Arab guerrilla warfare.

A spontaneous strike movement began immediately after a new incident in a swift series of outrages—a bomb explosion at Jerusalem's Jaffa gate in which four Arabs were killed and 36 wounded.

Three Jews and a 12-year-old schoolgirl were arrested following the explosion. Arab bystanders alleged the girl threw the bomb, which tore apart a bus filled with Arab countryfolk.

Authorities refused to disclose the girl's identity.

The blast raised total casualties in nine days of rapidly mounting terror to 38 killed and 150 injured. It was the gravest outbreak in recent Palestine history.

Britain massed all available armed forces to combat the crisis. Warships, airplanes, marines, land troops and police were called to emergency duty.

As news of today's Jerusalem bombing spread throughout the country Arabs went on strikes in numerous towns, including Acre, Nablus, Tulkarm, Jenin and Jaffa.

Marines from British warships patrolled danger spots in tense Haifa, where more than 100 were killed and wounded Wednesday in a pitched battle between Jews and Arabs in the center of the city.

People were forbidden to walk on the streets of Jerusalem at night, with a strict curfew in force from 6 p. m. tonight until 5:30 a. m. tomorrow. Haifa, Jaffa and Tel Aviv also were under night curfew rules.

Six hundred fully-equipped marines and sailors were landed from the British cruiser Emerald which, with the cruiser Enterprise, rushed here under emergency orders. They were placed on duty in Haifa.

Nazis Assert State Control Over Wedlock

By the United Press.

Berlin, July 8.—The government tonight promulgated a decree for "Austria and the rest of the Reich" under which only civil marriages will be legal.

The decree will be operative August 1. Under its provisions, according to the semi-official German News Bureau, marriage henceforth "will be considered not a private contract but the concern of community existence.

"Divorce will be based on the precept that only those marriages may be dissolved which have become valueless to the entire nation," the agency said.

"Marriage hereafter will be pronounced 'in the name of the Reich.' A difference in blood and marital unfitness will be most important grounds for prohibiting marriage.

"The inseparability of Catholic clerical marriages will be eliminated together with the need of any church dispensation, as, for instance, to make mixed marriages valid.

"Adultery will continue to be a cause for divorce. Additional causes will be persistent refusal to reproduce and also the destruction of marriage through infidelity or dishonorable and immoral conduct.

"The custory of children of a divorced couple henceforth will be determined not by who is the guilty party but by who is better able to care for the children."

Prince Bertil Goes Ashore in Newport

Newport, R. I., July 8 (U.P.).—Prince Bertil, son of Crown Prince Gustaf Adolf of Sweden, arrived here tonight aboard H. E. Manville's yacht Hi-Esmaro after a leisurely cruise from Greenwich, Conn.

In the prince's party were the Swedish Minister to the United States, Wollmar Bostrom, and Mrs. Bostrum.

500,000 Non-Aryan Catholics Pictured as Facing Nazi Exile

By John Elliott.
Special Cable to The Post.

Evian-les-Bains, France, July 8.—More than a half million non-Aryan Catholics are threatened with expulsion from Greater Germany because of their racial antecedents and their religious convictions.

This was the testimony given this afternoon before a sub-committee of the Evian Conference on Refugees by a distinguished German priest, member of a former ruling house in the Reich, who asked his name be kept secret because relatives in Germany would be liable to persecution if the veil were lifted from his anonymity.

Also representatives of more than 40 private organizations interested in the Jewish problem voiced their views as to what ought to be done to solve the refugee question before the committee, headed by Judge Michael Hansson, head of the Nansen committee today. James G. McDonald, chairman of President Roosevelt's advisory committee on refugees, sat for the United States on this body.

Information regarding the American Government's immigration policy was given this afternoon by George L. Brandt, technical adviser of the State Department, to the sub-committee headed by Lieut. Col. T. W. White, of Australia.

Brandt said the United States had admitted 20,000 emigrants from Germany and Austria in the fiscal year

Jones Notes Rail Upturn; Loan Slated

Southern Will Get Fund of $13,500,000 for Equipment.

Moderate Improvement Is Seen as Loadings Continue Rise.

By Robert C. Albright.

A "moderate improvement" in the crucial rail situation was noted last night by Chairman Jesse H. Jones of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation as car loadings turned upward again and the Interstate Commerce Commission authorized a $13,500,000 rail equipment loan.

The loan will be made to the Southern Railway Co. by the RFC for the purchase of 5,500 freight cars. Jones called it the first of the "work loans" the RFC is ready to make to all roads which obtain ICC certification.

For the fifth successive week the Association of American Railroads reported an improvement in loading of revenue freight. For the week of July 2 loadings increased 10,725 cars, or 5.4 per cent above the week preceding, giving the highest weekly figure this year. But totals were still 26.6 per cent below the same period in 1937.

Officials Hopeful.

Rail officials were further encouraged by an increase in loadings of merchandise and miscellaneous freight, reflecting improvement in the movement of manufactured products.

Jones commented that he has observed a moderate improvement in the rail situation for some time, and believes "it will continue to improve."

In granting the Southern Railway Co. permission to borrow $13,500,000 from the Government for freight car purchases, the Interstate Commerce Commission decided the company can reasonably be expected to meet its fixed charges without reorganization.

Jones earlier announced the RFC would make the loan if the ICC approved the application. Legislation to permit the RFC to make "work loans" to railroads without ICC certification was sponsored by the Administration last session, but failed of enactment.

The ICC now has under consideration another application from the Southern for permission to borrow $500,000 additional for the purchase of four Diesel-electric or gasoline passenger trains.

Aim to Create Jobs.

The RFC chairman recently told newsmen his agency is prepared to go ahead with "work loans" despite failure of the emergency rail legislation. He indicated he had talked special terms to some roads specifying that a percentage of furloughed employes be put back to work. He said the loans would be for track maintenance, bridge re-

Royal Air Force May Set Up Huge Base in Canada

Special Dispatch to The Post.

New York, July 8.—Indications that Great Britain might establish a huge supply and training base in Canada for the Royal Air Force were seen today with the disclosure that the British air mission on its recent visit to the United States sought to induce American airplane manufacturers to estaablish a Canadian plant on a guaranty to buy 1,000 planes.

An expenditure of $1,000,000,000 by the British government was believed probable for the undertaking, which would embrace not only a manufacturing plant and airdrome, but also a training field for the development of 5,000 Royal Air Force planes which would be based permanently in Canada.

Naval Hospital Site Is Approved Near Bethesda

Rear Admiral Perceval S. Rossiter, chief of the Navy Bureau of Medicine and Surgery, said the decision would permit negotiations to begin immediately for the land.

At present, the construction of a main building to house the naval medical and dental schools and a 600-bed hospital is contemplated. Plans for the future provide for the expansion of these facilities to an 1,800-bed plant in time of war.

Tydings Hits FHA's Ouster Of His Friend

Senator Calls Webb Victim 'of Newest Political Office Purge.'

By Sidney Olson.

Heavy political cannonading opened on the Maryland front yesterday around the sudden ousting of Henry W. Webb, State director of the Federal Housing Administration, whose appointment three years ago was brought about by Senator Millard Tydings.

The debonair anti-New Deal Senator, now battling for his political future against the 100-per-cent-New Dealer, Representative David J. Lewis, immediately termed Webb's discharge "cold-blooded" and "ruthless," insisting that Webb was a "victim of the newest political purge."

The FHA tartly responded that Webb was ousted because of "long-standing inefficiency," noted that under his three-year administration the expense ratio was "unusually high," and stated that the Baltimore housing office ranked "about thirty-fifth" among 67 local administrations.

Should Rank Twelfth.

It was hinted that Webb would have been ousted long ago if Tydings' strong political influence had not been felt. The FHA declared its efficiency experts had ruled that the Baltimore office should, if efficiently managed, rank about twelfth.

Webb himself, reached in Baltimore last night, asserted that his efficiency had never been impeached, that through his efforts the Baltimore office "ranked nineteenth among 59 local offices," and

Oliver Perry, 25, of Bethesda, Md., was sentenced to one year in the House of Correction and fined $60 last night as the result of a 16-mile automobile chase through Prince Georges County early yesterday, during which officers riddled his tires with bullets.

Sentences of one year, to run concurrently, were meted out by Justice of the Peace James S. Vawter on charges of unauthorized use of an automobile, driving while intoxicated and exceeding 60 miles an hour. Perry was fined $10 for driving without a permit and $50 for failing to keep to the right.

Arresting officers were Prince Georges County Policemen Earl Herber and Edwin Thompson, who fired 18 times at the taxi Perry drove. The policemen spotted Perry speeding through Hyattsville. When he failed to halt Thompson shot the front tires, but Perry drove 4 miles at 65 miles and hour on the rims until a third shattered tire forced him to stop.

Hughes Decides To Start Flight To Paris Today

New York, July 8 (AP).—Howard Hughes, millionaire sportsman-movie producer, made plans late tonight to take off between 3 and 4 p. m. (Eastern standard time) tomorrow on his projected 3,600-mile flight to Paris.

He had planned to delay the take-off until Sunday because of mechanical difficulties, but his spokesman, Albert Lodwick, airplane manufacturer, announced the trouble had been ironed out.

Foes of President's Court Plan Will Fight 'Purge' in Georgia

King and Colleagues 'Available if Needed' to Campaign for George, Faced With Roosevelt's Support for Opponent in Primary.

Outstanding Senate foes of the President's court plan have offered to campaign for Senator Walter F. George in his four-cornered race for renomination in Georgia's September primaries.

Senator King (Democrat), of Utah, said he and a number of his Democratic colleagues had informed George they were "available if needed" to speak in his campaign.

King's disclosure followed arrangements completed at the White House with George's opponent, Lawrence B. Camp, and other Georgians, for the President to speak in Georgia in mid-August. Presumably the President will speak for Camp, as against George.

Offered Van Nuys Aid.

Virtually the same group of the Senate court plan foes had offered to campaign in Indiana for Senator Van Nuys before the Hoosier effected a reconcilation with the State organization on the eve of the Indiana State convention.

It was learned that George to date had not accepted any offers of his colleagues to help him, but it was believed the President's apparent intention to take a part in the primary might affect his decision. There is no written party rule in Georgia against "outside interference," but Georgians could not recall when outsiders had taken a part in State contests.

In South Carolina, where Senator Ellison D. Smith, another court plan opponent, is running for re-election against two New Dealers (Gov. Olin Johnson and Edgar Brown), a rigid party rule was said to bar outside interference, and Democratic colleagues are not planning to enter the State.

President Won't Stop.

Under the South Carolina party rule, all candidates must speak in joint debate in county-to-county meetings, and no other interested parties are permitted to speak for the candidates. Some believe this technically would debar the President from making a speech there in behalf of a candidate. The President has been advised not to take part in the primary and has indicated he may not even stop in the State on his return trip to Washington.

Although George has never personally attacked the President, and stalwartly supported Roosevelt at Chicago in 1932 and at Philadelphia in 1936, he opposed his court plan and Government reorganization bill. He voted for the farm bill after making a speech against it.

Grand Jurors To Hear Earle Graft Charges

Pennsylvania Investigation Results From Primary Accusations.

By the Associated Press.

Harrisburg, Pa., July 8.—Political graft charges hurled in the Pennsylvania primary campaign today brought on a grand jury investigation of Gov. George H. Earle's Democratic State administration.

Judge Paul N. Schaeffer, assigned by the State supreme court to conduct the proceedings, said the order for the Dauphin County (Harrisburg) grand jury to proceed would be signed Monday.

The investigation was asked first by Charles J. Margiotti when he was attorney general and also a Democratic candidate for Governor.

Shelley pointed his charges chiefly at Earle, first Democratic Governor in 40 years; David L. Lawrence, Democratic State chairman, and Ralph M. Bashore, secretary of labor and industry.

The accusations included charges legislation favorable to brewers was "sold" for a $50,000 contribution to the Democratic campaign fund; the Sunday movie bill was passed for $100,000; liquor and wine salesmen were "forced" to "kickback" $40,000 for sales to the State monopoly; State employes were "maced" into $2,000,000 contributions, and architects on State buildings had to return a percentage of their fees.

Showers in D. C. Possible Today

Excessive humidity and a maximum temperature of 92 degrees brought sweltering heat to Washington yesterday, and caused officials to close the District Building at 3 p. m. Showers late today or early this evening were forecast as possible.

20,200,000 Persons on Relief; Rolls Rise 7th Straight Month

The Public Works Administration announced yesterday that its pump-priming program was nearing $750,000,000 as the Social Security Board reported the seventh consecutive rise in public relief costs in as many months.

Total outlay by Federal, State and local agencies for the needy in May, including disbursements under the works program was $247,750,000, almost one-third the contemplated spending under the new PWA program. The May relief costs were $4,831,000 higher than those for April, an increase of nearly 2 per cent.

On the basis of reports of relief costs, the Social Security Board estimated that approximately 6,400,000 different families, comprising some 20,200,000 persons, received public aid in one form or another during May.

Further emphasizing the upward trend of unemployment, officials of the United Rubber Workers left a letter at the White House, asking President Roosevelt to intervene to postpone a projected layoff of 1,700 employes of the Goodyear Tire & Rubber Co., of Akron, Ohio, until the union and the company could complete negotiations for collective bargaining.

The letter stated that 4,500 workers out of a total of 13,000 had been laid off since last summer in the company's Akron plants. Further layoffs should be halted, the union officials contended, until the company agrees to an arrangement

States Are Called Treasury Drain

Indorsement Also Given Senator Bulkley in Ohio Primary.

(Text of addresses, Page 12.)

By the United Press.

Aboard President Roosevelt's Train En Route to Oklahoma City, July 8.—President Roosevelt stepped boldly into Kentucky's hotly contested Democratic primary today when he advised the voters of the State, in a vigorous speech, to re-elect Senate Majority Leader Barkley.

In another brief rear platform appearance at Louisville, the President reiterated his desire for re-election of Barkley and defended expenditures for flood control.

Barkley Beaming.

"National problems need people with national experience," the President told an audience of approximately 5,000 as he pointed at the beaming Barkley. The President began his address by pointing to the recovery work of Louisville in connection with last year's flood, declaring:

"In the process of rebuilding you have exemplified the spirit of self-help between agencies of the government."

In the same vein at Covington he had said:

"In the six years (since March 4, 1933) many of our States, because of that help of the National Government, have got back into the 'black' again."

Later tonight, at Bowling Green, the home of Senator M. M. Logan, who is not up for re-election this year, the President stopped briefly and praised Logan for his stand against "dragging the judiciary into a political campaign." Mr. Roosevelt apparently referred to reports several months ago, soon stopped by Logan, that he might resign to accept a judgeship appointment, thereby making possible appointment of Chandler to the Senate and avoiding the present Senatorial primary battle.

At Bowling Green the President again praised Barkley's record and experience in Federal Government affairs.

Earlier in the day he had given inferential approval to the candidacy of Senator Bulkley, of Ohio, a stanch New Dealer, in an address to a crowd estimated at more than 100,000 at Marietta, Ohio.

"Not Interfering."

He declared at Covington that while as a nonresident he was "not interfering in any shape manner or form in the primary campaign" he felt he had a "clear right to tell certain facts relating to the National Government and National Government problems which I believe to be true," and gave his outright approval of Barkley's candidacy.

With Barkley and his opponent in the primary, Gov. A. B. (Happy) Chandler, on the racetrack platform with him, Mr. Roosevelt not only warmly indorsed Barkley's candidacy, but chided Chandler in a sharply worded defense of Federal lending, spending and work relief.

He told Kentucky voters that their State budget had been bal-

Institute Hears Mexican Policy On Oil Debated

Dr. Carrillo Tells of Payment Plans, Clashes With U. S. Speaker.

By Hedley Donovan.
A Staff Correspondent.

Charlottesville, Va., July 8.—The Institute of Public Affairs today turned its attention south of the Rio Grande, as a Mexican labor leader, and a Standard Oil Co. executive and financier presented sharply divergent interpretations of the Mexican government's expropriation of foreign oil companies.

Joseph C. Rovensky, vice president of the Chase National Bank, told the evening session that the Mexican government's action has led to "confusion and a great loss to all the parties concerned."

Asserting that Mexican workers have not benefited from the change, he claimed that employment and wages in the oil industry have declined, while economic and social benefits formerly afforded by the companies have been curtailed.

Mexican, Oil Man Debate.

"If foreign capital is to continue to contribute to the economic development of Mexico," he warned, "long-standing and frequently reaffirmed constitutional rights must not suddenly be disregarded . . . Capital is attracted into a country by the hope of fair treatment and surely the future development of a country is not enhanced by frightening new capital away from it."

Expropriation was described as a phase of "the real Mexican war of independence," comparable to America's struggle in 1776 for freedom from foreign control, by Dr. Elejandro Carrillo, of the Confederation of Mexican Workers, in an afternoon "roundtable" which swiftly became a debate between Carrillo and Maj. T. R. Armstrong, official of the Standard Oil Co.

"Mexico is willing to pay for these properties and intends to do so," Carrillo insisted. Maj. Armstrong observed, "they haven't done anything about it yet."

Indignant at the oil executive's charge that Mexico possesses no means of payment, aside from resale of the "confiscated" property, Carrillo claimed that the country has responded with great enthusiasm and self-sacrifice to President Cardenas' appeal for a popular subscription loan.

"We are not thieves," Carrillo protested. "We are simply defending our sovereignty." His thesis, developed in an address earlier in the day, presented expropriation as "the only course" open to his government when the oil companies "publicly disregarded" the Mexican Supreme Court's affirmation of the national labor tribunal decree ordering wage increases for the oil workers.

The oil companies have been unable "to drag into the fight" the American Government, he said, because "Mr. Roosevelt is not only a good neighbor, but a man who knows much better than we do, how the large monopolies behave, even in powerful countries."

Carrillo dismissed recent press reports of Mexican oil sales to Germany as propaganda inspired by the oil companies and expressed surprise at "this sudden appearance of anti-Nazi sentiment among concerns which formerly sold 25 per cent of their product to Germany."

Armstrong Cites Invitation.

To a suggestion from the audience that American peace societies band together to raise the funds necessary to pay the oil companies, Carrillo replied, "We'll get the money somehow. All we are asking from you is moral support."

Maj. Armstrong said the State Department's attitude has been "distorted" throughout Latin America to give the impression that the American Government approves expropriation, adding that "our only request of the department has been that they should correct that impression."

When asked from the audience whether "it is desirable to do business in a country where you are not wanted," Maj. Armstrong replied that "we were invited into Mexico."

He charged that the Mexican labor board has become "an instrument of national policy to accomplish the spoilation of capital" and that the Supreme Court was "authoritatively advised it was expected to play a helpful part, the performance of which had been facilitated by reducing the tenure of the justices from life to six years, so as to coincide with that of the chief executive."

Expropriation has resulted in complete disorganization of Mexican business life, he contended, the fear of confiscation having "seized every foreign interest in Mexico and crippled production."

Planning Deprecated.

"If Mexico can get away with its present arbitrary act there is no safety for American property anywhere in Latin America, or elsewhere," he stated, "and sooner or later in some part of the world drastic action will be called for."

A request for Mexican "observance of law with respect to American citizens" should not be "inconsistent with the good neighbor policy," he declared.

Dr. Ruth Alexander, Chicago economist, speaking before the evening session, warned the institute against Government planning as the entering wedge of socialism.

"There are still those so blind," she said, "they will not see that we are in the danger zone now, for we are in the planning zone . . . A planned democracy means minute meddling with the laws of human nature and the law of supply and demand." It is "somewhat insolent" to question the survival of capitalism, she added.

"Socialism promises welfare, while capitalism assures freedom," she said. "Choice must be made between the two, for we cannot have both. Democracy rests on capitalism, because the moment you abolish freedom of enterprise you automatically give up all other freedoms."

Span Plans Approved.

The War Department approved yesterday modified plans of M. R. Carpenter, Old Town, Md., for a bridge across the Potomac River between Old Town, Md., and Green Spring, W. Va.

Senator Lonergan Must Have Swim Despite Campaign; McCarran Completely Ignored.

Senator Augustine Lonergan (Democrat), of Connecticut, is not going to sacrifice comfort entirely to the need for usually arduous re-election campaigning.

LONERGAN.

Despite his renomination fight, the Senator made arrangements for his usual fishing trip on the Western shore of Maryland. However, he has been called back to his home State to counteract some of his opponent's activities.

So the Senator rented a cottage at Black Point for himself and his family in order that he may have a salt water swim each morning, and do his stumping in the afternoon.

When President Roosevelt snubbed Senator Pat McCarran, of Nevada, in passing out appointments Thursday, he did a thorough-going job of it.

Not only did the President disregard McCarran's recommendation for appointment of a United States attorney, but he ignored the Nevadan's advice in appointments to the Civil Aeronautics Authority and the Air Safety Board.

The Civil Aeronautics Authority and the board were McCarran's proposal, and he sponsored the measure which created them. But in five appointments to the authority and two to the board, the President passed over three names recommended by Senator McCarran. One of McCarran's candidates was Norman B. Haley, director of air mail for the Interstate Commerce Commission.

McCarran has not spoken for two years to William S. Boyle, whom the President nominated district attorney for Nevada.

The Securities Commission will send representatives throughout the country to canvass brokers and dealers for opinions on the technique of regulating over-the-counter markets.

The commission announced yesterday it has assigned this task to the over-the-counter section of its trading and exchange division. Under the new Maloney act, the commission is seeking to regulate security trading outside of national exchanges.

The law provides for formation of associations of dealers trading in the over-the-counter markets, the associations to regulate the industry under the supervision of the commission.

"These doctors call it by some fancy names nowadays," he added, "but I've got what we used to call hives. All I know is that it's mighty unpleasant."

Meanwhile, friends said that Senator Borah, Idaho veteran, was recovering from the exhaustion that caused him to remain in bed through most of the week and that he would leave in about ten days for Poland Springs, Me., for a complete rest.

The Farm Security Administration is going to try to put the relationships between landlord and renter on a more harmonious basis, the Associated Press said.

Officials, blaming "slipshod" relationships for "mutual distrust" between the owner and tenant, said they would endeavor to abolish the customary verbal lease.

Through its 11,000 field representatives, the FSA will offer free advice and assistance to 3,000,000 tenants and sharecroppers in negotiating written leases. It estimated that 80 per cent of all farm leases were only verbal agreements.

International Harvester Co. Answers Trade Commission

Company Says Criticism of Its 'Dominant Position' and Profits Is 'an Unjust and Witch-Burning' Pronouncement.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, July 8.—The Federal Trade Commission's criticism of the farm machinery industry was described by the International Harvester Co. tonight as an "unjust" and "witch-burning" pronouncement.

The commission cited the "dominant position" and "profits" of the company in Washington yesterday as factors indicating monopolistic conditions in the industry.

Sydney G. McAllister, president of the company, contended the comment was based on "an ex parte investigation" and that the "commission denied the request of the industry for a hearing and opportunity to point out any possible errors in the commission's findings . . ."

Material facts and natural causes, he added, were repeatedly ignored.

Stating the commission found the company enjoyed more net profits in 1937 than in 1929 because of a price-advancing policy which could not have succeeded if free and open competition prevailed, McAllister said:

"There were very substantial increases in 1937 in the two principal elements of costs—labor and materials. The prices of the harvester company were not increased as much as the increase in cost and the margin of profit to sales was less in 1937 than in 1929."

Concerning the charge of "dominance," McAllister referred to the "International Harvester dissolution case" of 1918, and said figures now "indicate without question that the harvester company's percentage of the implement business has further declined and also that new and strong companies have come into the field."

Mass-Production Homes Held Solution of Housing for Poor

Expert Sets Cost Per Pound at Only Half That of Automobiles.

Dwellings inexpensive enough to house the poorest third of the Nation but of an "inconceivably high" quality now are technically possible, Richard Neutra, housing expert, said yesterday.

The new buildings would do away with the "rugged individualism" in living, he said, but would substitute the comfort of living in convenient and efficient homes.

The dwellings would be pre-fabricated houses manufactured by mass production like automobiles, but would cost only half as much by the pound, Neutra said in an interview at his hotel.

Only two things stand in the way of production of such houses, he declared. One is the private capital to set up mass production and the other is positive proof that people would live in them.

Might Prove Popular.

Experience has shown so far, he said, that people will pay even more rent to live in the few modern-type houses which have been constructed so far. But there is no positive proof that large numbers of people would live in standardized homes. On the other hand, there is no proof they wouldn't like them, he added.

The ideal low-cost home is one in which each square foot of space has a potential use 24 hours of the day. "This takes the most careful planning because in a small house where every square foot has one or several uses everything must fit."

"The conventional house now has a bedroom which is useful only 8 hours a day. It is not psychologically suited to daytime use. In the minimum house, as I call it, there is a built-in desk and drawers which also make the room useful as a den or study. But in this case the bed must be the kind which can be folded to give room enough to move around, and yet be suitable as a couch for people to sit on," he said.

Sees Education Needed.

"Naturally low-cost houses must be kept small to avoid unnecessary expense. And where rooms are small it is very important that the furniture be a part of the house so that the most efficient use may be made of every square foot of space.

"In small houses the furniture would have to be an integral part specially designed to fit where it was supposed to. This would mean that users of the homes would have to get sets of instructions on how to use them. Small variation in use would be possible, but considerable education would have to be given before people would understand.

RICHARD NEUTRA.

"It is doubtful if any government could carry on a housing program of the sort. Anyway, it is not necessarily a problem of government to initiate new types of houses. We don't consider that the Government should have developed automobiles."

Compares Houses, Cars.

Neutra believes that once prefabricated houses got into mass production the price not only would be lowered constantly but the quality would steadily improve to heights now inconceivable.

"The most common things in this country are those made by mass production, and they are also the best," he says. "Just compare the automobile with most present houses. Not even a millionaire's house has paint to compare with that on a plumber's second-hand auto. And no millionaire has upholstery on his furniture to compare in quality with that of the same second-hand car."

7,567,000-Acre Decrease From Last Year Cited to Support Program.

By the Associated Press.

A 7,567,000-acre decrease in American land planted to cotton prompted AAA officials to declare yesterday that the "effectiveness" of the crop control law had been proved.

The Federal Crop Reporting Board estimated that acres in cultivation on July 1 totaled 26,904,000. This contrasted with 34,471,000 a year ago.

Under the control program, designed to prevent the accumulation of price-depressing surpluses, the Agriculture Department had allotted growers 27,527,596 acres for planting this year. Thus the crop board's estimate today indicated farmers made a sharper reduction in plantings of the South's big crop than had been asked.

However, the crop board said, other factors besides the control law led to the reduction. It mentioned low prices for last year's crop, and unfavorable weather.

The board said that should abandonment of cotton acreage during the remainder of this season be equal to the 1928-37 average abandonment, the acreage for harvest would be the smallest since 1900.

Last year's acreage produced a record crop of 18,945,000 bales and added to a surplus now estimated at 13,000,000 bales. The supply on hand is enough to fill normal domestic and export needs for a full year.

While the crop board made no forecast of production this year, cotton experts said a crop of between 10,000,000 an 11,750,000 bales was indicated, depending on weather conditions between now and picking time.

I. W. Duggan, director of the Agricultural Adjustment Administration for the major portion of the cotton belt, said the report indicated that relatively few of the approximately 2,500,000 planters would be subject to penalty provisions of the marketing quota system, which will be invoked to control sale of the crop. Each grower's quota will be the cotton produced on his acreage allotment. Sales of cotton produced on acres in excess of the allotment would be subject to a penalty of 2 cents a pound.

The control program offers cooperating growers benefit payments of 2.4 cents a pound on their normal production.

Air Safety Board Members to Study Crash in Montana

Thomas O. Hardin and Sumpter Smith, newly appointed members of the Air Safety Board, Civil Aeronautics Authority, are included as advisers of the board named yesterday by Acting Secretary of Commerce J. Monroe Johnson to investigate the crash of a Northwest Airlines transport plane at Billings, Mont., earlier in the day.

A public hearing on the accident, in which Mrs N. S. Mackie, of Evanston, Ill., was killed, will be held in Billings on or about July 12, Commerce Department officials said.

Other members of the board are Robert D. Hoyt, aeronautical inspector, chairman; Robert I. Hazen, senior airline inspector, and Phil C. Salzman, airline maintenance inspector, all of the Bureau of Air Commerce. Fred B. Sheriff, Montana commissioner of aeronautics, also was designated as an advisory member.

Symphony Starts Series Tomorrow

Arrangements for the first of the National Symphony Orchestra's series of sunset concerts will be completed today. Several thousand seats will be placed at the watergate for the performance tomorrow night. Tickets will go on sale today at the American Automobile Association ticket bureau, Seventeenth street and Pennsylvania avenue.

WPA crews yesterday were finishing the shell. A ceiling for the stage was placed and sound equipment will be installed before the concert opens.

Dr. Hans Kindler will direct the program, beginning at 8 p. m. Two American works will be introduced: John Alden Finckel's "Enchantment," and "Procession of the Royal Scot Guards," by Armand Balandonck, of New York.

100 Children Off To Patuxent Camp

One hundred children yesterday left the Salvation Army Temple for a month at Camp Happyland, the organization's summer outdoor playground at Patuxent, Md.

This year the camp will be turned over entirely to children, although in the past a number of adults enjoyed its privileges.

Maj. and Mrs. Charles H. Dodd will be in charge of the camp this year. Any child needing special foods for body-building will receive them.

Army District Engineer Seeks Larger Quarters

Bids on 22,000 square feet of office space were asked yesterday by Maj. Walter D. Luplow, Army district engineer. Explaining that existing office facilities now in use have been inadequate for some time, officials of the Engineer Office said the proposals would be opened July 19.

They added, however, that the need for additional quarters recently had become imperative because of expansion of work in the Capital.

Businessmen (Little) Study Meeting in Va.

They Will Call Conference September 15 About 'Amalgamation.'

By a Staff Correspondent.

Charlottesville, Va., July 8.—Representatives of six regional and national organizations of little businessmen tonight created a committee to call a conference September 15 for "amalgamation of all smaller business associations."

More than 100 representatives of small business groups, here for a one-day conference in conjunction with the University of Virginia Institute of Public Affairs, heard speakers argue that one federation could more effectively serve their interests than the present associations, several of which came into existence after Secretary Roper's tumultous gathering of little businessmen in Washington.

Before the regular morning session of the Institute, Alfred C. Gaunt, vice president of Smaller Business of America, Inc., attacked "so-called reciprocity treaties."

"At a time when we are endeavoring by minimum wages to protect our standard of living," he said, "we are laying that standard open to destruction by opening our gates to the products of labor with a minimum not of 25 cents an hour, but 5 cents or less."

Gaunt presented an 18-point program, including demands for abolition of tax exempt securities, repeal of emergency powers of the Federal Government, return of relief administration to local communities and tightening of anti-monopoly laws.

Tyre Taylor, of Washington, general counsel for the American Federation of Little Business, advised delegates that "it is high time for business to leave the wailing wall and take its place in the field of action."

"It does recognize in its policies the effort of the Federal Government, under the leadership of one of the two great parties, to cope with the trends of the times. It does believe that business, whether it is for this or against this Administration, is not engaged in constructive leadership."

Cardenas Seeks To Jail Officials Suddenly Rich

Mexico City, July 8 (AP).—President Cardenas today asked congress to pass a law providing prison terms for government officials who get rich without adequate explanation in their tenure of office.

The proposed law provides sentences ranging from 6 months to 10 years for government functionaries from the president and cabinet members down to state officials. Additional activities for which penalties were proposed included the enrichment of kinsmen of government officeholders and the use of their official influence to force subordinates to pay part of their salaries for their jobs.

La Guardia Urges N.Y. Tax Autonomy

Albany, July 8.—Mayor F. H. LaGuardia of New York, appearing at a public hearing on the social welfare committee of the State constitutional convention today, urged a provision which would enable New York City to raise its own revenues to meet bills growing out of relief and related activities or financial burdens imposed upon the city by the State.

It is now necessary for the mayor to come to the Legislature, which he has had to do frequently during his administration, to get authority for special taxes, such as the sales tax for relief, and the cigarette tax, to meet financial problems which affect no other part of the State except New York City.

Morgan Suit Called Blow at President

Knoxville, Tenn., July 8 (AP).—James L. Fly, general counsel for the Tennessee Valley Authority, said today Dr. Arthur E. Morgan's lawsuit to regain his post of TVA chairman-director was a "direct attack on the President's power."

The defense will contend, Fly said, that the President had the power of removal and that Dr. Morgan is not entitled to back salary or recognition as TVA director-chairman.

2 Parachute Jumpers To Perform Tomorrow

Walker Chapman, a clerk in the Office of Indian Affairs, will make two parachute jumps at Beacon Airport, below Alexandria tomorrow afternoon. The first leap will be at 5 p. m. and the second at 7.

At the same time, E. C. Kegley, a Washington automobile mechanic, will make two parachute leaps at Queens Chapel Airport, just beyond the District Line near Mount Rainier High School. The latter will use a circular 'chute. Chapman will entrust his life to a triangular 'chute.

'Whew,' Says the Weather Man

The "mind over matter" philosophy was extolled yesterday by Dr. Charles C. Clark, acting chief of the Weather Bureau, in his office where the temperature was hovering around 90, as compared with a high for the day of 92 outside. Do not think about the heat, he advises, and drink a lot of water, as he is shown doing, if you do happen to think of the heat.

3 Legal Posts Are Filled by Commissioners

Allen's Brother-in-Law Is One of Trio Named to Aid Seal.

Michael J. Keane, jr., brother-in-law of Commissioner George E. Allen, yesterday received a $3,200 job as assistant corporation counsel. Recommended by Corporation Counsel Elwood H. Seal, Keane was one of three local attorneys appointed by the District Commissioners to aid Seal.

Keane, who is 32 years old, is a native of this city and received his law degree from the Washington College of Law. He formerly was a special counsel for the Comptroller of the Currency, but more recently was in the private law practice. His special job will be to draft District legislation. He was admitted to the bar in 1931.

George Reber Littlehales, 37, was appointed an assistant corporation counsel at $3,800 a year to fill the vacancy made by the resignation of T. Gillespie Walsh, who was appointed a member of the newly created Lunacy Commission. Littlehales is a graduate of Georgetown and George Washington universities.

J. Francis Reilly, 30, will fill the vacancy at Police Court created when Assistant Corporation Counsel Oliver Gasch was promoted.

Navy Will Build South Pacific Seaplane Base

The Navy intends to add to its wartime "line of observation" by constructing an auxiliary seaplane base near Canton and Enderbury Islands in the south Pacific, authoritative sources in the Navy Department revealed yesterday.

Portions of the tiny Palmyra group, which by law is part of Honolulu although 1,000 miles from the Hawaiian city will be purchased for the station. It was explained that the construction fits into the Navy's plans for a half-circle of island warning posts about Hawaii.

About $25,000 will be spent on the "auxiliary landing field" for seaplanes on patrol duty in and around the Fourteenth Naval District, which includes the Hawaiian Islands. The work of "knocking coral heads out of the lagoon" and building ramps for taking seaplanes ashore will start in the next few months, naval officials declared.

Palmyra is a group of 30 or 40 privately owned islets enclosing a U-shaped lagoon and aggregating less than a square mile of land surface. Only a small portion of the land area will be needed for military purposes. Fuel tanks and buildings housing repair and radio facilities will be provided there.

Iowa Governor Orders Board To Settle Strike

By the United Press.

Newton, Iowa, July 8.—Gov. Nelson G. Kraschel tonight invoked a law setting up a three-man arbitration board to settle an 8-week-old strike at the Maytag Washing Machine Co. plant.

The Governor disregarded a third plea by municipal authorities for National Guard troops and sent two State agents "to assist in preserving law and order."

Meanwhile, Mayor George Campbell proceeded with plans for enlisting 1,000 volunteer "farmer and citizen" deputies to prevent violence if the Governor persists in his refusal to send troops.

Plant Closed May 9.

The Maytag plant, normally employing 1,400 persons, closed May 9 when 300 union workers refused to accept a proposed 10 per cent wage cut. They were members of the United Electrical, Radio and Machine Workers of America, a C. I. O. affiliate, recognized as bargaining agent for all employes.

Kraschel invoked the arbitration law by ordering the company and the United Electrical, Radio and Machine Workers of America to submit five names each from which the arbiters will be selected.

Rulings Not Binding.

Under the law, the Governor is to select one arbiter from each of the lists submitted. They in turn are to choose the third member of their board.

The law provides that if the two are unable to agree, appointment of the third member devolves upon the Governor.

Kraschel said if either party fails to submit a list of names he will, as authorized under the law, arbitrarily appoint an arbiter to represent that party.

Neither party is compelled by law to accept any decision of the arbitration board.

Pickets Rush Car.

Mayor Campbell was joined in his request for volunteers by Sheriff Earl Shields. They issued a joint statement asking recruits to register tomorrow between 8 a. m. and 5 p. m. Campbell had asked Kraschel for troops with the declaration that an emergency exists and there was "imminent danger of innumerable breaches of the peace."

Two minor outbreaks of violence preceded the plea. Approximately 300 pickets rushed an automobile driven by Police Chief McCall as he attempted to drive through the lines. The automobile was pushed back to the street. Later, about 50 pickets chased George Umbreit, company vice president, and Edward Ford, company attorney, for a block and a half when they attempted to enter the plant.

Two pickets, including one John Evans, were arrested on the picket lines after the police machine was forced into the street.

Ickes Affirms Fair Offers as Policy on Power

PWA's Allotments Will Be Restricted in Case of Competition.

Secretary of Interior Ickes, as Public Works Administrator, yesterday announced that PWA allotments for construction of municipal power developments in competition with existing systems will be restricted to cases where private utility owners have rejected "fair and reasonable" offers for purchase of their properties. The announcement made it clear Ickes would be the judge of what constituted a "fair and reasonable" offer.

The policy applies only to applications for funds to construct public power systems in direct competition with existing privately owned facilities. It is in line with the pledge which Senate Majority Leader Barkley gave during debate on the PWA section of the new spending-lending program when an attempt was made to write into the bill a prohibition against PWA allotments for competitive municipal power systems.

The formal declaration of that policy yesterday is expected to be followed by early announcement of a number of allotments for municipal power projects aggregating about $120,000,000, applications for which have been held up. Under previous programs, public power loans were made for projects in 26 States.

Setting forth a series of exemptions, yesterday's announcement said:

"The policy does not apply where a proposed public project does not duplicate any severable part of a private utility system for which the applicant could reasonably make an offer to purchase. Nor does it apply to extensions of an existing municipal plant, nor for projects generating, transmitting, or distributing power to be used substantially solely for the proprietary needs of the municipal agency and not to be sold to the general public.

"It does not apply to projects for the construction of generating or transmission facilities, even though the power may be generated from, or transmitted by, such facilities and sold to agencies which may theretofore have purchased their power at wholesale from the privately owned utility."

Bolivia, Paraguay Agree on Plan to Settle Chaco Row

Buenos Aires, July 8 (AP).—The secretariat of the Chaco peace conference said today a settlement was imminent between Bolivia and Paraguay that would submit to arbitration their 100-year-old territorial dispute over the Gran Chaco.

The two countries, which fought a three-year war over the Chaco and have been unable to agree upon peace terms since the 1935 armistice, were said to have reached an understanding on all basic points of an arbitration agreement expected to be signed Monday or Tuesday. Details of the tentative agreement were not revealed.

Secretary of State Hull expressed satisfaction yesterday at the agreement reached at Buenos Aires to end the Chaco dispute between Bolivia and Paraguay. He called it a major step toward permanent inter-American peace.

Peacemaker Slain As Husband Kills Wife, Shoots Self

Van Nuys, Calif., July 8 (AP).—A husband late today shot and killed his estranged wife and a middle-aged man who attempted to save her, then turned the gun on himself.

Police said Mrs. Peggy Rae Barnes, 23, formerly of Salt Lake City, was killed instantly when a bullet struck her in the forehead.

Carl Hawkins, of Arminta, Calif., who was working in a berry patch and tried to break up the quarrel, was taken to Van Nuys Emergency Hospital with a slug in his chest. He died within ten minutes.

The husband, Robert Barnes, 31, also was taken to the hospital, with a self-inflicted wound in the head. He was not expected to live.

Ex-Convict Admits Slaying of Three

Minneapolis, July 8 (AP).—County Attorney E. J. Goff said tonight he planned to ask the Hennepin County Grand Jury here next Wednesday for three murder indictments against Robert McLeod, former North Dakota convict, and confessed slayer of three farm residents at at South St. Paul, admitted, said Maple Grove, near here.

McLeod, captured this morning Harold Levander, assistant Dakota County attorney, that he had beaten with a hammer and shot and killed Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Oswald and their hired man, John Kujawa, as they slept at the Oswald farm early yesterday.

Italy Gives Reich Treasured Statue

Rome, July 8 (AP).—The Italian government decided today to give—instead of sell—Germany one of Rome's famous art treasures, the Lancellotti copy of the Discobolus, or Discus Thrower, because of Adolf Hitler's interest in it.

A communique said gift of the copy of the ancient Greek sculptor Myron's statue was "testimony of the friendship" binding Italy and Germany. Previously it was said to have been sold to Germany for 5,000,000 lire, or about $250,000.

Married in Reno and Repenting In Luxury—So It Is With Babs

The Count Was Sleek and Debonair Until the Snow and Her U. S. Citizenship Fell and She Became a Melancholy Dane.

By the United Press.

New York, July 8.—Disillusion and dissolution came swiftly in Barbara Hutton's romances.

Her marriage to Prince Alexis Mdivani lasted less than two years. Her second marriage was little more than a year older than that when it began to appear that divorce from Count Curt Haugwitz-Reventlow, of Denmark, was inevitable.

The count was sleek and debonair and charming when ship news reporters met him on May 10, 1935. He denied pleasantly that he would marry Barbara and bet a newsreel photographer $25 he would not be married within a year.

Three days later Barbara won a ten-minute Reno divorce from Alexis, on whom she had recently settled more than $2,000,000—charging him with "mental cruelty" in preferring polo to her. She would have married the count that same day but for her superstitition about the date (it was May 13). So the nuptials were postponed a few hours.

Married in Reno.

Next morning she was married to Haugwitz-Reventlow in the Reno home of Dr. and Mrs. A. J. Bart Hood.

The count received a fairly good press, in comparison to that which Alexis received. Newsmen were advised he was personally wealthy and so could not be termed a fortune-hunter.

Subsequently it appeared he may have been largely dependent on the generosity of a brother and sister. Ill-feeling aroused by the fact Barbara again was marrying a foreigner was soothed by an interview the newlyweds granted in New York.

"We are going to live permanently in America," Barbara volunteered.

"Is that all right with you?" the count was asked.

Haunted Honeymoon.

The count and countess sailed for a honeymon on the Danish island of Lolland in the "haunted" Castle of Hardenberg, where the beheaded Count Struensee, paramour of Queen Carolyn Matilda, had won the enmity of eighteenth century Danish nobles by plotting the improvement of social conditions in Denmark.

Before he died, Count Struensee cursed the Danish noblemen responsible for his death and the imprisonment of Queen Carolyn. The "curse of Struensee," natives say, still hangs over noblemen who visit the castle. If Barbara is superstitious about other things as she is about number 13, she may consider her honeymoon site prophetic.

But for a time, at least, the Haugwitz-Reventlows were supremely happy. They traveled widely. While they were at Warneumuende, Germany, word came that Alexis had been killed in the Rolls Royce Babs had given him. She dismissed the incident as "inevitable."

"Who Was With Him?"

"He drove like a madman," she said.

A psychologist might have found significance in the question Barbara put to a newspaperman as soon as he informed her of the prince's death. "Who was with him?" she asked. The woman with Alexis was the Baroness Maud Thyssen, gravely injured in the crash.

The birth of Lance Haugwitz-Reventlow in London in March, 1936, seemed assurance that this latest romance of the "five-and-ten girl" would be lasting. It also raised the question of inheritance taxes and citizenship. The child was born in England, of a Dane and an American. Under Danish law he might have claimed Danish citizenship at any time before he was 21. Most of his inheritance would come from the United States.

Barbara received an income of $1,750,000 a year from her estate, which by this time had grown to something like $47,000,000 under the guidance of her father, who worked hard to increase her wealth, even under the handicap of her lavish gifts and spending. Most of the money was in tax-exempt securities, chiefly United States Government bonds. It was estimated the fortune might be divided roughly as $32,000,000 in tax-exempt securities; $9,000,000 in partly exempt securities; $3,000,000 in covenant bonds which also were partly tax-exempt, and $3,500,000 in Woolworth Five-and-Ten stock, which brought her an estimated $160,000 a year.

Snow Falls, and Citizenship.

Most of the securities were exempt from income taxes, but not from inheritance taxes. Considering State and Federal taxes, Barbara's death might have cost her son anywhere from $16,000,000 to $22,000,000.

So on a snowy day last December Barbara entered the office of Federal Judge William Bondy, accompanied by Graham Mattison and Henry Mattix, J. P. Morgan lawyers. Two minutes later the 25-year-old countess had signed away her American citizenship. Her lawyers offered the less-than-complete explanation that the countess "sincerely regretted the circumstances beyond her control which compelled her to take this action."

The previous summer, James W. Gerard, former Ambassador to Germany, had returned from Europe with the assertion that Barbara "should be given a medal" for patriotism.

"She is so proud of being an American," Gerard said, "that she did not give up her citizenship, although she could have done so and saved large sums of money in income taxes."

A Melancholy Dane.

But by December Barbara was fully a Danish citizen and from then on her marriage seems not to have progressed so smoothly. Rumors of rifts drifted across the Atlantic, and were denied furiously by her father.

The rumors have been confirmed in recent days. The suave count has been represented in a British court as having demanded $5,000,000 as the price of Barbara's freedom, of having threatened to shoot a man of whom he was jealous, of threatening suicide, and of threatening to put Barbara "on the spot."

So Barbara seems to have come to the end of another titled romance. And whose name is mentioned most prominently as a likely successor to Prince Alexis and Count Haugwitz-Reventlow? It is no commoner's name. It is that of Prince Frederick of Prussia, grandson of the former Kaiser.

3 Fair Employes Burned in Blaze

New York, July 8.—Three employes of the 1939 New York World's Fair were injured slightly today when a temporary storage warehouse adjacent to the fair site burned. The fire, the first to which apparatus of the fair's fire department responded, did between $8,000 and $10,000 worth of damage.

The general strike, which has paralyzed construction at the fair since a week ago Thursday, continued today. Arthur S. Meyer, acting chairman of the New York State Board of Education, again individually conferred with officials of the fair and of the disputing parties—the New York Telephone Co. and the Building and Construction Trades Council of New York.

Credit Agency Lends $21,476,240 on Corn

The Commodity Credit Corporation announced today its corn loans through July 7 totaled $21,476,240 on 44,300,852 bushels.

Cotton loans totaled $238,522,756 on 5,460,238 bales, including $6,928,044 on 164,798 bales which were paid and the cotton released.

The corporation had appraised, through July 2, 50,204,900 net grease pounds of wool for loans totaling $8,854,585. Loans of $1,460,618 had been completed on 8,150,515 pounds.

D. C. China Fund $8,248.

A total of $8,248.84 has been received to date by the District Chapter of the American Red Cross for the Chinese Civilian Relief Fund, Otto S. Lund, chapter manager, announced last night.

Highway Span Debris Keeping Workmen Busy

Bridge Closed 5 Hours for Third Consecutive Day; Flood Massed Wrecks.

Workmen continued to claw into the earth this morning to free the mass of trees, parts of scows and dead animals lodged against the supports of Highway Bridge.

The bridge was closed from midnight to 5 a. m. today. This morning marked the third consecutive day that the bridge was closed.

When the Army Engineers Office launched the work Tuesday morning they did not realize that more than 100 tons of trees and other debris would have to be dislodged from the supports of the bridge. Most of the foreign matter pulled up from the riverbed by the dredge probably found its way there in the flood of January, 1937, E. J. Merrick, engineer in charge, said.

Early yesterday workmen pulled up part of an old scow believed to have drifted away from the pier of the old Columbia Sand & Gravel Co. in Georgetown. This morning the crew weeded out an old Potomas Electric Power Co. cable, now dead.

Some of the trees and debris apparently landed with such force against the supports that live cables under the riverbed were stretched and pulled. The telephone and telegraph cables lying on the riverbed below the span are not menaced by the debris, it was stated.

Merrick said operations would continue next week by the north span and navigation there would be closed.

Nations Resorting To Purge Policies Scored by Bullitt

Reims, France, July 8 (AP).—United States Ambassador William C. Bullitt made a scathing attack today on "certain nations" who resort to "murder of defenseless men, women and children" and "employ such crimes as instruments of their national policy."

The ambassador named no countries. He spoke at Reims City Hall, where he was made an honorary citizen.

The ambassador asserted "there are materials present from which to rebuild international morality."

"Not alone France, England and all the countries of America," he declared, "but also a host of nations are eager to live as good neighbors."

41st Auto Victim Dies in District

Vincent J. Casey, 27, 2325 Fifteenth street northwest, an NFC employe, died in Georgetown Hospital yesterday the District's forty-first traffic victim this year. Last year there had been 56 persons killed in traffic accidents here on the same date.

Casey was injured in a two-car accident at Longfellow street and Georgia avenue early Thursday. He was a passenger in a car driven by Mrs. Susan J. Gelder, 22, 2325 Fifteenth street northwest. The other car, police say, was operated by John W. Everett, 26, 618 Rittenhouse street northwest.

Coroner A. Magruder MacDonald said an inquest would be postponed indefinitely. The drivers are injured so painfully neither can talk.

Kansas Candidate Accused as a Nazi

Topeka, Kans., July 8 (AP).—Nine Kansas religious and educational figures urged in a 15-page pamphlet issued today that the Dies Congressional committee on un-American activities investigate the Rev. Gerald B. Winrod, of Wichita, who is seeking the Republican nomination for United States Senator.

The group published numerous purported excerpts from Winrod's printed statements and asserted they warranted an investigation into Winrod's "record, the sources of his lavish expenditures and his fascist connections."

The pamphlet charged Winrod had given evidence of "pro-nazi leanings," "anti-Semitic" and by his criticism of Catholicism and the Federal Council of Churches in America "has introduced the religious issue into the political arena."

District Lawyer Hit by Street Car

Isidore Hershfield, 62, attorney, of 1901 Columbia road northwest, was slightly injured yesterday when struck by a street car driven by James B. Lloyd, 912 C street northeast, when he tried to cross from one loading platform to the other at Fourteenth and F streets northwest.

4 Bombers Set Record.

London, July 8 (AP).—Four British bomber-type planes today established a record for the longest nonstop flight by an organized unit when they landed at Ismailia, Egypt, from Cranwell, Lincolnshire. They made the 4,300-mile flight in about 32 hours.

O'Keefe Sped to Panama.

The State Department reported yesterday John O'Keefe, vice consul at Buenaventura, Colombia, had been taken by Navy seaplane to the Canal Zone for medical treatment. Reports said O'Keefe apparently had typhoid fever.

Veteran of Stuart's Cavalry Favors a 'Streamlined' South

GEORGE SHREVE.

Swords and Roses 'Claptrap,' Says Sole Survivor of 700 Who Enlisted at Fairfax, Back for Family Reunion at 94.

Nostalgic sighs for the vanished era of swords and roses in the deep South are so much "claptrap," and the streamlined era has opportunities to dwarf those of the past.

An ancient "modern," George W. Shreve, 94, and sole survivor of the 700 men and boys who enlisted in the Confederate Army from Fairfax, Va., thus declared himself as he sat in the warm sun at the home of his grandniece, Mrs. Elizabeth M. Cox, 4807 Iowa avenue yesterday afternoon.

Shreve, only man alive of those who served with Maj. Pelham's original artillery battery, attached to Gen. J. E. B. Stuart's cavalry in the War Between the States, journeyed to Gettysburg for the seventy-fifth reunion of the Blue and Gray from his home at Santa Cruz, Calif.

Family Reunion Today.

After the celebration, he came on with an attendant to Washington and today he will attend a reunion of kinfolk and friends at the old family estate, near Dunn Loring in Fairfax County, the estate he left as a lad of 17 to join the Confederate Army.

"We must move ahead in a modern age," said Shreve yesterday, his bright eyes sparkling. "That's what I did when I left the army."

Back in 1861 Shreve enlisted. He served throughout the war. As Stuart's men moved up toward the Battle of Gettysburg, his battery engaged in an artillery duel with a Northern regiment at Ashby's Gap.

Fragment Still in Knee.

"The fighting was heavy, and I still can smell the powder and see the shells burst," recalled Shreve.

A fragment struck him in the knee and he was forced to remain in the care of a surgeon while "Beauty" Stuart, his plume quivering and his battle flags dancing in the breeze, pushed on. Shreve still carries the shot in his knee.

Shreve was with Lee at Appomattox. As soon as the truce was signed, he rode his horse back to Fairfax where he signed parole papers.

"The cause was lost," he reminisced yesterday, "and the war was over. There was one thing left to do, and that was to build a united country. I felt no grudge."

Made Two Fortunes.

For a while Shreve worked with an arms firm in New York. Then he was transferred to St. Louis and went up and down the Mississippi on packets. He was often a passenger on the Robert E. Lee and the Natchez.

"Finally," he remembered. "I decided to go to California. So I got on a train, one of the first to span the continent. There I opened my own sporting goods store."

As the years passed, Shreve grew wealthy. Then came the great San Francisco earthquake, and the fire that followed. It wiped out his business on Market street.

But he could not forget the pluck he had learned as a young soldier in ragged gray. He moved to a fruit ranch and built a new competence. There he lived until he retired some time ago. He has five grown children out on the West Coast.

Not Virginian Now.

"My children are Californians, not Virginians," he chuckled yesterday.

And modern transportation excites his wonder.

"We're going back to California on a streamlined train," he confided.

"I wanted to fly back.

"But the War Department would not let me."

Farley Predicts Upturn in Fall

Fond du Lac, Wis., July 8 (AP).—Postmaster General James A. Farley predicted a "big pickup" in business in September and steered the Democratic State convention into a loud demonstration today for the renomination of United States Senator F. Ryan Duffy and indorsement of Roosevelt Administration policies.

"Much beneficial legislation was passed in the last session of Congress and starting early in September you will find a big pickup in business," Farley said. He told 1,600 convention delegates "no person has made a greater contribution to the success of the President's program than Senator Duffy."

Wreck in Montana Kills Five, Hurts 5

Missoula, Mont., July 8 (AP).—Searchers picked through scattered wreckage of a heavy Northern Pacific freight locomotive tonight hoping to find the bodies of two of the five persons railroad men said were killed last night when the locomotive exploded. Three bodies were recovered.

Five others were injured when the locomotive, pulling a freight at 50 miles an hour eastward from Missoula, exploded near Willis, 27 miles east of Missoula, in western Montana.

McCall Is Doomed Week of July 25

Tallahassee, Fla., July 8 (AP).—Gov. Fred P. Cone signed a death warrant today calling for electrocution of Franklin Pierce McCall the week of July 25 for the kidnaping of 5-year-old James B. Cash, jr., of Princeton, Fla.

Superintendent L. F. Chapman, of the State Prison at Raiford will determine which day of the week will be the confessed kidnaper's last.

Gov. Cone also set the week of July 25 for the execution of Paul Bunge, Tampa poet who killed his wife and two children.

Va. Legislators Will Inspect Parks System

Senator Byrd, House Delegation Will Join Tour Monday.

By the Associated Press.

Roanoke, Va., July 8.—A party of Virginia legislators, including Senator Harry F. Byrd, Representative Clifton A. Woodrum, of Roanoke; Representative Thomas G. Burch, of Martinsville, and Representative A. Willis Robertson, of Lexington, will make an inspection tour of the Virginia sections of the Blue Ridge Parkway Monday and Tuesday, Robertson announced here today.

The group will gather at Skyland, in the Shenandoah National Park, on Sunday, to be met by Dudley C. Bayliss, Washington, D. C., assistant chief architect of the National Park Service, and Stanley W. Abbott, acting superintendent of the Blue Ridge Parkway in Roanoke, who will accompany them on the tour.

Problems of the $30,000,000 parkway will be discussed in the two-day trip, starting Monday from Skyland. Important portions of the parkway to be covered in the inspection are from the Shenandoah Park boundary above Waynesboro south to Humpback Mountain, the Peaks of Otter, near Bedford, and 40 miles of the parkway south of Roanoke. The final portion of the trip will be terminated at Rocky Knob Park, 4,000-acre recreation ground now being developed near Floyd.

The party will visit the recently completed pinnacles of Dan hydro-electric project in the gorge of the Dan River Tuesday afternoon. Danville city officials will join the group for this part of the inspection.

Man and Woman Detained in Death Of PWA Worker

A man and a woman, 27 and 28, were held for investigation last night in the mysterious death Thursday in Providence Hospital of Elmer L. Stallard, 31-year-old Fort Belvoir PWA worker. Police of Alexandria, where Stallard was arrested on a drunk charge Saturday night, said the woman was proprietor of a house where the dead man was known to have been.

They said Stallard was found lying on the sidewalk in front of the house and was taken to Alexandria Hospital where he was reported drunk and not admitted. Held over the week-end because courts were closed, the man appeared so ill Monday night that he was taken again to Alexandria Hospital, police said, where he was diagnosed again as drunk. Tuesday he was given a suspended sentence on a drunk charge and returned to Fort Belvoir where authorities considered his condition dangerous and ordered him to Providence.

U. S. Threatens to Sell Half of Homes in Town

Huntington, W. Va., July 8 (AP).—The Federal Government threatened tonight to put virtually half the homes of Point Pleasant, W. Va., on the auction block unless the town starts repayment of a $90,000 PWA loan, used for a sewer system.

Assistant United States District Attorney John W. Hereford said from 200 to 300 liens would be filed immediately by the Government against properties of citizens of the placid little Ohio River town, and foreclosures and sales would follow if necessary to collect the debt.

6 Cheat Death In 300-Mile Ride on Rapids

leader; Eugene Atkinson, University of Michigan geologist; Don Harris, of Soda Springs, Idaho, a United States Geological Survey employe, and Artist-Photographer W. C. Gibson, of San Francisco, were jubilant the first leg was successful.

"Yes, there were many exciting moments and we had to work hard with the oars while 'shooting' the rapids, but except for trouble at two points we had little difficulty," said Miss Jotter.

One thrilling incident was the overturning of Atkinson's and Gibson's boat.

She also told of spending one cold night alone on the banks of the river, hemmed in by precipitous cliffs.

After 120 miles of calm sailing down the Green River the craft were caught in an eddy at the junction with the mighty Colorado.

Beached after a terrific fight against swift curents and whirling pools, one empty boat broke away. Leaving Miss Jotter on shore, the other adventurers rowed after the wayward craft.

The boat was retrieved at nightfall, but the party spent the night in groups of two, three and one—Miss Jotter.

"No, I was not afraid," she said confidently. "The canyon walls were so high there was little danger of wild animals finding me."

Next morning, five days after leaving Green River, Utah, the groups combined and later found Miss Jotter.

Then came Cataract Canyon, "Graveyard of the Colorado."

Down scores of rapids the boats sped, tossed about like corks in the surf. Only six times did Nevills "ground" the boats to avoid danger. Three times they were portaged over near-cataracts and three times they were lowered byropes.

At the junction of the Colorado and Chipman Creek, the boat occupied by Atkinson and Gibson capsized. Gibson swam ashore, but Atkinson, grasping the overturned craft, was carried downstream.

Miss Clover and Nevills braved seven or eight rapids in a wild dash to rescue their comrades.

Atkinson, fighting gamely, bobbed up and down in the churning stream. After a half-mile battle, he was rescued by Miss Clover and Nevills. The boat was righted.

The party saw only six other persons—three at Hite, a river crossing in southern Utah, and three Japanese prospectors some 30 miles below Hite.

Faced with a food shortage several days out of Green River, they obtained canned goods cached in a cabin near the Rainbow Bridge, in extreme southern Utah.

When they stepped ashore here, only one can of soup and three or four cans of other food remained.

"We did not go hungry, however," Miss Clover said. "Our supplies were rationed day by day and we had planned to carry just enough to last until we reached Lee's Ferry."

Women Take Rest.

The women ate slices of watermelon provided by friends, then asked for a chance to rest.

She said she saw many varieties of wild animals in the jagged rocks.

They did not see any Indians, however.

With only half the voyage completed, the party still faces miles of treacherous water. Leaving tomorrow, they plan to stop at the Grand Canyon for more supplies, then finish the trip, which no woman had completed, to Lake Mead.

The only other woman known to have attempted the river trip was Mrs. Glenn R. Hyde, of Hansen, Idaho. She was lost with her bridegroom husband 10 years ago. Of the dozen-odd men's expeditions, several were successful.

Count Szechenyi Remembered in Catholic Requiem

Memorial services for Count Laszlo Szechenyi, former Hungarian Minister to the United States, were held yesterday in St. Matthew's Catholic Church, which he used to attend. Count Szechenyi died Tuesday in Budapest.

Representatives from diplomatic circles were present, headed by the British Ambassador and Lady Lindsay. Present also were Dr. Stanley Hornbeck, James C. Dunn and Donald B. Eddy, of the State Department, as well as Ulysses Grant Smith, United States Commissioner to Hungary after the World War.

Requiem mass was said by the Rev. R. J. Froelich for the count, who was credited with bringing about friendly relations between the United States and Hungary after the World War. He was popular in social circles during his service here from 1922 to 1933.

Count Szenchenyi died in a sanitarium after a long illness. At his bedside when he died were his wife, the former Gladys Vanderbile, and several of his daughters, including Mrs. Eugene B. Roberts, of 4341 Forest Lane northwest.

Wind Blows Trailer 80 Feet Over Fence

Associated Press WIREPHOTO.

A 45-mile wind yesterday blew the trailer of Mrs. Carmody Vanscoy, of Blencoe, Iowa, 80 feet over a fence onto the Ak-Sar-Ben race track at Omaha and reduced it to kindling as shown above. Mrs. Vanscoy and her son, Jimmy, tumbled out of the door and escaped with bruises as the wind lifted the trailer.

pairs and car and engine repairs and building.

Meanwhile passenger traffic agents of the Eastern railroads meeting in New York yesterday decided on July 25 as the effective date for the new half-cent a mile increase in Eastern line coach fares.

The increase from 2 to 2½ cents a mile was approved Wednesday by the Interstate Commerce Commission, which commented that the roads were in "serious need of additional revenue" and their financial condition has become "progressively worse." The increase was sanctioned on ten days' notice.

The 2½-cent rate effective July 25 will affect the region east of Chicago and St. Louis and north of the Ohio and Potomac rivers, and some parts of Virginia and West Virginia.

The rates apply only to interstate traffic, and State officials were asked to make them applicable intrastate.

Associated Press dispatches from Harrisburg, Pa., quoted two of Pennsylvania's five public utility commissioners as saying the request was "equivalent to suicide." Commissioner Richard J. Beamish advocated complete reorganization of the roads, saying they "will have to go through the financial wringer or die." Commissioner Donald M. Livingston said he would approve an intrastate increase "if the railroads can demonstrate the necessity for the raise, but personally I believe it would be rail suicide."

New Jersey Holds HOLC Liable to Be Sued in State Court

Trenton, N. J., July 8 (AP).—The Supreme Court held today that the Home Owner Loan Corporation, a Federal agency, may be sued in the State courts "like any private corporation."

Justice Charles W. Parker, who wrote the court's opinion, sustained judgments of $100 to Mrs. Ida Herman, of Newark, and $50 to her husband, Samuel, for injuries she received when she fell last year in an apartment house to which the HOLC held title.

The HOLC claimed it could not be sued because it was "an instrumentality of the United States," engaged in 'carrying out a governmental function.

Republicans Bid For Labor Support

Special Dispatch to The Post.

New York, July 8.—The Republican State committee this afternoon left the door ajar for a working agreement with the American Labor Party in the approaching State campaign when it refused to take action on a resolution denouncing the A. L. P. and barring a possible alliance this fall. The resolution was referred to the executive committee.

At an earlier meeting of the Republican Congressional Campaign Committee, Representative Joseph W. Martin, of Massachusetts, chairman, said a recent survey of the national political situation indicated the Republicans would gain 76 seats in the House next fall.

Tammany Plans To Back All of Its Bloc in Congress

New York, July 8 (AP).—Tammany Hall will support its entire delegation in the House of Representatives for renomination, with the exception of Representative John J. Boylan, who is retiring because of ill health, it was announced today.

Michael J. Kennedy, Tammany leader of the Fifth Assembly District middle, and the youngest district leader in Tammany Hall, was unanimously chosen for Boylan's seat.

Representative John J. O'Connor, chairman of the House Rules Committee, expressed complete confidence in his renomination and reelection. The American Labor Party has announced it will fight to unseat O'Connor because he opposed some New Deal legislation.

Two Spy Suspects' Wives Questioned

Special Dispatch to The Post.

New York, July 8.—Mrs. Werner George Gudenberg and Mrs. Ignatz T. Griebl, wives of fugitive defendants in the German spy case, were questioned in the United States courthouse today by Lester C. Dunnigan, assistant United States attorney in charge of the investigation.

Mrs. Griebl has been at liberty as a material witness on $5,000 bond. Mrs. Gudenberg had not previously been interrogated in the case. The grand jury which on June 20 indicted 18 alleged German spies, will reconvene Tuesday.

D. C. Vice Squad Destroys 6,059 Quarts of Liquor

The Metropolitan Police sadly announced yesterday that they had been forced to dispose of 6,059 quarts of spirits in the fiscal year ended July 1. The vice and liquor squad reported they had seized and destroyed 5,976 quarts of whisky, 52 quarts of gin, and 31 of wine.

The report added that 1,810 bottles of beer were confiscated and poured out, six stills seized, and 2,507 gallons of mash destroyed. All liquor is thrown away, but 1,800 pounds of sugar, seized by squad raids, has been distributed to hospitals and charities.

A total of 1,324 arrests was made by the squad, headed by Capt. George M. Little, an increase of nearly 300 over the previous fiscal year. Most of them were for selling liquor without a license, keeping liquor for sale, and operating a lottery.

56 Projects Approved.

A list of 56 newly approved Public Works projects was made public by Secretary of the Interior Ickes in connection with his announcement of the current total of the 1938 works program. All but two represented new applications from 19 States and Hawaii, involving construction costs of $11,362,170. Forty-five per cent of this amount, or $5,112,972, will be PWA grants, the balance being supplied by the applicants.

Simultaneously, Nathan Straus, United States Housing Authority Administrator, closed a contract with the city of Detroit for a Federal loan of $14,257,000 for the construction of three low-rent housing projects to cost $15,841,000.

Police Seize 80 In C. I. O. Threat At New Orleans

New Orleans, July 8 (AP).—New Orleans police answered threats of C. I. O. violence against raiding officers today by arresting 80 or more persons at labor headquarters.

After 70 persons were taken in a raid yesterday, Matthew Braniff, C. I. O. counsel, advised his clients to bar meeting-house doors and resist with "force of arms" police who did not have search warrants.

George Reyer, police superintendent, led the raid late today on C. I. O. headquarters as workers distributed pamphlets attacking public officials.

Civil District Court Judge Frank T. Echezabal refused today to order the arrest of four detectives on charges they kidnaped, beat and drove from town a C. I. O. organizer.

Girl, 17, Convicts Two of Abortion

On the testimony of a 17-year-old girl, Edna Gray, colored, and Jeff Henry, a former policeman, received sentences in District Court yesterday on charges of abortion.

Henry was charged with aiding and abetting, and the other defendant pleaded guilty. Henry was sentenced to from one to two years and placed on probation. The woman was sentenced to from one to two and a half years.

Broken Leg Will Keep D. C. Banker in Florida

Edwin C. Graham, president of the Hamilton National Bank, who suffered a fractured leg in an automobile accident in Florida, will remain in a hospital "indefinitely," members of his family said he told them last night.

He left Washington early this week. It was understood he was standing in front of his automobile while repairs were being made and the machine unexpectedly was started.

ended June 3 last, as compared with 13,000 for the previous year. He repeated what Myron C. Taylor, chief of the American delegation, had already told the conference, that the American Government was prepared to admit some 27,000 emigrants from Greater Germany in the coming year, by combining the quotas of the old Reich and Austria.

A dismal picture of the persecutions that Catholics are subjected to in Nazi Germany was drawn by the German priest who appeared before the sub-committee this afternoon. He cited as causes which are inducing an ever-increasing number of Catholics to leave the fatherland, the suppression of Catholic associations, Catholic newspapers and Catholic trade unions.

Nonobservance of the concordat has resulted in closing of hundreds of Catholic schools kept by religious orders. He estimated, on the basis of information supplied by Catholic relief organizations, that already more than 10,000 Catholics have fled Germany and are dependent on the charity of their coreligionists for their bare subsistance.

The German priest urged the conference to try to prevail upon the Nazi government to refrain from other acts of persecution against Catholics. He also said that as funds of the Catholic relief societies are very limited, the conference should request the German government to allow exiles to take out a part of their property or, failing this, the governments represented at Evian should establish a fund from which advances could be made for approved schemes of training, transport and settlement.

A demand the conference intervene with the German government in an effort to persuade Berlin to let Jewish refugees take at least part of their goods into exile, was also put forward by Dr. Nahum Goldman on behalf of the World Jewish Conference.

Copyright, 1938, New York Tribune Inc.

Evian-Les-Bains, France, July 8 (AP).—The United States and Great Britain were understood today to have reached a tentative agreement regarding a permanent international committee to assist refugees from greater Germany.

The Anglo-American plan, it was said in well informed quarters at the 32-Nation Intergovernmental Refugee Conference in session here, would provide:

That the headquarters of the organization would be in London instead of Paris, as first suggested.

That it remain free of close affiliation with existing refugee groups organized under auspices of the League of Nations.

For an American head, providing Washington's permission could be obtained.

The United States, Great Britain, France, Argentina and Brazil, would be represented on the permanent committee.

Possibility of creating branch offices in various European capitals also was under consideration, especially in those where the refugee problem is serious or likely to become so.

Approval of the Anglo-American plan by the Intergovernmental Conference, which was called by President Roosevelt, would pave the way for possible negotiations with Germany to hasten and systematize emigration of German and Austrian Jews, it was said.

Japanese Warn Powers to Quit Yangtze Zone

Japan

squadrons of heavy bombers and lighter planes attacked Japanese airfields at Anking and Wuhu and the warships.

They reported 17 enemy planes destroyed on the ground at Anking and considerable damage to the Wuhu air base as results of the day's work.

Despite squally weather all Chinese raiders returned safely to their bases, headquarters said.

(Japanese naval officers at Shanghai said one Chinese bomber was shot down in the attack on the warships at Anking. They mentioned no damage to their fleet.)

A fleet of fully 200 Soviet Russian warplanes for China was reported by a reliable source at Hongkong to be in the process of delivery for service in the Chinese-Japanese war.

This source asserted some of the aircraft already had been flown to Hankow, while others were being assembled and tested at points in eastern Turkestan, near the western border of Mongolia.

Included in the 200 aircraft, it was said, were 11 four-engined superbombers of the latest type, capable of extremely long-range operations and equipped with what were called "fearsome" destructive weapons.

Invaders Face Floods.

Shanghai (Saturday), July 9 (U.P.). Gen. Shunroku Hata threw 25,000 fresh Japanese infantrymen into his offensive against Hankow today in a frantic effort to occupy China's provisional national capital before floods of the Yangtze River reach their crest and swamp his offensive.

The United Press correspondent at Chunking, 750 miles west of Hankow, reported the Yangtse had been rising there at the rate of a foot an hour for the last 24 hours and flood conditions should prevail in Hankow within a fortnight.

It was reported again the Chinese in Hankow were prepared to cut the Yangtse dikes below that city, as they did the Yellow River dikes in the Japanese offensive last month in the Lunghai Railway area, to drown their foes.

50 Americans in Peril.

The Japanese were attacking vigorously an all fronts, however, and still believed they would be in Hankow before the end of this month.

Foochow, big South China port and chief city of Fukien Province, was bombed for two hours yesterday by 28 Japanese naval planes. More than 50 Americans in and around the city were endangered. Twenty-two bombs fell in a densely populated industrial area where 50 houses, a primary school, the building of the newspaper Hansang Jih Pao and several factories were wrecked. Chinese estimated the casualties at 250.

A special train carrying German advisers to the Chinese army reached Hong Kong at noon yesterday from Hankow, 24 hours late because of damage to the railway by Japanese bombing planes. Gen. Alexander von Falkenhausen refused to talk to newspapermen and threatened to call police when Japanese correspondents persisted in their efforts to question him. The Germans will sail for home immediately, it was said.

U. S. Officer's Body Aboard.

A special coach attached to the train carried the body of Commander F. H. Gilmer, U. S. N. who shot and killed himself at Ichang, June 27. The casket was escorted by a naval petty officer who turned it over to American authorities here for shipment to the United States.

Shanghai was quiet following Thursday's terrorist bombings by Chinese guerillas and a quarrel between Japanese and authorities of the Anglo-American area of the International Settlement had been settled.

The Japanese consulate general yesterday filed a formal protest with the Settlement's municipal council for its failure adequately to protect Japanese nationals, several of whom were killed in Thursday's disorders, and council replied with a counter-protest against invasions of the Anglo-American area by Japanese soldiers and gendarmes.

Marshal Chang in Hunan.

Hankow, July 8.—Marshal Chang Hsueh-liang, former Manchurian warlord who was deprived of his military rank because of his participation in the coup at Sian in December, 1936, which resulted in the kidnaping of Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek, now is living in retirement at Yuananling, a town in western Hunan Province, it was learned today.

Scene of Trouble in Holy Land

This map shows the scene of the latest Arab-Jewish trouble in Palestine, the worst since 1936. England, attempting to govern by mandate, yesterday had the battleship Repulse at Haifa, with thousands of soldiers attempting to quell riots that have taken more than 30 lives in two days. Eyes are turned anxiously toward the Transjordan border, where Arab tribes are reported massing. Inset map shows Jerusalem, scene of a new terror outbreak.

Widow Who Poisoned Eleven Is Given Death in Belgium

By the Associated Press.

Liege, Belgium, July 8.—Slim, 58-year-old Maria Petitjean Beckers—"the Widow Beckers of Liege"—was convicted today and sentenced to death for 11 poison murders in Belgium's most bizarre criminal case of modern times.

The death sentence was symbolical, however, since capital punishment no longer is carried out in Belgium. The penalty will be commuted to life imprisonment.

Screams of "Kill her" went up from a crowd outside the courthouse when the jury, which heard a month of testimony, filed in to announce its verdict after five hours of deliberation.

The beady-eyed, grim-jawed widow, whose final statement to the jury was a passionately shouted declaration "I am innocent," lost the icy reserve she had maintained during the long hearing and burst into a fit of hysterical weeping.

"Do you feel remorseful?" the president of the court asked. She gave no answer.

The defense pictured her as a victim of "coincidence." Her counsel declared most of the 11 persons she was accused of poisoning died poor and robbery was not the object. She made friends with elderly persons in public parks, then poisoned them after stealing or borrowing their money.

Besides the deaths for which she was convicted, police charged her with attempting to kill three other persons. Additional charges against her included one that she forged a will and committed four thefts of securities, jewels and money.

The trail of murders laid to the woman started back in 1932 when Charles Beckers, her husband, developed a fatal stomach ache. The widow said he died of "indigestion." Her other victims were a man and nine women.

Franco Seizes Nules, 28 Miles From Valencia

2d Column Looks Down on Segorbo; Loyalists Plan for Siege.

By the Associated Press.

Hendaye, France, July 8.—A two-pronged insurgent drive near the eastern Spanish coast pressed heavily tonight against government defenders of Valencia, who were ranged through jagged rocks of two mountain ranges.

Dispatches from insurgent-held Zaragoza announced Galician troops under Gen. Miguel Aranda captured Nules, on the seaboard highway which leads 28 miles from there through Sagunto to Valencia.

The government's national defense ministry issued a communique in Barcelona that government forces had abandoned the walled town and had taken up new positions to the south on the road to Sagunto.

Farther west, troops commanded by Gen. Garcia Valino were reported to have reached heights in the Sierra de Espadan from where they could see the towers of Segorbe, 8 miles away.

Segorbe, 26 miles north by west of Valencia, is on the Teruel-Mediterranean highway which joins at Sagunto the seaboard road down which Gen. Aranda's main force was moving.

Government advices said warplanes and artillery again proved to be the best weapons of the insurgents.

The government concentrated on strengthening fortifications before Valencia and Sagunto, implying that it was resigned in view of weakness in planes and guns to standing sieges against these cities.

Strawbridge Boys' Home Head to Fill in for Dr. Burgan.

The Rev. F. Reid Isaac, superintendent of Strawbridge Home for Boys, will be guest preacher at Hamline Methodist Church tomorrow at 11 a. m.

During the minister's vacation the pulpit will be occupied July 17 by Dr. Chesteen Smith, former pastor, and July 24 and 31 by Dr. Lucius C. Clark, former chancellor of the American University, and former pastor of Hamline Church. Dr. Burgan will return August 5.

Chevy Chase. The Rev. Edward G. Latch, minister, will have "Doers of the Word" as his subect at the 11 a. m. service.

At 7 p. m. Mr. Latch will be the speaker at the Chevy Chase Union Protestant vesper service on the lawn of All Saints' Episcopal Church. His subect will be "Making God Real."

Lincoln Road. Beginning a series of sermons on gospel themes at 11 a. m., the Rev. Reginald Heber Stone will speak on the topic, "The Way to God, or Is There a Way?" At 8 p. m. his theme will be "Out and In."

Union. "Modern Substitutes for Christian Living" is the subject of Dr. John R. Edwards, pastor, for the 11 o'clock service. At 8 p. m. the message will be a review of "Out of Aldersgate," by W. T. Watkins.

The regular schedule of Sunday morning and evening services will be conducted in this church through the summer months. The pastor expects to be in his pulpit except on the last two Sudays in August and the first Sunday in September, when the Rev. Robert S. Barnes will supply.

Ryland. Dr. G. Ellis Williams, superintendent of the Washington district of the Methodist Episcopal Church, will be guest preacher at open-air vespers held on the site of the new Ryland Church at 6:50 p. m.

At the 11 a. m. service in Ryland Church, the Rev. K. G. Newell will speak on "Not by Bread Alone."

Metropolitan Memorial. During the July absence of the pastor, the Rev. William Andrew Keese, who is vacationing with his family in Maine, the pulpit will be occupied by the Rev. Aubert Bain Potorf, Td. D., D. D., professor of religion at American University. Dr. Potorf's sermon will be on "The Righteousness Which Exceeds."

McKendree. "The Insufficient Life" will be the topic of the Rev. Samuel E. Rose at morning worship in the Masonic Hall at Rhode Island and Mills avenues northeast. At evening worship in the same hall his sermon will be on "Noble Motives."

Wesley. The Rev. J. Luther Neff, pastor, will speak at the 11 a. m. service on "The Voice of the Desert," fourth in a group of sermons on "Voices of the Great Creator."

Calvary. The Rev. Orris Gravenor Robinson will officiate and preach at morning service tomorrow. The men's class will conduct services at Central Union Mission Monday at 8 p. m.

Trinity. "God's Good Pleasure" will be the subject of Dr. Dan L. Ennis at the 11 a. m. service. At 8 p. m. he will discuss "Wrestling With Angels."

Dumbarton Avenue. The Rev. Walter Franklin Atkinson will preach at the morning service on "Elijah." Sunday evening services and Thursday evening prayer meetings have been discontinued for the summer months.

First Methodist Protestant. "Danger to His People" will be the fourth message in a series being given by the Rev. A. F. T. Raum at the morning services on "What the Master Saw." At the 8 p. m. hour Mr. Raum will discuss "Wrecks."

Dr. Stokes to Give Series of Sermons At the Cathedral

The Rev. Anson Phelps, D. D., LL. D., for years secretary of Yale University, who will be Canon in Residence at Washington Cathedral for the next five weeks, will deliver a special series of sermons on "Some Aspects of Christ" at evensong services on Sunday afternoons, beginning tomorrow at 4:30 p. m. His theme tomorrow will be "Jesus Christ as a Teacher."

Evensong service will last only one hour, including the sermon and musical offerings by the cathedral choir of men and boys, under direction of Robert G. Barrow.

Preacher at morning prayer at 11 will be Canon Edward Slater Dunlap.

Christian Science Topic 'Sacrament'

"Sacrament" is the subject of the lesson-sermon in all the Churches of Christ Scientist tomorrow. The Golden Text is from I Corinthians 5:8, "Let us keep the feast, not with old leaven, neither with the leaven of malice and wickedness; but with the unleavened bread of sincerity and truth."

Among the citations which comprise the lesson-sermon is the following from the Bible: "Create in me a clean heart, O God; and renew a right spirit within me. Restore unto me the joy of Thy salvation; and uphold me with Thy free spirit" (Psalms 51:10,12).

The lesson-sermon also includes the following passage from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health With Key to the Scriptures," by Mary Baker Eddy: "The baptism of Spirit, washing the body of all the impurities of flesh, signifies that the pure in heart see God and are approaching spiritual life and its demonstration" (page 241).

Dr. Daugherty to Speak On 'Most Tragic Word'

Identical services will be held at 8:30 and 11 a. m. tomorrow at Memorial United Brethren Church, with the minister, Dr. Simpson B. Daugherty, preaching at both periods on "The Most Tragic Word."

Six Wandering Children of Missionaries Here Will Entertain at Four Churches Tomorrow

These children of missionaries, from South Africa and South America, touring America before going to their foreign posts, are, in conventional order: Billy Parker, Linnell Davis, Howard Powlison, Mrs. Linnell Davis, Marjorie Trout and Miss Betty Hope.

Six itinerant entertainers from the Westervelt Homes for Missionaries' Children in Batesburg, S. C., who have been conducting programs here since Thursday, will visit the Calvary Baptist Church, Eighth and H streets northwest, Sunday at 9:30 a. m.

In the group are Howard Powlinson, from Bolivia; Linnell Davis, of Kenya Colony, East Africa; Billy Parker, of Korea; Mrs. Linnell Davis, of Venezuela; Marjorie Trout, from the Belgian Congo, and Betty Hope, of Cameroons, in West Africa.

They will participate in the 11 a. m. service at the Wisconsin Avenue Baptist Church and the program at 7:45 p. m. at the New York Avenue Presbyterian Church, and will sponsor a final service at the Fountain Memorial Baptist Church, Naylor road and U streets northeast, at 8 p. m. Five youth groups from Randall Highlands churches will cooperate.

Attending high school and college in the United States, preparatory to pursuing their parents' vocations, they have been making a tour of young people's societies in Pennsylvania, New York and New Jersey. Their entertainment includes instrumental music, speaking types of jungle language, and a display of curios and customs of foreign lands.

The group is headed by the Davises, young newlyweds who are sailing for Kenya Colony, East Africa, this fall. Davis, son of the surgeon in charge of the Theodore Roosevelt Hospital at Kijabe, in Kenya Colony, met his bride at the Westervelt Homes, where he completed secondary school. He was graduated from Columbia Bible College and the University of South Carolina. Mrs. Davis, formerly Martha Eddings, was born and brought up in Venezuela, where her father still heads a mission.

Bishop Peele Will Preach at Emory Church

Makes First Appearance Here Since Elevation to Episcopacy.

Bishop W. W. Peele, presiding Bishop of the Baltimore Conference, will make his first appearance in Washington at Emory Methodist Church South tomorrow at 8 p. m.

Bishop Peele was elevated to the episcopacy at the session of the general conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church South, which met in Birmingham, Ala., in May. He was appointed by the College of Bishops to succeed Bishop Arthur W. Moore in the first episcopal area, which includes the Baltimore, Virginia and the West Virginia conferences.

Dr. Peele has established his episcopal residence in Richmond.

The unit morning services opens at 10 a. m. with the church school, continues with the church worship at 10:45 a. m. and concludes at 11:30 a. m. The Rev. Horace E. Cromer has chosen as his subject for this service, "Another Mandate."

Calvary. The Rev. W. D. Keene will preach at the 11 o'clock service on "The Spirit of Fear." At the service at 8 p. m. the Rev. E. C. Beery, D.D., will preach, and after the preaching service the fourth quarterly conference will be held.

Francis Asbury. The pastor, the Rev. Albert P. Shirkey, will be out of the city tomorrow at the young people's conference at Massanetta Springs, Va.

In his absence the Rev. John L. Mixon, director of the department of social welfare of the Washington Federation of Churches, will preach at both services. Mr. Mixon is a graduate of the University of Chicago, Chicago Theological Seminary, and holds an M. A. degree in social service administration from the University of Chicago. He was for three years a social worker in that city and for another three years missionary to the Indians.

Mount Vernon Place. Dr. John W. Rustin is attending the eighteenth annual conference for ministers at Union Theological Seminary in New York City from July 5 to 15. Dr. Edgar C. Beery, presiding elder of the Washington district, will preach at the morning service on "God Compelling Power." The Rev. Mr. Richard Buckingham, director of youth work at the Hempstead Methodist Episcopal Church, Hempstead, Long Island, will preach on "Bridge Building" at the evening service.

Protestants Foster Unity In Rites Here

Union religious services, now at the peak of summer activity around Washington, reflect that dream of millions—Protestant unity. These community gatherings, powerful factors in breaking down denominational and doctrinal barriers, bring hundreds of local churchmen into closer harmony.

Typical in Washington is the series sponsored by the Baptist and Wallace Memorial Presbyterian churches of the Petworth area, which with the co-operation of the Petworth Methodists, launched a united program 12 years ago.

Located in the then rapidly-developing neighborhood of New Hampshire avenue and Randolph streets northwest, they were among the first congregations in the District to realize the value of pooling their membership resoures during the summer lull. Now, while the Methodists have affiliated with other groups in summer union services, they support the Wallace sponsored daily vacation Bible School.

Pioneers in suburban union services were the congregations of Chevy Chase, who launched an outdoor program in 1928, with Chevy Chase Baptist, All-Saints' Episcopal, Chevy Chase Methodist, Wesley Methodist and Chevy Chase Presbyterian churches worshiping together on the lawn of the latter church.

Five years later, in 1933, parishioners of St. Paul's Lutheran Church, Dr. Henry W. Snyder, pastor, moved from Washington into a new edifice in Chevy Chase, and joined the services, which are now held on the grounds of All Saints' Episcopal Church, at the circle. The Rev. G. F. Latch speaks there at 7 p. m. tomorrow.

The Rev. Edward O. Clarke, pastor of the Baptist Church; the Rev. J. Hillman Hollister, Presbyterian clergyman, and the Rev. Henry Teller Cocke, All Saints' minister, all of whom have records of over 12 years of service at their present posts, helped to found the movement in the Chevy Chase region.

Three other religious bodies—Mount Pleasant Congregational, All-Souls' Unitarian and Universalist National Memorial churches—have been holding indoor union services every Sunday morning during June, July and August for ten years. Dr. Frederic W. Perkins, Dr. Moses R. Lovell, former Mount Pleasant pastor, and Dr. Ulysses G. B. Pierce, dean of local ministers, inaugurated the series.

Dr. Harry Ice Again National City Preacher

Will Speak Tomorrow on 'Jesus, the Way' in the Morning.

Dr. Harry Ice will be the speaker at the morning service of the National City Christian Church tomorrow. He has chosen as his subject, "Jesus, the Way."

Columbia Heights. The Rev. A. P. Wilson will take as his morning topic "No Other Gods," the first of a series of summer sermons on "New Testament Applications of the Ten Commandments." There will be no evening services during July and August.

Ninth Street. The Rev. W. G. Oram, assistant pastor, will preach at 10:30 a. m. at the worship and Communion hour on "Life's Mystery Revealed in Christ." The pastor, the Rev. Clifford H. Jope, is at Bethany Beach, Del., as one of the faculty members of the young people's conference being held there.

Fifteenth Street. "On the Other Side" will be the topic of the Rev. Leslie L. Bowers' sermon at the 10:30 a. m. service.

Class to See Cathedral.

Members of Miss Alice Hutchins Drake's class on "Books and Their Makers," from the Young Women's Christian Association, will make a pilgrimage to the Cathedral at 9:30 a. m. tomorrow to study the carvings on the Canterbury pulpit, which tells the story of how the Bible was handed down to the people in the English language.

Rally Day Set At Chevy Chase Baptist Church

Dr. Rufus W. Weaver Will Be Guest Speaker at 11 A. M. Tomorrow.

Midsummer rally day will be observed in Chevy Chase Baptist Church tomorrow at the 11 a. m. service. Dr. Rufus W. Weaver, executive secretary of the Baptist convention of the District, will be guest preacher.

At the 9 o'clock service the Rev. Edward O. Clark will give a brief message on "A Personal Faith." All charter members of the church are requested to attend as guests of honor at the 11 o'clock service. At the union vesper service, in which the church co-operates, the Rev. Edward C. Latch will preach at 7 o'clock.

Takoma Park. The Rev. William E. La Rue will have for his sermon subject in the morning "The Middle Ground."

Calvary. The Rev. Frank E. Johnston, jr., minister's assistant, will occupy the pulpit in the absence of the minister, the Rev. W. S. Abernethy, who has left the city for his summer vacation. Mr. Johnston's topic for the morning service will be "How Shall We Serve?" and for the evening, "Saint or Sinner?" He will be assisted at the latter service by Miss Louise McKibben and Lester Hurt.

First. "The Comforting Companionship" will be the sermon subject of Dr. Edward Hughes Pruden in the morning, continuing his series on "The Shepherd Psalm." In the evening he will speak on "Must One Be a Genius to Succeed?"

West Washington. The Rev. Charles B. Austin, pastor, will preach at 11 a. m. on "A Rainbow for Every Cloud." At 8 p. m. his subject will be "The Man Who Had an Experience That Is Worth Hearing About."

Fifth. Dr. John E. Briggs, pastor, will preach at the 11 a. m. service on the subject, "For Such a Time as This" and at 7:45 p. m. on "Two Men Who Went Away."

Metropolitan. In the absence of the pastor, Dr. John Compton Ball, who is now at his summer vacation home, Lake Mohonk, N. Y., Dr. James Shera Montgomery, chaplain of the House of Representatives, will occupy the pulpit at both services. His morning message will be on "The Creed of Jesus." In the evening he will speak on "The Supreme Quest."

First, Hyattsville. Dr. B. P. Robertson, pastor, will discuss the scripture, "Our God is able to supply all your need" at the 11 a. m. service. At 8 p. m. he will speak on "He is able to completely save those who come unto God through Him."

Union Will Hear Dr. E. M. Baker at All Souls' Church

Dr. Everett M. Baker, executive vice president of the American Unitarian Association, will be the preacher at the union service in All Souls' Church (Unitarian) tomorrow at 11 a. m. He will take for his subject "Religious Fundamentals of Democracy."

Dr. Baker, who has just celebrated the tenth anniversary of his graduation from Harvard Divinity School, received his honorary doctorate from Tufts College at its recent commencement.

Mount Pleasant Congregational Church and the Universalist National Memorial Church are cooperating in this service.

News of Youth in D.C. Churches

(Churches in Washington and throughout America are realizing more and more the value of strengthening religion in youth, of training and inspiring youth to be worthwhile churchmen, as adults. This column will try to reflect the process and results of this training.)

A small, informal reception will be given by a group of young people of Sherwood Presbyterian Church to honor the Rev. Thomas Law Coyle and his bride, at the home of Dr. and Mrs. Thomas E. Mattingly, tomorrow following the 11 a. m. service at the church. This is a young people's prelude to the general reception for the couple, Thursday at 8 p. m. at the church.

• • • •

The Lutheran Gospel Male Quartette, from the Lutheran Bible School of Fergus Falls, Minn., will present a program of chorals and duets with instrumental accompaniment Tuesday at 8 p. m. at Luther Place Memorial Church. These singers have traveled together for three years, touring Europe as well as the Pacific, North Central and Eastern States.

The Intermediate Luther League and the Young People's Fellowship are also busy at Luther Place, the former leaving the church at 5 p. m. Thursday for a boat ride on the Potomac, the latter leaving at 3 p. m. next Saturday for a steak fry at a Boy Scout camp up the Potomac.

• • • •

Members of the choir of St. Mark's Episcopal Church left this week for three weeks at Camp de Offo, near Point Lookout, Md. This camp has been maintained for St. Mark's Choir boys for 40 years, under the direction of Henry P. Blair, Washington attorney, who founded it.

• • • •

"Discovering Beauty in Nature" will be the topic of Glenn Mann, of the Forum Christian Endeavor of Ninth Street Christian Church, who will lead evening worship tomorrow. All summer evening services in this church are in charge of the young people.

• • • •

An open-air meeting, followed by a picnic supper, will be held by the Christian Endeavor Society of Fifteenth Street Christian Church tomorrow at 5 p. m. in Fort Dupont Park.

• • • •

The annual picnic of the Dumbarton Avenue Sunday School will be held next Saturday at Miller's Cabin, in Rock Creek Park.

• • • •

Also picnicking near Miller's Cabin, but on Tuesday, will be the Young People's Department of Calvary Methodist Church. The group will leave the church at 5 p. m.

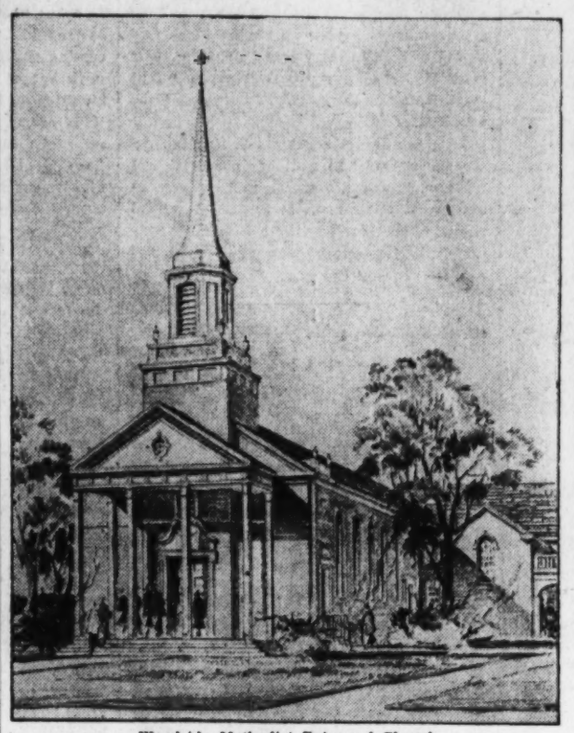
Ground-Breaking Set Tomorrow At Woodside Methodist Church



Woodside Methodist Episcopal Church.

New Sanctuary to Seat 500, Basement 350 for Church School; Dr. Williams, Walter Bastian, R. M. Heizer to Be at Ceremony.

The Woodside Methodist Episcopal Church, located in Silver Spring, Md., will break ground for its new sanctuary tomorrow at 6:30 p. m.

Dr. G. Ellis Williams, superintendent of the Washington District; Walter Bastian, president of the Methodist Union; Roy M. Heizer, president emeritus of the board of trustees, and Garland W. Wolfe, president of the board of trustees, will bring greetings. Ministers of the community, the three choirs of the church, and a band concert of sacred music will be a part of the program.

The Woodside Methodist Church has been in the community since 1872. In 1922, Dr. Ralph Dela Smith, was assigned to the parish. In 1926 a new church school was built. This unit houses a church school with an enrollment of 810. Since 1922 church membership has grown from 40 to 800. The church school has grown from 150 to 810.

Dr. Smith is a graduate of Syracuse University, Drew University and holds the master of arts and doctor of philosophy degrees from the American University.

The new sanctuary will seat a congregation of 500. The basement will care for 350 in church school work. It contains a kitchenette, a choir room and a boys' club room. There is also a pastor's study and a treasurer's office.

The new church school unit will house a nursery on the lower floor to take care of 50 and 50 young people on the upper floor. Present kitchen equipment will also be modernized.

'Moral Courage' To Be Topic at Reformation

Young People of Church Arrange Program for Evening.

"How to Develop Moral Courage" is the subject of the sermon to be preached tomorrow at the 11 a. m. service by Dr. Oscar F. Blackweller, pastor of the Lutheran Church of the Reformation.

At the 8 a. m. matin service the Rev. W. Loew, assistant pastor, will use as his theme, "The Leadership of the Blind."

Instead of its regular evening service, a program has been arranged by the young people's groups of the church at 7 p. m. in the parish hall. Mr. Loew will address the group on "Understanding the Code Language of Symbolism," and will conduct a tour through the church explaining various symbols.

Luther Place. "What Do We Expect of Jesus?" will be discussed by the Rev. Reginald W. Deitz, assistant pastor, at the 11 a. m. service.

Dr. Carl C. Rasmussen, pastor, and president of the Maryland Synod of the United Lutheran Church, is studying at Columbia University until the latter part of July, when he will leave to attend the Northfield, Mass., summer conference. Dr. William S. Abernethy, Calvary Baptist pastor, and Dr. Joseph R. Sizoo, formerly of the New York Avenue Presbyterian Church, will speak there.

Georgetown. "The King's Cup-Bearer" will be the subject at 11 a. m. of the Rev. Harold E. Beatty, pastor. Holy Communion will be administered. There will be also an appropriate ceremony in recognition of the payment of the church debt.

St. Paul's. The pastor, Dr. Henry W. Snyder, will use as his morning sermon theme "Will the Account Balance?" This church will participate in a union service on the lawn of All Saints' Episcopal Church, Chevy Chase circle, at 7 p. m.

St. Mark's. The Rev. J. Luther Frantz has as his subject for the 11 a. m. service, "The Promised Blessing."

Christ. The Rev. W. H. Eiferth, of Indiana, will preach at the morning service.

Mr. Borchers to Speak At First Congregational

The Rev. Walter G. Borchers, jr., assistant minister of the First Congregational Church, will preach tomorrow at 11 a. m. on "The Friendship Transforming."

Al Smith On Gambling.

Appearing before New York's Constitutional Convention to urge repeal of the constitutional ban on gambling, former Gov. Alfred E. Smith delivered one of those characteristically humorous and homely but sound and informed addresses which reveal his keen insight into governmental administrative problems. His intimate knowledge of the conditions essential to effective enforcement of the laws gives great weight to his views. Moreover, the issue presented by regulation of gambling is not a partisan matter. So Mr. Smith was able to speak with the political detachment and intellectual vigor that his subject warrants.

There is need for plain speaking on a subject that arouses passions and prejudices which tend to confuse the real issues. Just as ardent prohibitionists used to assume that advocates of repeal were foes of temperance, so those who plead for relaxation of absurd, unenforceable prohibitions of all chance-taking are likely to be denounced as friends of gambling. Mr. Smith makes it plain that he does not wish to see gambling legalized. What he desires is a new kind of sumptuary legislation that will be directed exclusively against antisocial forms of gambling condemned by public opinion.

The problem which New York faces in dealing with gambling is not confined to that State or limited to any particular kind of activity. Difficulties arise whenever the basic law which should lay down broad principles is "cluttered up" by the insertion of rigid prohibitions depriving legislatures of needed discretionary power to adapt regulatory laws to changing conditions. Sumptuary laws making misdemeanors and crimes of acts which public opinion does not condemn simply cannot be enforced. The attempt to achieve a too ambitious goal is likely to result in failure to suppress even admittedly bad practices. That was our experience under the Eighteenth Amendment and the supporting Volstead act. It has been the experience of New York under the drastic constitutional prohibition of gambling.

Despite the ban imposed by New York's constitution upon every kind of chance-taking, even the innocent church raffle, commercialized gambling in its worst forms flourishes in that State. The patent absurdity of trying to enforce such sweeping prohibitions undoubtedly results in a relaxation of efforts all along the line.

The remedy for this situation lies not in abolition of all restraints upon gambling but, as Mr. Smith suggests, in a sensible statutory definition of what constitutes gambling—a definition that public sentiment indorses and is prepared to support. Under present conditions, he told the Constitutional Convention, "you have a constitutional provision, you have a body of statute law, and not a bit of works."

40 Instead Of 55.

Washington's instinct for self-preservation is proving to be substantially more effective this year than last. At least that is the interpretation experts place on the announcement that highway fatalities in the Capital during the past six months decreased 27.3 per cent in comparison with the 1937 record. Injuries showed a commensurate drop, further sustaining the belief that pedestrians as well as autoists are learning to control their movements on the streets more carefully.

For this improvement both Traffic Director Van Duzer and Lieut. Holmes; police traffic supervisor, credit the press and the radio, which have been making strenuous efforts recently to educate the public in safety habits. Whether or not this is the whole explanation, only 40 instead of last year's 55 persons have lost their lives in traffic thus far in 1938. This is encouraging particularly because it is a figure not equaled since 1933, when there were fewer cars on Washington's streets.

But the toll is not yet low enough to warrant any let-down in the drive against highway accidents. Rather, it raises the question of how far education may be expected to succeed in protecting man against the machines he builds. Presumably safety education can accomplish far more than has been done, but it certainly can not be expected to eliminate the entire risk from modern traffic. Engineering must also be called into play—even more so than it has been to date.

In this connection it is interesting to learn that Henry Ford has obtained a patent on a rear-engined automobile. Doubtless increased mechanical efficiency was uppermost in his mind when conceiving the new design. But it is fair to suppose that the greater care in driving to be promoted by it was also a consideration. With autoists removed from behind an engine block and seated instead in the very forefront of their vehicles where any slightest crash might instantly affect them, safer driving could be expected.

Whether or not accidents in this type of car would result in a higher percentage of injuries, however, remains to be seen. In any event, the success or failure of radical new designs is likely to be influenced by their relative safety even more than has been the case in the past.

A Strange Parallel.

President Roosevelt has a truly remarkable facility for the discovery of parallels between historic events and his own Administration. On many occasions he has compared his achievements with those of Jackson, Jefferson and other renowned Presidents. In his recent "fireside chat" he pictured himself resisting the subtle attacks of Copperheads, as did Lincoln. At Marietta yesterday he found a parallel between the New Deal and the pioneers who migrated westward 150 years ago.

In drawing these analogies the President sometimes makes telling points. When he attempts to compare the migration across the Appalachians into the frontier wilderness of 1788 with the present struggle for security, however, the differences quickly overshadow any strained similarities. It was these pioneers, their followers and descendants, who developed the American tradition of individualism. It was their independence and in some respects distrust of Washington which maintained the relative strength of the States through a long period of American history.

The essence of the pioneer spirit is self-reliance under the most difficult circumstances. In spite of the great changes that have come over the country, this attitude is still intimately associated with the security which individuals attain for themselves. One great mistake of the New Deal is that, in seeking to relieve distressed groups from the vicissitudes of depression, it has made so little effort to keep alive that sense of initiative which made development of this country possible.

As a result, the great struggle today is not so much to overcome obstacles in the path of progress as to obtain largess from the Government. The yearning for social security may be the same. But the emphasis upon means of attaining it is so radically changed that only the irony in the "parallel" drawn by the President stands out clearly.

What might have been the happiest note in the President's address at Marietta was off key because of the circumstances under which his tour is being made. In several different connections he referred to the American tradition of local self-government. The Government is not "a thing apart." It is not a "power over our people" but rather a "power of the people." "Let us never forget," the President said, "that government is ourselves and not an alien power over us. The ultimate rulers of our democracy are not a President and Senators and Congressmen and Government officials but the voters of this country."

But this admirable theory was expounded in the first of a series of speeches in which the President intends to tell members of the Democratic Party how they should vote in the coming primaries. Apparently the fact that the President is riding rough shod over his own fine sentiments has never occurred to him.

Mr. Roosevelt assigned himself the role of leader of a great "mental migration" toward the land of security. He is sure that the people will "push on" with him. But just in case they plan to send any "yes, but" Democrats to Congress he has undertaken a national tour in behalf of 100 per cent "yes" men. Of course, the President wants the people to choose their own representatives, without outside interference, providing only that they select friends of the New Deal.

The amazing aspect of the President's speech is his apparent assumption that this departure from the American brand of democracy can be obscured by a few fine words about political powers springing from the people.

Equal Justice?

After more than seven years of backing and filling, pulling and hauling, the State of Alabama has seen its way clear to spare the lives of all nine of the boys involved in the notorious Scottsboro case. Clarence Norris, only one of the defendants left facing the electric chair, has had his death sentence commuted to life imprisonment by Gov. Bibb Graves.

To have saved any of the accused has been a remarkable achievement in view of the locale and circumstances surrounding the provocative rape charge. Credit for this must be shared between the several militant organizations which undertook the Negroes' defense and the considerable segment of Southern opinion which, under the leadership of enlightened newspapers, ultimately came to demand justice in the case.

But the extraordinary affair cannot yet be considered satisfactorily closed. The discrepancies in the treatment meted out to the nine who were originally indicted are far too great to permit a complacent view to be taken. As noted, Norris now faces a life behind bars; another has the same prospect since his sentence calls for 99 years; two more are serving 75-year terms; a fifth is under a 20-year commitment; and four have been freed.

At the original trial all but one of the nine were convicted and sentenced to death. Now, as noted, four are free and five are serving jail terms of varying length. Excepting perhaps the 20-year sentence which grew out of an assault on a guard during an attempted escape, these extreme variations seems scarcely in keeping with the American ideal of "Equal Justice Under Law" proclaimed over the portals of our highest court.

Violence In Palestine.

Not the least disturbing aspect of the latest flare-up of violence in Palestine is the fact that inflamed passions have begun to infect the Arabs on the other side of the Jordan.

Reports tell of the infiltration into the Holy Land, despite measures to prevent it, of Transjordanian Arabs to help their fellow Arabs of Palestine in the struggle against the Jews and Great Britain. On Thursday, a pitched battle took place between British troops and a band of these Transjordan Arabs and on the following day a general strike broke out in the Transjordan town of Amman as a demonstration of sympathy for the Palestinian Arab cause.

Should this development spread the already serious difficulties which face Great Britain in Palestine would be very considerably multiplied and the military and naval reinforcements being rushed to that unhappy land might prove entirely inadequate to cope with the situation. For this reason alone strong action by the mandatory power is called for to restore law and order in the Holy Land.

Less now than ever can Great Britain afford to shirk the responsibilities which it assumed under the 1922 mandate or fall back upon a policy of evasion and delay in the hope that somehow the evil situation in Palestine may correct itself.

It was, indeed, precisely such an attempt by Great Britain to liquidate her responsibilities in Palestine which provides the immediate key to the present wave of violence. Just a year ago, without prior public debate and without consulting the wishes either of Jews or Arabs, the British government adopted as its own the Peel commission's recommendations for a tripartite partition of Palestine. The Holy Land, was to be divided into a tiny Jewish state, an Arab state united with Transjordania and a British mandate over the holy places and a corridor from Jerusalem to the sea.

This action was tantamount to an admission of failure by Great Britain. Even so the partition plan might have had certain constructive results had it been possible to put it quickly into effect. But this was not done. Months passed without action, the latest excuse being that it was necessary to await the findings of a technical commission sent to Palestine to report on practical problems of partition.

Palestine, therefore, has passed through 12 months of intense uncertainty which has fanned passions already at white heat. During this period of delay the original Arab attitude of hostility to the partition scheme has been considerably intensified. On the other hand, the Jews have resented the fact that at a time when the plight of their co-religionists in central Europe has become infinitely worse as a result of Germany's absorption of Austria, Jewish immigration into Palestine has been held down to narrow limits. But the very circumstance that this immigration has not been barred altogether has tended to infuriate the Arabs still further.

In retrospect, therefore, it seems that, however well intentioned the partition plan may have been, its announcement a year ago and the subsequent delay in putting it into force have made a bad situation worse. The future of Palestine looks more troubled than ever. But while a final solution is being worked out there is no alternative to determined action against lawless elements in that land. Such a course is not only in the interests of the people of Palestine, Jews and Arabs alike, but in the clear interests of Great Britain as well.

Colonies Of Crime.

From the San Francisco Chronicle.

The proposal of Sanford Bates, former director of Federal prisons, for a colony or colonies where felons may take their families and in exile live something approaching normal existence, has humanitarian appeal so far as the criminals are concerned, and possible benefits to the society to which prisoners now are returned after serving their terms.

There is, however, a question of public welfare involved in the matter of the families that would be taken into exile. The exiles who settled Siberia under the Czars were offenders who under our standards would not be considered criminals. Their influence on the rising generation did not make for thievery, murder and crime as we regard it.

An American penal colony might ameliorate the abnormal factors of prison life for the criminals, but what of the children?

Americans In Spain.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

"John America" has written, as a truly fine American, his interpretation of the International Brigade in Spain. Since I cannot see his method of reasoning to be in line with American ideals, and considering myself a pretty fair patriot I wish to offer another view.

"John America" would have us believe that the American boys who volunteered to fight for the loyalists went to kill for money, and therefore "are worse than murderers." Our history books do not depict as such, Lafayette, Kosciusko, and the many other great lovers of freedom, who crossed the Atlantic to help us resist oppressive England. Their aid was both physical and financial and played an important role in bolstering the courage of the Americans to rally their last bit of strength to victory. Never has America objected to that show of international assistance.

There were no enlistments of Americans at the outset of the Spanish war. Not until it was definitely established that the uprisings were conducted by the officers in the military forces, who were part and parcel of the aristocratic and land owning classes aided by the Moors, tens of thousands of Italian Black Shirts and German air squadrons, did the peace loving people throughout the world rush to the aid of loyalist Spain. The whole world knew that it wasn't Spaniard vs. Spaniard but fascism vs. democracy.

Of all nationalities, they came—Irish, English, Austrians, yes, even Germans and Italians. And then the Americans—students, teachers, artists, office workers, professional men, nurses, factory workers; from every walk of life they rallied. These people comprise the Washington-Lincoln battalions. Who can be unbiased enough to doubt their sincerity? "John America" calls them murderers and hero-seekers. It is to my regret that thousands of "John Americas" did not know personally those who have sacrificed their lives so that the world may enjoy democratic peace.

Let the solace of each mother of these boys be found in the knowledge that they gave birth to a force for the brotherhood and peace toward all men.

Applause For Green's Outlook.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

It is to be regretted that the focusing of public interest and attention upon the controversy between the Committee for Industrial Organization and the American Federation of Labor has had the unfortunate result of obscuring a fact of greater importance and significance, namely, that some of the utterances of Mr. William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, point the way to a constructive national policy.

Better than any other man who has spoken upon the subject, in my judgment, Mr. Green has grasped the problem and formulated the essentials of a sound constructive policy. Not only that, but it is gratifying to know that there is evidence that his views are shared by responsible leaders of organized labor in various parts of the country.

Recently I have been studying the utterances of many industrialists and labor leaders, with a view to finding out, if possible, whether there is reflected in those utterances anything like a sufficient measure of common understanding to warrant the hope that the two great groups that are so vitally concerned may be led to unite in an intelligent and sincere effort to surmount the crisis confronting the Nation, and to avert disaster. In that survey I have been profoundly impressed by the statesman-like approach to the problem that has characterized Mr. Green's speeches, and by the fact that both his analysis of conditions and his suggestions for remedial action are strikingly similar to those that have come from a few progressive and enlightened industrialists, as well as from independent economists.

In an address delivered in Chicago before the Alumni Association of the University of Wisconsin, some months ago, Mr. Green discussed the problem of collective bargaining with great wisdom. If our present National Administration had approached the task of formulating a labor policy in the spirit of Mr. Green's address, the results would have been vastly better, and we might by this time have made considerable progress toward recovery. Mr. Green compromised no principle. With moderation and wisdom and courage he affirmed that collective bargaining by organized units representing capital and labor must be accepted as an integral part of our industrial system.

While there are doubtless some die-hards among the leaders of industry who still refuse to acknowledge this principle, it is now generally accepted by enlightened and progressive industrialists, and regarded rightly as a factor making for industrial stability and prosperity. Upon that principle, I dare say, the enlightened industrialists of America will gladly join hands with the leaders of organized labor. Similarly, enlightened and progressive employes in industry must agree with Mr. Green that adequate wages, proper working conditions, and a steady and consistent effort to raise the standard of living of the workers must govern our industrial system if we are to continue to make progress as a nation.

The courage and clarity with which Mr. Green stressed the fact that the collective bargaining process is of vital concern to the whole body politic, and not a matter affecting employers and employes only, holds out the hope that leaders of industry, and of agriculture, facing the issues in a like spirit, would find agreement upon a useful and satisfactory constructive program neither impossible nor difficult.

In a radio address delivered over a Nation-wide hook-up a few weeks ago, Mr. Green gave an outline of his views which contained much sound constructive statesmanship. Protesting that, "We cannot go on fighting emergency conditions with Government spending forever," and that "Government spending is an artificial means of increasing purchasing power," Mr. Green boldly proclaimed his faith that such artificial methods can only serve to give temporary alleviation, over a comparatively brief period, and that the solution of the problem of unemployment cannot be reached by that method. He insisted that, "The natural way to reduce unemployment is to provide work for the unemployed in private industry." He insisted that sincere co-operation between labor and industry will do far more to solve the problem of unemployment and promote recovery than anything that Government can do. He emphasized the fact that the American Federation of Labor is "committed to the principle of private ownership, private initiative and protection of private property."

Insisting that as fundamental policy industry should pay the highest wages it can afford, Mr. Green insisted no less strongly that, "every opportunity should be afforded to industry to gain a fair return on legitimate investments." Inviting the leaders of industry to discard the methods of industrial warfare, and proclaiming that the American Federation of Labor did not seek to deal with the employers in a spirit of hate or class consciousness, Mr. Green clearly indicated the broad lines upon which a soundly constructive policy for American industry can be formulated. Surely it is both significant and encouraging that in a time of unrest like this the responsible head of our greatest labor organization is pointing the way to a policy of sound industrial statesmanship.

Taxing Alimony.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

A prominent Wall street financier, who last year made a big alimony settlement on his wife, has now been ordered by the Government to pay a tax of $137,499 on that money which he, himself, had no use of whatever.

For centuries men, due to economic reasons, have ruled their women. Now, in one generation, the tables are turning and in many ways women are getting the edge on men. Be that as it may, when a husband and wife part ways, if they leave no economic debris behind them, it is their own business as far as the State is concerned. Why, then, has the Government a right to "penalize" a man for supporting a woman with whom, for private reasons, he no longer lives?

Take the case of a man in the smaller brackets: In most instances divorced persons remarry, and so this man probably is supporting three adults. His income is sufficient to require him to pay income tax, but after he deducts the annual amount of alimony, the remainder is below the taxable amount. The amount of the alimony exceeds the amount—tax-free—for one person. For some unknown reason the former wife receiving this alimony is not required to pay a tax on it because it is "alimony." Yet the man who earns it and gets no good from it must pay a tax on it. Also, he must pay a tax on the balance of his income, even though it is less than the amount allowed tax-free, for him and his present mate. Neither is he allowed to class his former wife as a "dependant."

Is the Government encroaching in the realm of morals that it so "penalizes" a man for his marital misfortunes? Is it, perchance, trying to preach at and persuade him that divorce is a bad thing no matter how jarring his former union was in the symphony of life? The Supreme Court was indeed suffering from a blind spot when it ruled that a man should pay income tax on alimony.

And Now Aristotle.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

In reply to "Plato" I would say that "Aristotle" is a Greek in spirit even if not born in Hellas. The Greek spirit was that of skepticism, of free inquiry, of science and progress. The Greek ideal was human freedom and perfection.

"Plato" refers to "these gentlemen from the Bronx (or is it Brooklyn) who have no American past about which they can be proud." Let me ask what part in conquering and carving has "Plato" done? "Aristotle" was not born in the Bronx or Brooklyn where very nice people live, but in the sand dunes of South Jersey where the mosquitoes buzz and the sand burrs pierced his bare feet in boyhood days. One group of his ancestors blazed the Cumberland Trail across the United States and one even fought in the Revolutionary War. But he believes that each generation, yea, each individual must make good on his own rather than live a parasitic existence upon the glories of his ancestors. As for "Aristotle's" sympathy for loyalist Spain, China, and Mexico, it is a sympathy based on a love for American principles of free speech and the other items in the Bill of Rights. I am more interested in the living present and future than in the dead past.

It always amuses me immensely when these long-haired Southern colonels like "Plato" always trot out their moth-eaten hoop skirts and crinoline family tree to prove their Nordic or feudal superiority to the "lesser breeds."

Waitresses' Wages.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

A manager of a local hotel gives a first-class business a black eye by his contention that $8.65 is too much money for a girl waitress.

This type of manager should be retired permanently to the "sticks." He is no doubt a very cheap man for the hotel ownership but in the end will turn out the most expensive.

We women of Washington who are in sympathy with these girls getting at least their legal rights if not their financial ones will see that he is smoked out.

Spare That Building.

So many persons on passing the State, War and Navy Building have moved to deride it as a monstrosity that should be razed and forgotten. These condemnation proceedings are not so inappropriate on the lips of streamlined youngsters, but when my scholarly and artistic friends, who sense the carryover of the past into the present, lightly suggest leveling this dowager, it seems to me rather shocking.

For there is something eminently fitting and proper about the State, War and Navy Building. It does look, of course, as though it believed that a girl who smokes would do anything. And it makes the White House next door appear positively light-minded. It may suggest that mixture of stuffiness and majesty from which we of this century have broken loose with loud whoops of iconoclasm. Nevertheless I experience a little click of satisfaction every time I pass the dear old orthodox, snobbish structure. Four-square, massive, civilly precise to inferiors, soberly ponderous as to dress, it stands for the proprieties in a world which has gone wholesale into slacks.

True, it cannot compare in glamour with some of our other buildings about town. The Supreme Court, for instance, is an aloof transcendentalist that might at almost any moment pick up its long flight of steps and flit far away from this disputatious world to the constellations of the Northern Cross.

At the other end of town we have that perennial sweet girl graduate, the Pharmaceutical Building. If you like your marble and bronze set in classic composure, you may proceed down the street and gaze upon the new Federal Reserve edifice, very grand, but perhaps a bit on the vain side, with its sensuous fountains purling for attention, and lighting effects at night. Next door is the Public Health Service, all accoutred in spotless white and ready to operate on this septic world.

They are a charming lot of newcomers, but still and all I cast my vote for the State, War and Navy Building. To me it is the perfect architectural expression of a bourgeois sense of fitness.

As a child I had a yen (may my radical friends forgive me) for the seemly and the proper. I lived in a small town where a few well-to-do families (my brothers and I loitering past their premises thought they were fabulously wealthy) lived in substantial squarish houses that surveyed the world with an acute sense of the proprieties. An iron deer or an iron dog on each lawn did likewise. My favorite day dream was that some day when I was grown and wealthy I would present my mother with an iron deer for Christmas.

To me, from the other side of the social railroad tracks, these dwellings represented the ultimate in civilized living, and I could conceive of no finer social affair than a local dinner party to which the clergyman, the doctor and the banker, with their ladies, were bid. There was such a sense of identity about it, an irreproachable and important identity, recognized by each other and by the whole town. I could imagine the feel of maintaining with grave dignity the high position into which it had pleased the Creator to put me. I read about such things, I peeked at them when I could, I loved them. It was all so proper.

* * *

Eheu fugaces, my tastes have changed, but I still have a tender feeling for all such symbols. An old iron deer can send that prick of ambition through me once again—to grow rich and some day give one to somebody as a Christmas present. And the State, War and Navy Building likewise rewarms in this descendant of a long line of bog-trotters that wishful admiration for the decorous, the weighty and the ultra respectable.

O'HARA.

Have A Hobby.

If you would be happy, have a hobby. Let New York society offer you a few suggestions. Mr. Harold Talbott collects old china vegetables, Mrs. Ruth Pratt china cows. To Marion Tiffany Saportas nothing is so interesting as poreclain hands. Cornelia Otis Skinner saves old perfume bottles. James Russell Lowell raises love birds. Kenneth Clinton's hobby is making models of actual houses in colored clay. Dorothy Parker hoards old envelopes. Mr. George Kaufman Pennsylvania Dutch pottery. William Woodward's passion is old salt cellars, while lead soldiers interest the John Nichols Browns.

As an alternative to collecting things, acquire something unusual and people will flock to your door. Otis Barton carries a small honey bear in a flannel bag under his arm. Paulding Fosdick's pockets are filled with tiny carved elephants. The Angier Biddle Dukes' baby bathroom is papered with telegrams congratulating them on his birth. The Walter Macks have a glass dining room table, which can be illuminated with colors from beneath. Lucia Davidowa has an ermine bedspread, and Mrs. Nino Lo Savio an evening dress printed with skunks.

This ought to show you how easy it is to be happy.

The Once Over

By H. I. Phillips.

After Visiting Wall Street.

All's well in Wall street once again;
Today I saw a man
Who bought a drink without much pain
And wore no dreary "pan."

He recently had changed his shirt,
And also changed his tie,
Which shows there must have been a spurt
Since I last saw the guy.

He walks now with a sprightly air;
His frown has gone away;
He has a cigarette to spare—
And eats three times a day!

His voice again is full of punch,
The basso note has fled;
He doesn't bring a put-up lunch
(Bologna and rye bread).

His eyes now sparkle as of yore,
You do not hear him groan;
He doesn't swoon upon the floor
When some one rings his phone!

* * * *

Those buttons missing from his coat
Are now replaced okay;
He's had a haircut, kindly note,
The first since early May.

He now has dinner at the club,
Not at some lunchroom wreck.
And, what is more, he doesn't snub
The man who brings the check!

But sweetly whispers "Atta scout!
I'll call for you at nine!"

Advice to Milady.

Apply mascara to your eyes,
And henna to your hair;
Refer to gentlemen as "guys,"
And always take a dare.

Incarnadine each fingernail,
When walking sway your hips;
Gush over every new-found male,
And kiss him on the lips.

With mighty quantities of beer,
Assuage your dainty thirst;
And you'll be seeing me, my dear,
Unless I see you first!

Speed-Up At The Bar

By E. Jerome Ellison.

Justice Shifts Into High.

IN THE OLD courthouse on Pemberton Square, in Boston, there is a room with "Pre-Trial Session" neatly lettered on the door. Drop in there and you will find two lawyers at the bench, quietly conversing with the judge. In about ten minutes they will leave, and another pair of lawyers will step up. In that short time the judge and the lawyers have settled a lawsuit.

Let me repeat that—the lawyers and the judge settled a lawsuit in ten minutes. The same thing is being done every day in Detroit and Los Angeles. Though not all lawsuits in these cities are settled so quickly, a surprising percentage of them are, and the trial time of the remainder has been cut to a fraction of what was formerly required.

* * * *

SIX YEARS AGO a Detroit judge injected an element of common sense into courtroom procedure that had evaded five centuries of juridical thinking. Our courts, he reasoned, are provided at great public expense for the administration of justice, not as stages for lawyers' forensics. A good judge, he knew, can dispose of more legal quibbling in five minutes of informal conversation than in a full day of rigid court procedure. Why not have a special judge to clear out the legal underbrush, and call it a "pre-trial?"

So, in 1932, Judge Joseph A. Moynihan inaugurated the pre-trial. The results have been amazing. Detroit courts up to then were as desperately clogged as most large city tribunals are today. It took four years for a law case to reach trial. Today law cases in Detroit are tried in less than ten minutes, and the courts are gaining.

* * * *

SOME TWO WEEKS before a case is scheduled for trial, the opposing parties appear before the pre-trial judge. The attorneys state the points at issue. Chatting informally, the judge obtains admissions and agreements which boil down the case to one or two essential points. "Here, gentlemen," says the judge, "is what you're really quarreling about. Can you reach an agreement on it?" If the answer is "Yes," the case is settled without a formal trial. This happens in three cases out of five. If the answer is "No," it goes to trial before another judge and, unless the jury is waived, a jury.

But there is this important difference: When they go to the trial court, the issues have already been clearly defined in pre-trial, and no others may be introduced. This means that trickery, surprise, lucky breaks and all other freaks which so frequently defeat justice are out. The lawyer wins his case on its merits or he doesn't win it at all. And that is true justice.

* * * *

BESIDES cutting trial time, the pre-trial eliminates much needless litigation entirely. Three embattled litigants recently brought a complicated three-cornered suit to pre-trial in Detroit. After hearing the story, the judge pointed out that all any of them could gain by a prolonged court battle would be an empty moral victory, for none of the defendants had the funds to make good a judgment! Apparently none of them had thought of that, and the suit was dropped.

Pre-trial also discourages that flourishing racket, the "nuisance value" suit, wherein the plaintiff brings suit on trifling grounds, knowing that his case would not stand up in court, but hoping the defendant will pay him something to avoid the expense of a legal defense. Any experienced judge can identify a nuisance suit in 60 seconds flat.

Another advantage of pre-trial is the saving of expense to the litigants themselves. In a recent case, a witness traveled from New York City to Ohio, at the expense of the plaintiff, to testify that a dead man had earned $6,000 a year before he was killed—a fact which opposing counsel never even questioned!

Walter Lippmann

Observer Analyzes Europe's Problems In Light Of Chamberlain Policies And Those Represented By Anthony Eden.

Paris, July 8.

THE DIFFERING ATTITUDES represented in Britain by Mr. Chamberlain and Mr. Eden are to be found in somewhat lesser degree in France and in other countries as well. Though it is true that the Chamberlain policy has more active support among the parties of the right and the Eden policy on the left, it would be misleading to suppose that Mr. Chamberlain sympathizes with the Fascist advance or that Mr. Eden is agitating in favor of a crusade against the totalitarian states. In their final estimates of the European problem these two British Conservatives cannot be far apart. Where they differ is about the measures to be taken now against a challenge which threatens the whole British position in the world and the civilization of which Britain has been for more than a century the principal guardian.

LIPPMANN.

Thus there is no difference of opinion on the need of bringing the military power of Britain to the highest possible point of efficiency. There is no difference of opinion on the need to prepare a defense against a sudden blow against London, or against a sudden incursion into France. There is no difference of opinion on the conclusion that unless Britain and France hang together they will, in the end, be hanged separately.

No Optimism Found In Official Quarters.

THOUGH every effort is being made to find some ground for conciliation and compromise, to find some method of satisfying German and Italian ambitions and grievances, there are in responsible quarters no optimists on this point. It is clear to all that not only the actual armaments that are being constructed, but the whole complex political play in central Europe and in the Mediterranean are phases of an elaborate preparation for war. And no one really doubts that if at any time the advantages on the side of Germany seem sufficiently favorable to Hitler, he will advance without further hesitation.

The question at issue between those who think with Mr. Chamberlain and those who think with Mr. Eden is at bottom, whether time is on the side of the London-Paris' axis or on the side of the Rome-Berlin axis. This is the crucial question in the world today. Is it true, as the followers of Mr. Chamberlain must suppose, that by retreating in good order the British and French are winning the time needed to mobilize their immensely greater potential strength. Or is it true, as the partisans of Mr. Eden argue, that the British and French are yielding up strategic positions which so greatly strengthen the German positions that in the end there will be no way of resisting the Germans? On the capacity of the British and French to find the right answer to these questions depends the peace of Europe and the fate of both nations.

Czechoslovakia And Spain Big Questions.

THE QUESTIONS are acute at two points—in Spain and in Czechoslovakia. Thus, according to one view, which we may call the Eden view, to permit Mussolini and Hitler to produce a victory for Franco is to give them permanent military control in the western Mediterranean. This would permit them in the event of war to attack France in Morocco, to interrupt the transport of men from Africa to Europe, and to cut the connections between Britain and Egypt through the Mediterranean Sea. The other view is that if Franco won, he would have to turn to Britain for financial help, and that by letting Mussolini gain the prestige of a success in Spain, the agreement with Britain can be put into effect. It is argued that with Italy frightened by the Nazi occupation in Austria, this might mean that Italy would at least be neutral in the event of war if France paid a sufficient price.

Have The Post sent to your vacation address. Simply tell your carrier or phone National 4200.

The Czechoslovak question, viewed from the one side, is whether Hitler is to incorporate the whole Danube Valley, including the oil fields and grain of Rumania, within the planned military economy of the Reich. Those who regard the independence of Czechoslovakia as a fighting matter say that if Hitler achieves his immediate objectives, he will then have the economic resources to challenge Britain because he will then be able to wage a long war. The other view held by many in Britain and by some in France is that the conquest of the Danube Valley and perhaps some of southern Russia would satisfy the Nazis, and that they would then make peace with the West.

Eden View Doubts Germany Can Fight Now.

IN GENERAL, those who take the Eden view hold that since Germany cannot now afford to wage a long war, the only safe course is to resist now and to refuse concessions in Spain and Czechoslovakia which would enable Germany to wage a long war. They say in effect that the policy of concessions is a policy which is making Germany so formidable that no one will be able to deal with her. The others say that the risks of war are already so great that they cannot be taken, that more time is needed for a rearmament, that a war postponed, no matter how and no matter at what price, may be a war averted. Where so much depends on the will and on the life of two mortal men, time might, they argue, bring a solution that no one now anticipates.

These are the terms of the great debate now being conducted in public, in the cabinets of London and Paris, and even more in the consciences of individual men. The actual policies of the governments are in fact a continually shifting compromise between these two policies, between the policy of arming and waiting to see and the policy of acting resolutely to protect vital strategic interests.

Prestige And International Relations.

IN FORMER DAYS nations were exceedingly touchy on the subject of their "honor," indeed, all too touchy for the world's good. Just what it meant no statesman ever dared make clear. Apparently it was a quality too transcendental to be defined. But it was, at the same time, deemed so vital to a nation's well-being that even war was deemed preferable to its destruction.

Actually few countries have ever gone to war purely in defense of their "national honor." They have fought for land and raw materials and trade outlets, for self-aggrandizement and for defense. But whatever the real reasons for fighting may have been, the justification usually given has been that of the code duello—that an affront had been given by the enemy to the nation's honor which could only be wiped out by an orgy of bloodletting.

* * * *

IN THE MORE realistic days that followed the World War the concept of "national honor" has tended to fall into discard. Except for the totalitarian dictators who in this as in so many other particulars are anachronisms, few statesmen today talk much about it and practically none among the democratic leaders now suggest that the defense of national honor transcends the need of peace

This is all to the good. It certainly makes for a more realistic awareness of the actual causes of war and of the virtues of peace. And yet it may be that the pendulum has swung far too much the other way since "national honor" was a fetish often requiring human sacrifices to keep it untarnished. There was a germ of sense in the attitude that a nation's "honor" was something that required defending. And this point is borne out if instead of "honor" we read "prestige."

* * * *

IN THE COMPLICATED game of high politics which all nations and particularly the great powers are forced to play, and more so now than ever, there are certain tangible factors of great importance. Among these are wealth, manpower, military equipment, raw material resources, seapower, industrial capacity and so on. But what do they add up to in the case of Nation A as against that of Nation B?

The answer is that nobody knows. The sum total of all of a nation's wealth and manpower and resources, military and otherwise, may be one thing at one time and quite another at a different time. As a factor in the game of high politics these tangibles may be negligible if a rich and powerful nation in question refuses to throw them into the balance and they may be very great though a nation happens to be poor but determined.

Prestige, in international politics, therefore, is the guess which one nation makes of another nation's willingness to use its wealth and strength in defense of its interests. And in an anarchic world such as that of today such guesses are of vast importance.

* * * *

DURING RECENT YEARS the world has again and again witnessed the curious spectacle of the strong following a policy of retreat while nations infinitely weaker than they are successfully carrying out aggressions.

Now it must be admitted that not to run away had its dangers. Strong opposition to Japan at the time of the Manchurian incident of 1931 or at the beginning of the present undeclared war in the Far East might have led to war. War might have resulted from a more determined effort to block Italy at the time of the Ethiopian invasion or an interference with Germany's will to rearm or her militarization of the Rhineland. But the fact cannot be ignored that the price of retreat in the face of aggression has also been a considerable one.

Certainly those great powers that have pursued such a policy of retreat have not made themselves more secure thereby, nor have they made it easier for themselves to protect their interests. On the contrary the decline in their prestige and the rise in the prestige of the aggressors have only tended to increase general insecurity and endanger the long-standing interests of the peaceful powers.

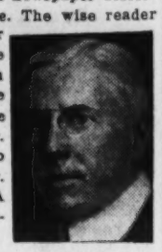
* * * *

IT IS THE GROWING awareness of that fact which explains the mounting opposition in Great Britain to Neville Chamberlain's foreign policy. Certainly the overwhelming majority of the people of that kingdom, including those siding with Eden and Churchill and Lloyd George and the Laborites are as anxious to prevent it as is the present British government. But the latter feels that in giving way so steadily to acts of aggression, Britain's prestige is reduced to so low a state that the defense of British interests becomes progressively more difficult. They would restore British prestige by having the government adopt a stronger stand not because they have any mystical loyalty to what used to be called "national honor" but because the maintenance of that prestige is a sine qua non in the defense of the empire and of peace.

Mark Sullivan

"Activities" Listed By Texas Congressman Cited To Indicate Subservience Of Capitol Hill To Executive Officers Today.

MR. HARRY HOPKINS may deny that the WPA exerts influence in politics. He may send investigators from his own staff to Kentucky to gather material for denying in large part newspaper stories about political activity of the WPA in that State. The wise reader will conclude that the report of the newspaper correspondent about conditions is at least more disinterested than the report of Mr. Hopkins' own staff, who could hardly fail to be conscious of the wish to justify their own organization. The wise newspaper reader will bear in mind also that Mr. Hopkins himself took a hand in the attempt to defeat Senator Gillette, of Iowa, and that Mr. Hopkins' assistant in the management of the WPA incited WPA workers to wholesale political activity.



SULLIVAN.

But omit all that. Regardless of direct incitements, politics is inherent in the system of grants of money from the Administration. When Congress appropriates immense lump sums to be allocated by President Roosevelt and his subordinates, Congress by that act confers great political power.

Congress has always appropriated money for postoffices and other public works. But preceding the Roosevelt Administration, Congress made these appropriations directly. The name of the postoffice to be built was specified in the bill that Congress wrote. True, this resulted in what was called "pork barrel bills," the log-rolling of Congressmen for mutual benefit—you vote for my postoffice and I'll vote for yours.

But under the "pork barrel" method it was the Congressman who got the credit with the voters of his district. Under the present system it is the Administration that gets the credit. The Congressman now tells his constituents not what he got from Congress but what he got from the Administration.

'Record' Illustrates Congressman's Attitude.

OF THIS there is a vivid illustration in a statement inserted in the Congressional Record by Congressman Albert Thomas, of the Eighth Texas District. It can be taken for granted, though I do not know, that the purpose of printing the statement in the Congressional Record was to distribute it among Congressman Thomas' constituents. The statement was printed at the end of the last Congress, in December. It is headed "My Activities During My First Year in Congress." In part it reads:

"I am taking this opportunity to extend New Year's greetings to the citizens of my district and to give them an accounting of my activities during my first year in Congress . . .

"Over $1,500,000 of PWA money will be spent in Harris County . . .

"The Bureau of Air Commerce will construct a modern lighted airway from Houston to New Orleans, at a cost of $330,000 . . .

"The Works Progress Administration has also been good to our district. Mr. Harry Hopkins, Works Progress Administrator, and his most valuable and hard-working assistant, Mr. Aubrey Williams, allotted to our district $135,000 to be spent before June 30, 1938, for the purpose of taking men off the relief rolls, and to aid county-wide flood control . . .

"The Works Progress Administration also granted us $150,000 for work relief on the city airport . . .

"The Postoffice Department was most co-operative . . . In August, 1937, five new rural routes were created.

"A new judgeship for the United States District Court for the southern district of Texas is practically assured us . . .

"The Veterans' Administration . . . proposes to establish a contact unit in Houston. Records will be kept there, and medical examinations made. This is a needed convenience, and I rejoice with the veterans over our good luck.

"Our able Secretary of Agriculture, the Honorable Henry Wallace, allotted $231,000 for the Sam Houston Farms project at Highlands, Tex.

Flattery Indicates Sense Of Obligation.

THE READER will observe the "buttering" which a Congressman now feels moved to give to members of the Administration—"our able Secretary of Agriculture," "the Postoffice Department was most co-operative," the "most valuable and hard-working assistant."

And the reader will observe the order in which Congressman Thomas lists the duties of a Congressman in his conclusion of his "accounting" to his district, he says: "A Congressman's duties are twofold. He should try to procure all available Federal benefits for his district, and he should study and help legislate for the good of the country . . ."

The truth is, Congress, when it adopted the practice of appropriating lump sums to be allocated by members of the Administration, was not legislating "for the good of the country." "A grant of money is a grant of power." And Congress has made a grant of power to the President and his subordinates.

When Congress adopted the method of lump-sum appropriations, it to a considerable extent reduced its own power and prestige. And reduction of the power and prestige of the parliamentary branch of government is a step toward one-man authoritarian government. It has been one of the signs of the coming of authoritarian government in European countries.

Eckener Hints U. S. to Furnish Reich Helium

By the Associated Press.

Friedrichshafen, Germany, July 8.—Dr. Hugo Eckener, veteran German dirigible commander, hinted today President Roosevelt may yet have a "last word" to say regarding the United States' ban on export of helium to Germany, where it is needed for future airship development.

In an address commemorating the 100th birthday anniversary of Count Ferdinand von Zeppelin, father of lighter-than-air travel, Dr. Eckener ridiculed Secretary Ickes for prohibiting export of helium, a nonimflammable gas Germany can get only from the United States.

He suggested the action of the United States Secretary of the Interior was due to American domestic politics.

Military Value Questioned.

"One Cabinet member now suddenly has given the opinion that the helium promised us last year has military importance, and therefore cannot be delivered.

"This seems like a joke, for this gentleman is Secretary of the Interior, while military experts of the War and Navy Departments denied its military importance.

"The last word, however, has not been spoken, as President Roosevelt has assured me.

"There is no doubt we shall get helium because the refusal hits American airship interests, which are dependent upon collaboration with us."

Dr. Eckener stressed the importance of helium to Germany by saying "the last step toward perfection of the airship was taken when the new Zeppelin was constructed for helium instead of inflammable gas."

Rosendahl Honored.

Before Dr. Eckener criticized Secretary Ickes, Commander Charles Rosendahl, chief of the United States Naval Air Station at Lakehurst, N. J., was honored in a gesture symbolizing close ties between German and American airship men.

By the Associated Press

Secretary Ickes, told that Dr. Hugo Eckener discerned political implications in Ickes' refusal to approve helium exports to Germany, suggested yesterday a "look at the record" would support his stand against the shipments.

The record, so far as Interior Department files are concerned, consists of quotations from experts as to the military importance of the noninflammable gas.

200 Oppose Car Meters AtHagerstown Postoffice

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Hagerstown, July 8.—Petitions bearing 200 names of persons opposed to parking meters in front of the postoffice building were handed to Mayor W. Lee Elgin by Postmaster Jacob T. Hartle.

The mayor said he will invite the signers to a meeting with City Council to learn why they oppose the meters, since so many persons have come to him personally and have written that they want the meters to remain in front of the postoffice building. The 30-day trial period agreed upon by the Treasury Department expired this week.

Keep Spies Away, Sen. Lewis Warns

Chicago, July 8 (AP).—Senator James Hamilton Lewis warned foreign nations tonight that propaganda agents and spies would be driven from the United States.

"We beseech the foreigners not to invade our precincts with propaganda," the Illinois Democrat said in an address prepared for broadcasting, "nor intrude doctrines that undermine our democratic institutions. We appeal to you not to breach our sincerity and open confusion amid our foreign-born population.

"We proclaim to you that, should you do such things by your agents in secret conspiracy, we will drive them from our shores. Or, if they be our citizens, we will unfrock them of citizenship and imprison them as traitors."

Relief and Pension Lure Alien-Born to Seek Citizenship

Apparently lured by relief, old-age pension and Government positions, more aliens are applying for American citizenship in the District, Mrs. Helen McGraw, naturalization clerk, said yesterday.

A German, it was shown, came here when he was 17 and has been here for more than 60 years. His application was filed declaring that he was unemployed.

Ninty-two applications were filed last month. In the first six months of 1937 there were 241, as against 288 for the same period this year.

Naturalization courts will be held regularly now so that a crowded docket can be cleared.

"Golden Song"

By Herbert de Lima

Poem By Don Marquis.

MANY YEARS AGO, in 1920 or 1921, I spent a great deal of my time with Don Marquis. One day when I walked into his office in the old New York Evening Sun I found him sitting at his typewriter crying. His little boy had died the night before and Don was trying in spite of his grief to get out his column—The Sun Dial. I sat around for a while—not knowing what to say—when Don suddenly pulled the paper out of the machine and handed it to me. On it he had written the bit of verse which he said he was going to run the next day.

I persuaded him not to, telling him it was not the sort of thing he should use just to fill space—that it was too beautiful for that. I have just run across the original tucked between the leaves of one of his books.

And even as I listen, charmed and mute,
The lyric's tender secret to surprise,
Between the lifted finger and the lute
A silence gathers and the music dies.

No man may know the meaning hinted there,
Nor bid again the ruined chords combine;
I shall not hear, not ever, anywhere,
The song, the golden song that once was mine.

O silence vast no wings of song may fill,
You do not give me back my song again!
Not though my brain beats at your bounds until

Breathless, I listen, bowed the lute,
Voiceless, I bend me o'er the voiceless strings . . .
But oh, the little golden song is mute,

(Harper's Magazine.)

Sidewalks Along Highways

Of the vast number killed in rural highway accidents every year, about 35 per cent are pedestrians. Obviously, this toll could be greatly reduced by providing sidewalks along country roads, especially on heavily traveled roads near large cities. The cost of sidewalks is small compared with the safety they offer; often they can be built largely with relief labor.

Nassau County, on Long Island, is building 200 miles of concrete safety walks on its highways—probably a larger mileage than has any other county in the whole country. Massachusetts is building 400 miles of rural sidewalks, using WPA labor. The Texas roadside development program has included construction of pedestrian bridges and foot paths on the outskirts of Beaumont, Nacogdoches and other cities. But only a beginning has been made in this field.

Despite the large number of rural automobiles in use, members of farm families have frequent occasion to walk to neighbors' homes or to school, church or trading center. No highway without sidewalk facilities would be a sound policy in a nation that needs stimulation to avoid atrophy of the leg muscles.

Marital Farce And 'Hot' Band On Earle Bill

Film Comedy and Stevens Music Please Fans on Opening Day.

"MEN ARE SUCH FOOLS." Warner Brothers picturization of a story by Faith Baldwin, adapted to the screen by Norman Reilly Raine and Horace Jackson, featuring Wayne Morris and Priscilla Lane, with Humphrey Bogart, Penny Singleton, Hugh Herbert, Marcia Ralston, Gene Lockhart, Kathleen Lockhart, Johnnie Davis, Donald Briggs, Mona Barrie, Reine Riano, Claude Allister and James Nolan. Directed by Busby Berkeley. Reviewed Friday afternoon by Sally Stroud. At the Earle Theater.

Pansy, the Horse, is our candidate for the best feature of the week. Completely nonchalant and thoroughly imbued with j'nai sas pas, Pansy trots off with all honors on the Earle's stage and gives the feature picture a run for the money. A trained horse, a thoroughbred and a comedian, Pansy deserves all the bows the audience can, and probably will, accord her.

This marvelous animal is one of the features with Leith Stevens' C. B. S. Band, which you may hear Saturday nights as the "Swing Session." It seemed to us that the trombone trio was overly loud, and we winced reluctantly, for Leith and the gang are one of our favorite radio swing spots. The demon drummer and Toots Mondello stand out in instrumental performance.

Many Specialists.

Joe Sodja, featured guitarist, jumps around jitterly whilst strumming some pretty potent chords. Eleanore Knight, first girl to dance for television, has a good routine, elegant costume, and is a vivid little person of talent. Florence Mayo, who presents Pansy, the Horse, wears black silk opera hose with all the chi-chi of Eleanor Powell, who used to have a corner on that market. Bernice Parks, introduced as Broadway's newest singing swing star, or something, should dispense with those wornout gestures and head-noddings which most singers feel called upon to employ to put over their songs. She doesn't need them.

A Merrie Melody in mellow Technicolor, with someone resembling A. Woollcott as town crier, presents a deft bit about books and the people behind the titles, which has all the whimsy of Pan swinging on a daisy chain. The short subjects go on forever, and most of them are good. There are some excellent shots of straight-backed Balinese dancers in the colored travelogue, some shots of currently popular baseball players in the newsreel, explanations about greyhound racing in the pictorial revue, and a tightly written and well-played comedy starring Leon Errol, which should get him a feature-length picture all his own.

Feature Is Spirited.

"Men are Such Fools," which is the feature picture, and which is concerned with the adventures of Priscilla Lane and Wayne Morris, is another entry in the young-married-lovers competition. They battle again in this, throwing pillows, ducking each other in the swimming pool, etc., with great gusto. Miss Lane has the better of it, for she rushes off in a huff, while Wayne always resorts to hurling glasses and things.

They are likeable young people and the piece is full of movement and charm and sparkle and has some of the shades of meaning and byplay which run through life.

Mona Barrie has a fat part as a sophisticated gal, which she handles with snow-white kid gloves. Humphrey Bogart is around and about in a part little fitting his talents, but which he makes sympathetic, though he is the Other Man. Hugh Herbert flits in and out, fluttering his hands and uttering woo-woos at intervals. He panics the people.

There is quite a mob of nice people in the cast of this story of a girl and a boy trying to make two careers and one marriage successful. Chances are that you will find it an ideal manner of whiling away an evening.

Columbia

"MAN'S CASTLE." Columbia picturization of a story by Jo Swerling, adapted from a play by Lawrence Hazard, starring Spencer Tracy and Loretta Young, supported by Walter Connolly, Marjorie Rambeau, Glenda Farrell, Dickie Moore and Arthur Hohl. Directed by Frank Borzage. Reviewed Friday afternoon by Dorothea Lewis.

Well, the memory's pretty good—for they are all here, all the things we remembered so well and so gratefully about this good picture made in 1934, and the four years between might be the flick of an eyelash for all the dating they've done to "Man's Castle."

Four years ago it was, and today it is, a poignant love story of a bindlestiff and a starving girl, a love story all the more important because its two principals had so very little besides each other and their shanty on a city dump heap.

Bill, tortured by an incessant desire to move on, is not so sure that he wants Trina or their shanty. Every train whistle is a lure and a challenge, but Trina knows that the only thing she wants more than Bill is to make him happy and so they work out their problem, movingly and believably.

It is sentimental, very. But it is as completely unashamed of its sentiment as Bill is ashamed of his.

Spencer Tracy and Loretta Young are excellent, so natural, so real that a somewhat unreal story and many moments bordering on hokum become completely true and real in their hands. Incidentally, it's a sort of Americanized "Seventh Heaven." Bill is a brilliantly realized character, one of Tracy's best, understood and understanding, perplexed and puzzled and inarticulate. The thing Tracy does better than anyone else.

Loretta Young should see this reissue and make her studio bosses see it also. Her Trina is more appealing, more vital than anything she has done recently, for all she plays it in two dresses, neither fashionable. Much more becoming than recent glamor-gowns, are the warmth and emotion she exhibits here. The love scenes between Trina and Bill have a fire about them and a reality that may date the film a bit, for they were obviously made before the Hays "no horizontal love-making" rule went through.

The supporting cast is of star caliber, including Walter Connolly, Marjorie Rambeau and Glenda Farrell. Arthur Holh seems a shade over-sinister to us.

Subsidiaries include Chapter 13 of "The Lone Ranger," a Terry Toon cartoon, "Maid in China," and the newsreel.

Nelson B. Bell About The Showshops

Three Stars Shine in 'Shopworn Angel,' at Palace; Keith's Has Gay Frolic in 'Having Wonderful Time'

Romance of a Rookie Is Interesting Picture in New Version.

"THE SHOPWORN ANGEL." Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer picturization of a story by Dana Burnett, adapted to the screen by Waldo Salt, costarring Margaret Sullavan and James Stewart, with Walter Pidgeon, Hattie McDaniel, Nat Pendleton, Alan Curtis, Sam Levene, Eleanor Lynn and Charles D. Brown. Directed by H. C. Potter. Previewed Tuesday, July 5. At Loew's Palace Theater.

Although originally filmed a decade ago with a cast as illustrous as its present, "The Shopworn Angel" bears some of the earmarks of antiquity. It deals, to be sure, with the era of America's entry into the Great War, and backgrounds its action with incident and music characteristic of that day, but it unfolds its simple story with such authenticity, such sincerity, aand such a sure plumbing of deep-seated impulses and emotions as to remove it largely from that class of screen productions usually described as "dated." The fundamentals of the romance that sprang up among three people, who, to borrow an expression from Noel Coward, "loved each other very much," will be as sound ten years from now as they are at the present time, or were in the late 1920s.

BELL.

There is nothing "Gargantuan" or "stupendous" in either the form or the substance of "The Shopworn Angel." Originally published under the title of "Private Pettigrew's Girl," this Dana Burnett magazine story utilizes only the homely events in the life of a young Texas cowboy who reaches New York en route to France as a rookie who is baffled by the turmoil of a great city, intensely lonesome and yet spinning tall tales to his pals about his many love affairs. By accident—an automobile accident—he meets a girl unlike any he ever has seen and sets her up among his bunkies as the one he has been prattling so volubly about

Battle of Viewpoints.

But Daisy Heath already is deeply enamored of a handsome young man about town and the better stage entrances, who is able to finance her theatrical career, produce shows and in other ways pave her path heavily with gold. But there is something about the honest simplicity of this Pettigrew boy that gets her. The play resolves itself at once into a battle of diametrically opposite points of view and vividly contrasted appraisals of what is worthy and what is not, among these three. It is as simple and uncomplicated as that.

But out of this very quality of simplicity has been evolved a picture that is consistently interesting, humorous and dramatic. It is played with consummate skill by Margaret Sullavan, as the girl; James Stewart, as lanky and deliberate Bill Pettigrew, and Walter Pidgeon, as a remarkably patient and understanding underdog in his major affair of the heart.

Unlike Ginger Rogers in "Vivacious Lady," Miss Sullavan does not "gait" her performance to the characteristically retarded tempo of Mr. Stewart's. She is the brusque and self-reliant showgirl, whose career has not been without its rigid requirements of asperity and brutal frankness, to the life rather than to any over or underemphasized caricature of theater people as they are. Mr. Stewart, on the other hand, is the diffident and hesitant young soldier in strange surroundings that represents preeisely the sort of character that he is able to interpret best. Eacn, as goes without saying, provides a perfect foil for the distinctive methods of the other. As the third member of the triangular romance, Walter Pidgeon proves himself an actor whose capabilities are quite on a par with those of his costellar associates.

Music Points Climax.

There are intervals in the action when marching troops and the blare of bands lend a wartime color to the drama that is valuable. There are others in which Miss Heath's stage appearances are shown and in which Miss Sullavan, in that character, sings a popular song or two of embarkation days—notably, "Pack Up Your Troubles in Your Old Kit Bag and Smile, Smile, Smile," the reminsicent tune that points the final climax of the picture perhaps better than a ream of speeches could have done.

The distinction of the current feature at the Palace is carried over into the short subjects. Robert Benchley is as droll as usual in one of his inimitable short-reel creations, this time devoted to the precarious business of how to raise a baby. Pete Smith, not to be outdone, contributes something in the way of pointing out the genesis of crime in an item called "A Criminal Is Born." Each of these supplementary features stands at the head of its respective class.

Three Go 'Marching as to War'

Rogers and Fairbanks, Jr., Head Cast of Filmed Stage Success.

"HAVING WONDERFUL TIME." RKO-Radio picturization of Arthur Kober's stage success of the same name, adapted to the screen by the author, costarring Ginger Rogers and Douglas Fairbanks, jr., with Peggy Conklin, Lucille Hall, Lee Bowman, Eve Arden, Dorothea Kent, Richard "Red" Skelton, Donald Meek, Jack Carson, Grady Sutton, Leona Roberts, Harlan Briggs, Inez Courtney and Juanita Quigley. Directed by Alfred Santell. Reviewed Friday afternoon at RKO-Keith's.

Less of what to hope for in a summer vacation than what to expect is depicted in Arthur Kober's own film version of "Having a Wonderful Time," his successful stage comedy, now on view at RKO-Keith's.

Poor, tired, little "Teddy" escapes from her typewriter for "two weeks with pay," leaves her family's stuffy Bronx apartment and takes the folder's word for it that she is going to plunge into a fortnight of luxurious freedom, "away from it all." She even takes a book with her as a symbol of faith in the hyperbolic allurements of the "Kamp Kare-Free" prospectus. And what does she discover upon her arrival at this paradise in the hills? She discovers that she has been tossed into the midst of a heterogeneous rabble, bunking four in a room, with every girl in the place playing a game of "catch as catch can," and may the devil take the hindmost.

Her disillusionment is practically complete—except for that young handyman, who met her at the station and turned up later as a waiter in the dining room. The eventual relationship of this romantic young couple is forecast by the fact that they begin their acquaintanceship by fighting like a couple of strange bulldogs.

Romance Lags.

"Teddy" doesn't do too well with her romancing at first. Then this handsome young fellow, "Chick," manifests a considerable interest in her one night out under the stars and the moon and mentions something about a deferred marriage and a slightly less conventional arrangement in the meantime. In perfectly ladylike pique, Teddy becomes suddenly interested in "Buzzy," the Don Juan of the camp, and accompanies him to his exclusive cabin in a rainstorm, where a rousing game of backgammon is played in lieu of Buzzy's own suggestion of how the evening might otherwise be spent. The backgammon proves a little too much for mine host, who turns in unceremoniously—in one of the most amusing sequences in the play—leaving his guest to fall asleep over the board and spend the night there. It is from this incident that the climax of the comedy derives its major, and instant, motivation.

All of this Author Kober has managed to imbue with the real spirit of a cheap, middle-class vacation resort in upstate New York. His types are many and varied and all contribute to a maddening mosaic of discomfort, petty antagonisms and, at times, hilarious fun. After contemplating Kamp Kare-Free's acutely distressing program of pleasures, it is easy to perceive why so many people need a rest upon returning home from their annual outings.

In the pivotal roles of the play, Ginger Rogers and Douglas Fairbanks, jr., encounter nothing that places any very great strain upon their abundant talents. Theirs is not the sprightliest dialogue in the picture—although it is by far the most romantic—and their scenes together seemed to this other typewriter yesterday to be a little too abruptly curtailed to serve the best interests of the story's basic purpose. However, Miss Rogers evidently plays an exceedingly mean game of backgammon—she beat Buzzy 11 games out of 12 in their all-night joust—and Mr. Fairbanks, with his chivalrous nature once aroused, slings a vicious fist.

Time Marches On.

There are so many supporting these two in roles of greater or lesser importance that it is a difficult task to determine just where lies the greatest responsibility, and thereby the greatest credit, for making "Having Wonderful Time" the true picture of a "gyp" summer resort that it is. Peggy Conklin is entitled to first place among the secondary players for a crisp and diverting performance as the "great lady" of the mountain hideout, with Lee Bowman ranking second by virtue of his "wild" night at home with Ginger. Donald Meek, Grady Sutton and a host of others do their bit in compiling the final laugh totals, but our old friend Richard "Red" Skelton somehow seems never quite to belong to the story. His appearances represent sheer interpolations of some of the comedy bits he has exhibited on local stages and not in any sense a sustained characterization.

The chief auxiliary feature of the new bill at Keith's is the latest release of the "March of Time," once again dedicated to a single fruitful topic in "The United States Coast Guard—G-Men of the Sea." It is made clear in this footage that the Coast Guard service consists of something more than dragging careless swimmers out of the surf. It encompasses a little bit of everything that is law-enforcing, protective and heroic. The various ramifications of the department are made illuminatingly clear in the concise and interesting manner tpical of this documentary newsreel.

A "Scrappy" cartoon comedy in Technicolor, "The Big Birdcast," and a new issue of the Pathe News are additional supplementaries of a feature that is both seasonable and highly seasoned.

In Hollywood

With HEDDA HOPPER

Hollywood, Calif., July 8.—I tip my hat to Charlie Chaplin for turning down half a million dollars by refusing to reissue his picture, "The Kid." Charlie, being still with us, can and has defended himself. Would you, in all seriousness, wear a gown and hat you wore 15 years ago? Or, when everybody is swinging into the Big Apple, join them with a Bunny Hug or a Black Bottom and expect people not to ridicule you? You're darned tootin' you wouldn't. In our business, acting, photography, mechanics have improved to such an extent that to go back that many years is archaic.

HEDDA HOPPER

And while things may not be rosy between Paulette Goddard and Chaplin, I happen to know he's helping coach her in "French Without Tears," the play she is going to do in the East.

That burst of sound you heard at the Hollywood tract the other day wasn't cheers, but boos. And when Simone Simon decorated the winner's neck, methinks I heard cries of: "Why not get an American? Haven't we any left strong enough to do that job?" Nothing against little S— Simon. Just shows our citizens are beginning to think of America first.

Wonder if you heard the story of the writer who didn't like the changes made in his script during production. So in the still of the night he went to the studio and burnt down part of the set. Or shouldn't I tell that? Bad thought to put in your mind now, when writers can scarcely recognize the name of their brain children. Why, it took that man six months to get back in the studio.

The whole town is amazed at the quiet on the set of the three Marx Brothers in "Room Service." Heretofore you never know whether you'd find one of the Marxes in your pageboy bob or swinging from the rafters. So I went a snoopin'. Discovered the studio had engaged the prettiest girls in town for that picture. And they're not permitted to leave the set unless okayed by the director.

Binnie Barnes owes her success in "Three Blind Mice" to Director Bill Seiter, her discoverer. Another blonde was practically set for the part, one so cold you could hear water freeze in the glass as she glanced at it. While north on his vacation, Bill saw Binnie Barnes in a picture. Wired the studio. Got her. She's now on her way to glory. What a break!

Mrs. Seiter just turned over $2,000 to the Children's Home Society, the proceeds from her garden party. Bill had already given the society a new kitchen and an incubator. And they're the parents of two adopted babies. You'll remember her as the beautiful Marion Nixon, actress.

Among the visitors at the Reinhardt School when Constance Collier addressed the class was George Cukor. When called upon to make a speech, George responded by letting them ask him questions. Their interest wasn't a passing fancy. They delved into the scientific why and wherefores—as they would at a biology lesson, which greatly delighted George.

Loew's Capitol

"YOU AND ME." Paramount picturization of a story by Norman Krasna, adapted to the screen by Virginia Van Upp, costarring Sylvia Sidney and George Raft, with Barton MacLane, Harry Carey, Roscoe Karns, George E. Stone, Warren Hymer, Robert Cummings, Adrian Morris, Cecil Cunningham, Vera Gordon, Willard Robertson, Guinn Williams, Bernadene Hayes, Joyce Compton and Carol Paige. Directed by Fritz Lang. Reviewed Friday afternoon by Mary Harris.

Though "You and Me" tells of crime and criminals, though it preaches the familiar text, "Crime does not pay," it can hardly be called another crime picture.

There's an odd touch of fantasy about the affair, mostly ascribable to the Fritz Lang direction. Taken realistically, the story is preposterous, but taken as a play keyed in modern semisymbolism it gains in importance. Just choose your own angle.

The story starts from scratch with the idea of a department store owner whose hobby is hiring paroled jailbirds. Two of these, Sylvia Sidney and George Raft, fall in love and marry, the only drawback being that Sylvia's parole still runs and she is not legally able to marry. On top of this, Georgie is continually being pestered to return to the racket by Barton MacLane. After Sylvia and George have an initial spat caused by her fibbing, the beady-eyed Mr. Raft and some of his other ex-con pals decide to rob their employer. Sylvia turns them in to the store owner (played genially by Harry Carey) who traps them, talks to them like a Dutch uncle and then tells them all to go back to their jobs. That's the gist of the story and don't blame us if it sounds like something picked out of the air on a hot afternoon. Really, it trots right along at a good pace and isn't hard to take.

But one of the strongest sequences you'll ever see is embedded in this in-and-outer. It's that where the former cons, celebrating the holidays, suddenly begin to remember days in prison. It starts with a laugh and a wisecrack and, before you know it, it's going into a phantasm of horror with a beat like Ravel's "Bolero." Mr. Lang must have enjoyed working out this one. It's twenty times better than anything else in the picture.

If you'd liked Sylvia Sidney and George Raft before, you'll like them in "You and Me." They both play the sort of thing that they always do well. Miss Sidney is appealingly gay, sweetly pathetic, apallingly brave. Mr. Raft is tough, imperturbable.

The character actors cast as Georgie's criminal pals offer color and contrast. Best are Roscoe Karns and George E. Stone, racket guys walking the straight and narrow—selling toys and kitchen gadgets. Warren Hymer is good, too, but has a tendency to go quaint. Robert Cummings and Barton MacLane play straight in their tough parts.

Lew Lehr thoughtfully presents a flock of seals capering and splashing in a tank. The rest of the news reel gave the impression of being all aeroplanes.

There's no kitchen that's so much fun as that one invented seasons ago by Smith and Dale, of the Avon Comedy Four. Besides horsing around their kitchen, Messrs. S. and D. also join with Lou Lawrence and Alan Chester to produce close harmony, using the newest numbers.

The Cappy Barra Harmonica Ensemble produces "Tiger Rag" and "Poet and Peasant" with equal facility. Sara Ann McCabe, a pretty brunette claid in a confection of blue, white and maroon stripes, sings all the newer musical hits, such as "Says My Heart," and also makes a neat job of "Night and Day." Toe dancing is Helene Denizon's forte.

The boy and girl chorus equals almost any other act on the bill. Their waltz adagio and sailor numbers are both novel and smart.

MARY HAWORTH'S MAIL

Man Who Detests Wife and Dearly Loves Young Son Asks What to Do About His Marriage.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am a man 31 years old, have been maried nearly seven years and have a son almost 6. I love him dearly. But I did not truly love the girl I married. It happened that there was a gang of seven that I fell in with and this girl happened to be the odd one, so we paired off. Shortly afterward, all the others got married and they kept after us, wanting to know why we didn't get married, and finally we did. After we were married, I wondered why I did it, but I hoped it would work out for the best.

* * * *

The first year we bought a home and shortly afterward the baby was born. In the meantime, I was not altogether satisfied but thought as time went on and the baby grew older that I would become content, and learn to love my wife. I worked around the house and did everything I could to make it seem like home, but somehow, something seemed missing. Well, time went on and I got so I lost all interest in the home; it was a place I hated to go.

* * * *

I sent my wife on a couple of trips, so that she would be gone a week at a time, thinking maybe I would miss her and long for her return; but even this didn't help. I got so I didn't even want to see her. The baby was the only one I had in mind. All this time I did not run around, but worked hard, saved money and tried to pay for the home. Then, about two years ago, I went to her and told her that I did not love her and that I was going to leave. She cried and said that even if I didn't love her I could at least be man enough to think of the baby and his future.

* * * *

About seven months ago I met a girl whom I liked very much. She is 23. When we met I did not tell her I was married, for I did not think we would see much of each other, but fate pulled us together. When I found I was falling in love with her I told her everything. I thought surely this would kill her love for me, and I didn't want to hurt her. I asked her if she was through with me and she told me she would let me know later. When I next saw her she said it had not killed her love, so we have continued to see each other.

* * *

I asked her what she thought I should do. The only answer she will give is: "Do whatever you think is best. I don't want you to do something that you will regret later." She also told me I should stop and think about the baby; whether I could be happy if separated from him. I know that she loves me because she is always trying to have me do the things that will make me happy. I don't spend money on her for candy, flowers and presents. Everything we do is clean fun. Please give me your best advice, as this is an awful strain—trying to do the right thing. I don't want to live a dual life.

L. K.

Problem of Conscience.

DEAR L. K.: Reduced to its stark essentials, your problem seems to be one of conscience entirely. You are pulled in opposite directions, at one and the same time, by two of the strongest personality pressures known to man—the pull of moral and social duty on the one side, and the pull of man's irresistible need to clothe his existence in the mantle of some emotional and social happiness, on the other side.

* * * *

In seeking the solution of your problem you must face the fact that no one can be the keeper of another's conscience, a fact that the girl you supposedly love recognizes and indicates (with intuitive wisdom) in saying "Do whatever you think best." I think it may be said, however, that you have made and are making a truly commendable effort to deal decently, honestly and squarely with a painful, even a tragic, dilemma; an effort, I might say, that your wife does not seem willing to meet halfway.

* * * *

If she has average intelligence and intuition, she cannot but have known—for years, possibly almost from the first—that you do not love her, and if she had a proper self-respect, a sense of fair play, a willingness to deal with others as she would be dealt with (i. e.—generously, unselfishly, with a protective concern for the inalienable rights of the other fellow; including his intangible, deeply personal rights in the realms of feeling) she would have sat down and discussed with you, calmly and logically, the wisdom or feasibility of your proposal to leave her because you did not and could not love her. She would not have had weak, sentimental and treacherous recourse to tears, and to the implication that your self-preservative desire to separate from her would constitute a base, selfish and cowardly desertion of your son.

* * * *

Instead of giving her son the same consideration that you, apparently, are so desirous of giving him in this wretched situation, she appears to be using him as a selfish weapon of defense for herself. If she were truly and wisely concerned with his welfare, she would admit and act upon the fact that no child can grow up straight and strong and happy, in a psychic or spiritual sense, in a home where the father involuntarily detests the mother. She would know, out of very mother intuition, that his nature and spirit would absorb and be poisoned by the overt and covert atmosphere of maternal fear, anxiety, jealous and selfish concern, and paternal animosity, resentment, helplessly cold indifference and desperate frustration, which beclouded his home life.

* * * *

It would not surprise me to learn that your wife had married you out of hand, so to speak. That she deliberately set her cap for you, and married you in full knowledge of the fact that she had cleverly roped you in, more or less against your will and intention; and that she had maneuvered the credit-plan purchase of the home, and had the child within the first year, as part of a far-sighted program for continuing to hold you, more or less against your will. There are women, you know, who are so bent upon marriage, as a social achievement and as a means of support, that they throw both humane and ethical considerations to the winds in working toward their goal. They are content to "get their man" by fair means or foul and to keep him by the same means; reasoning, I suppose (if they stop to reason, or, indeed, that the end justifies the means.

* * * *

If it should happen that you are married to such a woman, your son would not, in my opinion, be greatly advantaged, socially or psychologically, by your remaining with her as a sort of burnt offering on the altar of parenthood. If you remain with her, yet so detest her that your home is a hated place which you avoid as much as possible, your son would come primarily under her influence; and in every revenge upon if they are capable of reasoning) you she might poison his mind against you. And if you separate from her, I suppose you would leave the boy in her care, and again he would be subjected primarily to her influence.

* * * *

Therefore, if, any way you turn, the child is more hers than yours (as a child of a divided home usually is more the mother's than the father's, except in rare cases), it would appear that the child need not be made the sole determining factor in your eventual decision. It would appear that his destiny has already taken more or less tentative shape; that no matter what you do, it is out of your power to alter it much; that that, therefore, you would be justified in giving some consideration to your own happiness and well-being. I am assuming, of course, that should you decide to separate from your wife, you would continue to provide for the child—in the way of food, clothing, shelter and education—regardless of who supervises his care or under whose roof he lives.

* * * *

In conclusion, I wish to emphasize this point: If your wife refuses to entertain a calm discussion of your desperate desire to be free; if she cannot be persuaded to consider, even tentatively, some plan of action that (both parties willing) certainly could be worked out to safeguard the child's welfare, even if separation or divorce should come to pass—then she is proving herself to be a cross between a dog-in-the-manger and the Old Man of the Sea; a person who, by her own lack of consideration for another's rights, forfeits claim to special consideration herself.

Washing Keeps Soiling From Ruining Dresses

Cotton lace dresses, so popular for town and sports wear, can be washed with soap and water like any other cotton frock. But even the finer fabrics made of silk or rayon thread, or combinations of the two, will be all the better for a tubbing before their freshness is impaired and their strength undermined by soil.

Fine lace frocks need gentle handling certainly, but an extra quantity of mild lukewarm soapsuds to take the place of rubbing, and several clean lukewarm rinses do the trick. After rolling in a towel for a moment to absorb the excess moisture they should be ironed under a thin cloth to prevent the fabric from stretching or the motif from being disturbed.

Embroidery Lends Sophisticated Touch

PROOF that modern embroidery doesn't give that "home-made" look is afforded in the stunning outfit at left. The printed cashmere jacket of the navy blue two-piece dress has a floral design in string color (by Bruyere). The fitted afternoon dress in dark brown crepe, below, has blue and yellow flowers. Today's HEALTH TALK

How Books Are Used To Aid the Suffering

By Logan Clendening, M. D.

There are a large number of books designed for instructing patients in certain diseases—three especially—diabetes, tuberculosis and arthritis. Manuals on diabetes for instructing patients are Joslin's, John's, Wilder's, McHenry's. They give instructions in calculating diets, examining urine, administering insulin, etc. Good tuberculosis manuals are by Hawes and Webb. "Conquering Arthritis," by Margolis, is a valuable book of instruction in that field.

Help the Nervous.

Another large group of books deal with nervous and psychologic troubles—"Outwitting Our Nerves," by Jackson and Salisbury; "The Human Mind," by Menninger; "Discovering Ourselves," by Strecker and Apel, and Adamson's "So You're Going to a Psychiatrist." One patient under treatment found some ideas in Jackson and Salisbury's "Outwitting Our Nerves" which gave her more help for her insomnia than her doctor had.

But the majority of cures along this line comes from reading fiction or general literature. A neurotic personality finds escape in the adventure novels of Zane Grey or the historical romance of Conan Doyle. "The White Company" is calculated to take the sick man's mind off himself for two to three hours.

Proves Satisfying.

Patients of nervous habit tend to identify themselves with some character in a book and they get satisfaction in this way because they are, in imagination at least, successful and happy, which helps their inferiority complex. "Gone With the Wind" was read by two patients, one of which identified herself with Scarlett to her great satisfaction. Another identified her husband, with whom she was on bad terms, with Rhett Butler, the cruel and ruthless individualist.

Modistes Turn To Embroidery For Decoration

By Genevieve Reynolds.

SOPHISTICATES, who once scoffed at embroidery as the "touch of loving hands," now use it to accent their suavest costumes. Appearing on dresses, hat bands, belts, gloves and shoes, embroidery has jumped from grandmother's lavender-scented boxes to the pinnacle of granddaughter's most modern dress.

Applied to sports and dressy clothes alike, one designer after another has indorsed embroidery trim. There are spectator sports hats with letters, leaves or animals embroidered on the crown—also, swagger jackets with Tyrolean figures embroidered in bright wool. Play suits sport embroidery on the skirts. Even Junior's winter clothes show the embroidery influence, for there are snow suits which have snowflakes embroidered on the jacket.

Many Colors Used.

Linen, rayons, dimity, batiste, organdie, net and other light materials lend themselves to many embroidery designs of bright colored threads. Cut like a waistcoat, the top of one two-piece linen frock is colorfully embroidered around the neck and zigzags across the breast in vari-colored flowers. Other dresses show wide lapels in a fine embroidered pattern. Molyneux shows a very simple dress with a short black jacket that has white tulips embroidered on the lapels.

Embroidery on blouses, hats or dresses may be luxuriously splashy or small and delicate. You may have a vestee or collar of tiny design or a panel covered with intricately worked figures or a dress that's embroidered all over.

Rosebuds, butterflies, leaves and other designs are embroidered on pajamas, nightgowns, day and evening slips. Small, gaily worked designs add a touch of bright color to summer gloves. There are minute pink, blue and yellow forget-me-nots on black, blue and white gloves.

Dresses Embroidered, Too.

As for dresses—Schiaparelli shows a wreath of leaves in gold, red and shades of green embroidered around the neck of a dinner dress. Paquin features embroidery on sashes and sleeve bands. Chanel designed a dress with a long full skirt embroidered in pastel threads. Other evening dresses show simple or intricate designs of light or dark color embroidery on wide skirts of net, chiffon, voiles, organdies, marquisettes or organzas.

Armed with grandmother's secrets of quaint designs and painstaking touch plus the new knowledge of greater variety of color and patterns, you can have embroidery to suit your every whim on as many accessories as you choose.

Baked Fish, Milk Form Ideal Dish

Today marks the close of another highly successful National Milk month. Versatile and nutritive milk recipes have been flowing in during the month. An unusually vitalizing recipe is given herewith:

Baked Fish With Milk.

Open up 2 pound trout lengthwise to permit placing the fish flat in the baking dish but do not cut through the skin. Spread the cut side with egg well beaten and sprinkle with 1-3 cup dry bread crumbs and 1 teaspoon salt. Place the fish, cut side down, in a well greased 2-quart oven glass casserole. Pour 1 cup top milk over the fish and dot with 2 tablespoons of butter. Cover and bake in 400 degree F. oven for 40 minutes. Serve with tartar sauce.

Leading Bride To Altar Ends Father's Duty

Then He Steps Aside; Trying to Join His Wife May Mar Ceremony.

By Margaret Wallace

WHAT of the father of the bride? What is his role in the wedding? These questions have been raised by the father of a prospective bride who maintains that fathers are the "forgotten men" at weddings. He writes:

"Nobody really seems to know what the bride's father should do and where he should stand. My daughter is to be married next week and, as other fathers that I have known have been told by their families that they spoiled the weddings, I should like to know what to do."

First Duty, to Pay.

The first duty of the father, after paying for trousseau, wedding gown, church decorations and other details of the wedding and wedding reception, is to escort his daughter to the church and down the aisle to the altar or chancel where the ceremony is to be performed. He must then step back so that the bride and groom may stand together.

This of course takes practice and a great deal of wariness, for unfortunately space is not always allowed for father and he becomes entangled in the bride's train or the bouquets of the wedding attendants. But back he must step and be at hand so there will not be an awkward pause before he makes response to the question of the minister, "Who giveth this woman in marriage?"

There is always a place reserved for him by the side of the bride's mother in the front pew on the left side or the "bride's side" of the church. But unless "the path is clear," father, if he is a wise man, will not attempt to climb over trains and attendants to reach his seat but will stand to one side until the ceremony is over and then quickly join his wife in the pew to escort her from the church after the bridal procession has passed.

Fumbling Spoils Ceremony.

If he can slip into the pew after he has given his daughter in marriage it is good form, but many weddings are spoiled by a fumbling father attempting to take his place in this pew. The mother of the bride has the place of honor in the first seat in the front pew and father must get past her unobtrusively to reach his seat.

The father of the bridegroom has his problems too. He must sit next to his wife, the mother of the bridegroom, on the right side of the church, giving his wife the outside seat. As soon as the bride's mother and father have passed out of their pew in the wake of the wedding procession, the father and mother of the bridegroom should follow.

If the ceremony does not include the giving way of the bride, father's duties are much simpler, for he escorts his daughter up the aisle and can join his wife in the pew at once.

May Move Among Guests.

At the wedding reception, the bride's father and mother as hosts stand at the head of the receiving line, although it has become quite usual for the father of the bride in his role of host not to be in the line but to be free to move among the guests.

This is also true of the bridegroom's father. If he is in the receiving line, he stands next to the bride's mother with his wife on the other side. Then come the bridegroom and the bride. However, some people reverse this order. The maid of honor and the bridesmaids come next. The ushers are not in the receiving line. Sometimes the maid of honor and the bridesmaids form an additional reception line to the one in which the bride and bridegroom and their parents stand.

A WOMAN'S NEW YORK

By Alice Hughes

New York, July 8.

NOTHING LIKE being trite and true, and there is naught truer and triter than the fact that this is a Mecca toward which all pilgrim roads lead—even on the hot days and nights when old man Satan wouldn't have the place free. Yep—they all come here sooner or later, either looking for something or just looking, thanks.

ALICE HUGHES

Only the other day I had the pleasure of witnessing, with these very eyes, the world's champion lady parachute jumper—a soft-spoken, soft-eyed young woman named Mrs. Marie MacMillen. She came here to proposition the local World's Fair people on the matter of jumping six miles out of a plane next summer as one of the tidbits of entertainment for the thundering herd.

She has been barnstorming the Nation with her odd art since 1930—a saga of leaps into nothing which began in Columbus, Ohio. "I get a sponsor who pays me anything from $300 to $500," says Mrs. Mac, "and then I jump. Never been seriously hurt—three cracked ribs, a sprained ankle, and many knockouts, but nothing really bad." At this point a pretty little girl came into the hotel room. "This is my daughter Jerriean." It then developed that the champ parachutess believes firmly in astrology and numerology. "I changed the name of my little girl from Geraldine Ann on the advice of a numerologist," says Mrs. Mac. "And my own from Mary to Marie. And I always ask an astrologer for the lowdown on a date before I make a jump."

Now Mrs. McMillen wants to jump six miles for our fair with her big umbrella and an oxygen tank. A quiet little woman with a living to make. Just another of the pilgrims to our Mecca—looking for something, doing her best.

The famous Stork Club, lunch and supper place of the smart folk, is worried, for one of the big film companies threatens to lure some of its prettiest debutante customers to the movies—girls like Martha Stephenson, Gloria Hatrick and Esme O'Brien. And the Stork loves to have such pretty children as customers—they dress up the place and attract stares from visitors. So it may be the Stork versus Hollywood, and may the better madhouse win!

Rumors still persist in the choicer rumor spots here that Joan Crawford and her Franchot Tone are divorce-bound! Horror! Agony! If you hear anything new on this world-shattering matter, please radio me right away. The suspense is too awful.

* * * *

Always alert for odd divorce causes (a morbid study, indeed), I like best right now the plea of Claire Knapp, of Chicago, who asked for a divorce because her spouse Bob whopped her "because he didn't like my new hat." If all the men who didn't like their wives' new hats thumped them these days, there'd hardly be an unbruised body in the Republic!

Red Ants Run Up, Down Front of Black Bolero

Paris (U.P.).—Schiaparelli has turned pagan in a striking way by making her midseason showing a magnificent collection of "earthy" things.

Red ants run down the front of black shantung boleros. Big brown and blue owls stare out from the buttonholes on wool jackets. Nymphs and naiads are printed on evening gowns. Strawberries turn into buttons or sprout from the peak of a green straw hat. Wheat stalks replace flowers. Gleaming green grasshoppers perch on gold-leaved bracelets. And red acorns sprout on silver lame.

Dowager's Bump, at Back of Spine, Indicates Exercise Is Needed.

By Ida Jean Kain.

THAT LITTLE PINCUSHION of fat on the top veretebra of the spine means habitually bad posture. Even with the worst kind of posture, however, it seems to take from 30 to 40 years to raise a full-grown dowager's bump. This usually begins with the schoolgirl habit of drooping the head forward to study. Later on, the tendency is increased by knitting, reading and working with the head forward and by sleeping with too high a pillow.

Needless to say, dieting will not correct something that is the fault of posture. The preventative is in good posture, but the corrective is in specific exercise. Now there are a number of exercises which help to iron out the dowager's bump, but many of them, unfortunately, increase a tendency to forward head and neck. Never adopt any exercises which repeatedly thrust the head forward.

One of the best exercises is also the simplest. Stretch up with the back of the neck as if your head were being pulled up by a cord. Then, with the neck still stretching upward, bend the head sideward and touch the ear to the shoulder. Then rock the head backward across the nape of the neck and touch the other ear to the shoulder.

While you are working it would pay you to pause occasionally and check up on your head posture. Counteract a tendency to let the head go forward by stretching up with the neck, keeping the chin level. Give your neck a good stretch, and then try to keep it in correct position. That's exercise, too!

POSITION: Stand with the arms folded at the waistline across the back.

MOVEMENT: Force the folded arms upward, and at the same time lower the head backward. By contracting the muscles of the back, lessen the distance between the folded arms and the back of the head. Relax slowly, and repeat several times.

Dieting Will Not Correct Posture Fault, But It Can Be Help.

MOVEMENT: Keeping the arms and legs straight, elevate the body in a straight line off the floor. Hold for a second, relax, and lower to the floor. Repeat five times.

It takes years to acquire a dowager's bumb, but if you really work at it you can get rid of one in short order.

"Hello . . . WHO wants to see me? . . . Jigger? . . . I don't know any Mrs. Jigger . . . Who? . . . Miss Leech? . . . Where from? . . . Centerville? . . . Oh yes, I know; well, now why on earth did they have to show up? . . . Well, I simply CAN'T see them and you can tell them so . . . No, I'm too busy. Tell 'em to come back—no, wait a minute. I guess I might as well get it over. Tell them I'm terribly busy right now, but I can see them for a minute—no, wait, put it this way. Tell them I'm awfully busy but I'd like to see them for a MINUTE."

"Oh how do you do, Mrs. Jigger? Why Elsie Leech! How ARE you? . . . Well I am a little busy right at this time but I do want to talk a minute . . No that's all right. Sit down.

"When did you get in? . . . Have you done any sightseeing? . . . How nice! . . . No, I never do any sightseeing. I'm so terribly rushed all the time . . . Oh no, that's perfectly all right. I'm free now—that is for a few minutes.

"Well, how's everybody in Centerville? . . . That's nice . . . I guess the place hasn't changed much . . . It has? . . . A new creamery! How marvelous! . . . Well, I would like to get back some time only I'm so terribly busy . . . Oh no, that's all right. I'm not rushed at this moment.

"Martha Bunch? . . . Yes I remember her . . . hSe has? . . . Not triplets! . . . Who was it she married? . . . No! . . . Not OLD Mr. Barber! . . . No, no, sit down and tell me all about it . . . Who? . . . Mabel Moon? Was she one of the Jake Moons? . . . She is! Not in Hollywood? . . . How much? . . . Can you beat that! . . . Why no, they were always very ordinary—oh no please don't go yet . . . No, really, you're not taking my time at all.

Well now, is there anybody else I remember? . . . Oh, what about Bill Skeet? . . . He is? . . . Why I can't believe it. . . . How much? . . . Well, of course, Bill always was smart . . . Did you know he used to be an old beau of mine? Say, if you ever see him——No, no, you're not taking my time, at all. No, sit down. It's so nice to see someone from home.

"Well, what else do you know? . . . Well, I don't suppose much does happen there any more . . . Higgins? . . . Yes, I went to school with George Higgins. What! . . . Well who did he swap wives with? . . . Oh no, sit down, sit down. There's a lot I want to talk about.

"Oh say—tell me about my old friend Lide Morgan. Is she flying as high as ever? . . . NO! . . . Well, did she get the divorce? . . . Who was the woman he had the affair with? Margie Flint. Not THAT family of Flints! What! You don't mean LIDE'S keeping boarders! . . . Say what are you doing for lunch? . . . Fine! Then we can go together. There 's so much I want to ask you about . . . Oh no, I've got all the time in the world."

Trip to Italy May Be Made By Pelenyis

Mass Held Here for the Late Count Szechenyi, Former Envoy.

The exodus of diplomats continues as we approach the mid-summer dogdays, and every boat which steams out of New York harbor is apt to have at least one Ambassador or Minister aboard. It's the counselors and first secretaries who carry on the work at embassies and legations during the summer, as that is the time the "big boss" chooses for his vacation.

The Bulgarian Minister and Mme. Pelenyi are the latest to make plans for departure. They hope to sail early next month for their usual stay in Hungary, which this year they will vary with a trip to Italy or the Tyrol, they haven't yet decided which.

Pelenyis Attend Memorial Mass

Both the Minister and Mme. Pelenyi attended the low mass which was held yesterday morning at St. Matthew's in memory of the late Count Jenio Maria Henrik Simon Szechenyi, Hungarian Minister here for a decade, who died on Tuesday in Budapest. Mme. Pelenyi returned from Cleveland, where she has been sojourning, especially to attend the service, which drew a number of those who had known the late count. The fact that it is summer, and most of his former friends here are out of town, kept attendance down to a minimum.

The entire staff of the Hungarian Legation was, of course, at the services yesterday. Baron Paul Schell, the secretary, served as usher and showed dignitaries to their seats.

With the Minister and Mme. Pelenyi sat Richard Southgate, who, as chief of conferences of the State Department, represented our Government at the mass. Behind them were the British Ambassador and Lady Lindsay, Sir Ronald, as dean of the Diplomatic Corps, having been here longer than the other ambassadors, knew the late Count better than most. Szecheny's tour of duty here ended in 1933.

Two Present From German Embassy

Edgar Prochnik former Austrian Minister and now Minister Attache of the German Embassy, and Herbert Scholz, First Secretary of the Embassy, were both present, but did not occupy the same pew. Countess Roberti, slimmer than ever in black silk, was present, as was Miss Rebeca Wellington. Others there included Miss Anne Randolph and Mrs. Robert Whitney Imbrie.

Washington is frequently the scene of such memorial masses for distinguished foreigners. Perhaps the largest and most impressive was that held several winters ago at the Cathedral for the late King George of England.

Masons Are Due In D. C. Tuesday

George Grant Mason, jr., new member of the Civil Aeronautics Authority, and Mrs. Mason, will arrive here on Tuesday from New York, where Mrs. Mason has been staying. They will come by plane and expect to make their home at the Shoreham.

As the former Jane Kendall, Mrs. Mason made her debut here and was renowned for her beauty. Her mother is now Mrs. Ormand Lawson-Johnson, a leader in the smart set of London. Mr. and Mrs. Mason have been residing in Havana, Cuba, for the past few years.

To Motor in Europe This Summer

Underwood & Underwood.

Miss Elizabeth Meyers, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Howard Meyers, and her mother posed for this camera shot one morning recently when they were on a shopping tour. The same automobile you see in the picture above will take them over many a European road this summer. They will sail shortly for an extended tour abroad. Next season, Miss Meyers will make her bow to society.

W. J. Gallmans Arrive in D. C.

Waldemar J. Gallman, who has been United States Consul at Danzig for the past three and a half years, arrived in Washington yesterday with Mrs. Gallman and their infant son. They landed in New York on Thursday on the liner Manhattan.

Mr. Gallman has been ordered to the State Department for duty and has taken an apartment at the Wardman Park Hotel.

Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Gwynn Vanderbilt have returned to Port Washington, L. I., from a wedding trip to Bermuda, and are at Cedar Knoll, the home of Mr. Vanderbilt's mother, Mrs. Margaret Emerson. Their wedding took place there June 8. Mrs. Vanderbilt is the former Miss Manuela Hudson, daughter of George Hudson, of San Francisco.

Mr. and Mrs. Vanderbilt will visit the racetracks in the East, where several of the Vanderbilt horses are running; take a short trip to Maryland to their farm near Baltimore, and return in time for the opening of the Saratoga program July 25.

Party Is Planned At Morristown for Mary F. Pitney.

A prospective Washington debutante, Miss Mary Foster Pitney, will be feted at the first of a series of coming-out parties in her honor on September 16 at the Morris County Golf Club at Morristown, N. J. Hosts will be her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Shelton Pitney, of Morristown.

Miss Pitney will also be presented at the Bachelor's Cotillion in Baltimore in December, and later in Washington while visiting her grandmother, Mrs. Mahlon Pitney.

A granddaughter of the late Supreme Court Justice Mahlon Pitney, the future debutante is a great-granddaughter of the late Vice Chancellor Henry C. Pitney, of New Jersey. On the maternal side she is a granddaughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. Carrington Brown, of Baltimore.

Emily Moore Off for London

Mrs. Mead Moore, Miss Emily Moore, her daughter, and Miss Emlen K. Davies sailed for London yesterday on the Holland-America liner Volendam.

Miss Davies, daughter of Joseph Davies, Ambassador to Belgium, and Mrs. Emlen Davies, of Washington, will be an attendant at the wedding this month in London of Miss Moore and Elbridge Durbrow, of the American Foreign Service.

* * * *

Mr. and Mrs. Richard B. Griffin have returned to the Wardman Park Hotel from Cape Cod, where they have been visiting since the latter part of June. They expect to remain here for several weeks.

Mrs. Griffin is the former Miss Victoire Conley, of Frederick, Md., and Mr. Griffin is the son of Mrs. Paul Bastedo.

Powells Camp In Blue Ridge

Now at their camp in the Blue Ridge Mountains are the dean of the Washington Cathedral, the Very Rev. Noble C. Powell, Mrs. Powell and their sons, Thomas Hooker Powell and Phillip Powell.

Earlier in the summer, the Dean and his family had arranged to make a tour of English cathedral towns and engaged passage on one of the Baltimore mail steamers. A short time afterward the boats were taken off European crossings.

Dr. Rodriguez Sails For Indies and South

Dr. Jose Santiago Rodriguez, Venezuelan Minister to Colombia, sailed from New York yesterday on the Grace liner Santa Elena leaving for West Indies and South American ports.

Dr. Rodriguez has been visiting Washington and during his stay was guest of honor at a luncheon given by Cordell Hull, Secretary of State.

Mr. and Mrs. Gates On Trip to West

Robert Franklin Gates, Washington artist and his artist wife, Margaret Casey Gates, who is executive secretary of the Phillips Memorial Art School, are en route to Colorado and the Rockies for a summer of painting and sketching. They will return late in September.

Their pictures are now hanging in the third annual National Exhibition of American Art in New York City. Mr. and Mrs. Gates were among the five artists selected to represent Washington in the show.

Gen. Marshall Assumes Post In Washington

Brig. Gen. George Marshall, the new assistant chief of staff in charge of the war plans division of the War Department General Staff, arrived in Washington on July 6 and is still "settling in."

Mrs. Marshall, who accompanied him from Vancouver Barracks, Wash., where he was last stationed, has gone on to Fire Island, N. Y., where she has a cottage. She will remain there during the summer, with possibly a trip up to the Adirondacks in August, and then will come to town about the middle of September. With Mrs. Marshall is her daughter, Miss Molly Pender Brown.

This is not Gen. Marshall's first assignment to the Capital. He came here in September, 1919, as aide to Gen. John J. Pershing. He remained until the summer of 1924, when he was sent out to China.

Watkinses Off To Florida Post

Washington has bid good-by to another attractive service couple with the departure this week of Col. Lewis H. Watkins, United States Army, and Mrs. Watkins. They are now on their way by motor to his new post at Jacksonville, Fla.

After closing their house here about six weeks ago, the Watkinses went on a holiday trip to Bermuda. Then before starting for Florida they returned to Washington for a brief stay with Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Armat.

Col. Watkins succeeds Col. Earl North, who has been ordered to duty in Panama. Mrs. North, the former Dorothy Gatewood, who is well known in Washington, where she formerly made her home, plans to spend a short time here before she and her husband settle in at their new station.

The Worthingtons Are Scattered Now With Reunion Over

Less than a month ago the Worthingtons were in the midst of a grand family reunion . . . the occasion being the announcement of the engagement of Miss Ethel Worthington to William James Coad, jr., of Omaha, Nebr. Now they are scattered.

Mrs. Ralph Worthington, jr., is down at River Farm, her place on the Potomac, and has visiting her two nieces, the Misses Mary and Cecilia Burdette, of Jackson, Miss. Her son and daughter-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Worthington 3d, are on their way to join her, coming via the Inland Waterway aboard the cruiser which Ralph himself designed for this trip.

Miss Ethel Worthington will be a bridesmaid this afternoon in Colorado Springs for a classmate, Miss Judith Black, whose wedding to Farrish Jenkins will take place today. On Sunday, Miss Worthington will join Mrs. Adolphus Andrews and Miss Frances Andrews at Eaton's ranch, near Wolf, Wyo., and then she will return to Washington the middle of August, stopping at Omaha.

Also cruising about are Mrs. Worthington's son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Adams Keith Luke, who, between trips here and there, park their boat, the Rianada, at the Indian Harbor Yacht Club, in Greenwich.

Watkinses at Cape Cod.

Mr. and Mrs. C. Law Watkins have now settled in for the summer at their place on Cape Cod. Accompanied by their daughters, Gladys Marie, Elizabeth and Anne they have been the guests in New Haven, Conn., of President Charles Seymour, of Yale University, and Mrs. Seymour. The latter is Mr. Watkins' sister.

About The Town

With Dudley Harmon

WHILE INFORMALITY is one thing which it is definitely difficult to associate with anyone as august as an Ambassador, it can be achieved—as was demonstrated last evening by the Italian envoy, Fulvio Suvich.

DUDLEY HARMON

He gave a dinner party at the embassy which made every guest feel compensated for having to be in sticky Washington on a hot night. There wasn't a hint of stuffiness in the air, and as little thought as is humanly possible in the self-conscious Capital was given to protocol.

* * * *

AN ITALIAN residence wouldn't seem like the real thing without a patio, and that is one of the most attractive features of the embassy. Chairs and tables had been placed last evening on the covered terrace overlooking the courtyard, with its illuminated fountain, which lies between the main building and the chancery. There the guests gathered for cocktails promptly at 8:30, and again after dinner, which was served in the dining room. The Ambassador plans to give a dinner outside in the garden next Wednesday, when, weather permitting of course, he will be host there to a group of men. At present he is a summer bachelor, blonde Donna Matilde having sailed some time time ago to spend the summer in Italy.

The ladies in their pastel summer frocks outlined against the dimly illuminated patio made a truly elegant picture last evening. There was Countess Roberti, wife of the secretary of the embassy, wearing a gown of pale blue crepe; Mrs. Warren Delano Robbins in flowered crepe with a black background; Mme. Folke Wennerberg, wife of the Swedish Counselor, in a blue dress adorned with brilliant clips; Mme. Radu Irimescu, wife of the Rumanian Minister; Mrs. John Wilkins, also in a flowered print and wearing a pearl necklace; Miss Marian Trumbull in green; Frau Hans Thomsen, wife of the German Counselor; Miss Betty Harte in white mousseline, and Miss Rebecca Wellington.

The dinner was given in honor of the French Ambassador, Count de Saint-Quentin. Others present from the masculine contingent were the Rumanian Minister, M. Irimescu; the Undersecretary of State, Sumner Welles; Hubert Scholz, of the Germany Embassy (Frau Scholz is in Hot Springs for the summer); Harold Pittman (Mrs. Pittman has gone to New London, N. H., to put their son in camp); Dr. Thomsen, who has just returned from a three-month sojourn in Germany, and Marquis Benedetto Campmazza, Secretary of the Italian Embassy.

The table was decorated with pale pink carnations set in silver bowls and the menu, ideal for the summer, began with a tasty fish and ended with compotes of fresh raspberries.

OFF to a dude ranch July 30 are Mrs. William Scully and her son and daughter, Hall and Kate Hyde Scully. For the past few winters they have been spending several weeks out of every year at a ranch in Arizona, but this time will try life in New Mexico. They will be gone for the remainder of the summer.

PENDLETON HOGAN, who between writing books finds time to attend many a Capital party, will leave July 29 for a visit with Senator and Mrs. Arthur Vandenberg at Lakewood Farm, their summer place near Holland, Mich. Arthur Vandenberg, jr.'s, activities there have been somewhat curbed recently, as he sprained his ankle badly playing tennis.

Mr. Hogan has just returned from a conference with the New York publishers who will bring out his latest effort, "Mortal Be Proud," in October. Two scientists have been checking over the scientific detail in the book and no less than six experts have been going over the scenes laid in Italy to see that the scenery is described correctly! The novel, part of which is laid in Washington and nearby Virginia, runs to 170,000 words, which is twice as long as the usual work of fiction.

REMEMBER Eddie Melcher, who deserted us for Hollywood a year or two ago? He has now deserted Hollywood for New York, where he is working on the dramatization of a French novel.

Luncheon Given By Venezuelan

Luis Coll-Pardo, Commercial Attache of the Venezuelan Legation, gave a luncheon yesterday at the Mayflower. Guests included the Commercial Attaches of the Latin-American countries, and several members of the Department of State, the Department of Commerce, and the Pan American Union.

Those present were Dr. Pedro P. Aguiar, of the Cuban Embassy; Carlos Campbell, of the Chilean Embassy; Migural E. Quirno-Lavalle, of the Argentine Embassy; Jose Camacho Lorenzana, of the Colombian Legation; Laurence Duggan, chief of the Division of American Republics, State Department; Guerra Everett, chief of the division of commercial laws, and Fletcher H. Rawls, assistant director of the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce, both of the Department of Commerce; Silvino de Silva, foreign trade adviser, and J. L. Colom, chief of the Office of Agricultural Co-operation, both of the Pan American Union.

Williamses Plan Journey to Rio

Mr. and Mrs. Pockman Williams, whose marriage took place here on Tuesday, will sail from New York on July 30 for their new home in Rio de Janeiro. Mr. Williams recently was appointed American vice consul to the Brazilian city.

The wedding, witnessed only by relatives and a few friends, took place in the Bethlehem Chapel of the Washington Cathedral, with Canon Raymond L. Wolvern officiating.

Mrs. Williams is the former Miss Minette Marie Durel, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Durel, of El Paso, Tex. The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Williams, the former having just retired from the American Consular Service in which his last post was Gibraltar.

The bride was given in marriage by her brother, George Durel, jr., of Atlanta, Ga. Stephen Colby Brown, newly appointed vice consul at Shanghai, was best man.

Mrs. Fulton Lewis Busy With Flowers

Mrs. Fulton Lewis is spending hours in the sun cultivating her flowers at Breeze Hill, her country home near Falls Church.

At present she has no less than 4,000 gladioli all blooming nicely. In front of her house in a terraced plot are petunias, roses, nasturtiums and zinnias.

Mrs. Lewis is proudest of her dahlias. Last summer, when she entered 13 varieites in the Washington Dahlia Show, she captured 11 prizes. Then at the Woodridge Show she entered nine varieties and walked off with nine prizes. In her greenhouse she is raising some chrysanthemum cuttings from the prize plants of the Department of Agriculture's show last autumn.

Dr. and Mrs. Otto N. Warner have as their guests at the Wardman Park the former's brother, Dorr E. Warner, of Cleveland, and Eugene Warner, of New York.

To Give Dinner.

Mr. and Mrs. Hugh D. Auchincloss will entertain at a dinner tonight at The Mount, the Newport residence which they are occupying this summer.

Bishop Mitchell, Mrs. Carver Wed

Of interest to Washington is the news of the marriage on June 28 of the Right Rev. Walter Mitchell, Protestant Episcopal Bishop of Arizona, and Mrs. Elsie Carver. The quiet ceremony was performed at high noon at Trinity Chapel in Portland by the Right Rev. William P. Remington, Bishop of Oregon. The couple will make their home after October 1 in Phoenix, Ariz.

Bishop Mitchell, when he was in Washington last spring, preached at both St. John's and St. Thomas' churches. His sister, Miss Maude B. Mitchell, is a resident of this city.

Holy Trinity Memorial Church in Philadelphia on October 15 will be the scene of the wedding of Miss Elizabeth Dunn and Charles R. Hoff, of Alexandria. The bride-to-be is the daughter of Houston Dunn, of Philadelphia, and the late Mrs. Dunn. Mr. Hooff is the son of Mrs. Charles R. Hooff.

* * * *

Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Stedman, who are en route by motor to the West Coast, will not return to their home in Takoma Park until about the middle of August. They are accompanied by their children, Carol Stedman and John Stedman.

In Nebraska, they will visit another son, Bruce Stedman, who is spending the summer on a cattle ranch. Then in Seattle they will visit Mrs. Stedman's sister, Miss Eva Dingle.

Mrs. Borah Returns.

Mrs. William E. Borah, wife of Senator Borah is back in Washington after a stay of several weeks in her home in Boise, Idaho. She returned on Thursday.

Stuart Duncans Plan Party for Swedish Envoy

H. E. Manvilles, Count and Countess Bernadotte Will Be Present.

The Minister of Sweden and Mme. Bostrom will be honor guests at a luncheon to be given tomorrow by Mr. and Mrs. Stuart Duncan at Bonniecrest, their Newport residence. Also in the party will be Mr. and Mrs. H. Edward Manville and Count and Countess Folke Bernadotte.

M. and Mme. Bostrom are accompanying the Swedish royal party on their tour of America. The Crown Prince and Crown Princess were unable to visit the Rhode Island resort, but the former's son, Prince Bertil, is representing his family there and was honor guest at a dinner and dance given last evening by Mr. and Mrs. Beverly Bogert at their home, Anglesea.

Mr. and Mrs. William Woodward will give a dinner for the visitors this evening at the Cloisters and Mr. and Mrs. Manville will entertain them aboard the yacht, on which Prince Bertil, the Bostroms and Count and Countess Bernadotte are guests.

Helen S. Bunten Plights Troth

The engagement of Miss Helen Stewart Bunten to William Henry Dvorachek has been announced by the bride-elect's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Andrew McClure Bunten, of this city. Mr. Dvorachek is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Dvorachek, of Fayetteville, Ark.

Miss Bunten, who is an alumna of George Washington University, is a member of Kappa Kappa Gamma sorority and of the Mortar Board Society. Her fiance was graduated from the University of Arkansas and is a member of Sigma Alpha Epsilon Fraterity, is connected with the United States Engineer Office. The wedding will take place August 27.

Miss Mary F. Fort Plans Her Wedding Here on Thursday

Miss Mary Frances Fort, who makes her home with her brother and sister-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Jardine Carter Fort, has completed plans for her marriage July 14 to Rowland Lyon, son of Mr. and Mrs. Gideon A. Lyon. The ceremony will take place at 8 o'clock in the evening at Christ Church, and will be followed by a reception at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Fort.

Mrs. Lem Banks will serve as matron of honor, and Miss Harriet Fort, her niece, will be maid of honor. Her other attendants include Mrs. Russell Shaw, Miss Anne Fort, another niece, and Miss Sally Fort, a cousin.

Laurie F. Hess will be best man, and the ushers will include John A. Plugge, Lieut. Comdr. Alex Macomb, Dr. Alex Preece, John Rodgers, William E. Huntington and Herndon Phillips.

Several festivities will precede the wedding. Mrs. Lem Banks will give a tea today for members of the wedding group, and Mrs. Richard Radue will entertain at a similar party tomorrow from 5 to 7 at her home on Nineteenth street.

Following the rehearsal on Tuesday, Mrs. James Fort, cousin of the bride, will give a buffet supper for the betrothed couple and their attendants. Tonight Mr. Lyon will give his bachelor dinner and Mrs. Russell Shaw will entertain at a ladies' bridge party for Miss Fort.

D.C. Woman Is Official of Vote League

Mrs. Wagenet Is Named for Nation-Wide Organization.

By Jessie Ash Arndt,
The Post Club Editor.

The National League of Women Voters has taken into its official family another member of the D. C. Voteless League. Mrs. Gordon Wagenet, who for the past year has been chairman of the Department of Government and Child Welfare for the District of Columbia branch, has just been appointed to head the same department for the national organization. Some months ago, Mrs. Paul David, legislative chairman for the District, became secretary to Miss Marguerite Wells, the national president.

The District League, although the only voteless group of "women voters" in the country, has been outstanding for its active interest in community affairs and, its survey of conditions in the Capital. Mrs. Wagenet's final report for her department showed an unusual record, with all items on which the department has worked during the year brought through successfully.

"The department rejoiceth but vaunteth not itself. Well does it know the hazards for each item on the program," says her report. "Success means a beginning, not an ending."

Many Interests Covered in Work

The league had worked for the Juvenile Court bill—now a law—as the legal keystone in the District Child Care program. Mrs. Wagenet referred to it in her report as "a landmark in the work of the District League," and gave recognition to the untiring efforts of Mrs. Jesse Adkins and her committee toward the passage of the bill.

The league also had worked to hold the budget appropriation for the present Receiving Home until careful analysis of juvenile detention needs could be made, and this is now assured. The National Training School for Girls is safe for another year, and the appointment of an expert in child care to the Board of Public Welfare is also assured—two other items in the program of the Child Welfare Department.

It also urged more public health nurses. It completed a birth certificate coding project, codifying certificates covering a period of four years—work designed to aid in the study of infant mortality in the District.

The department had a major part in the May Day health luncheon at the Willard with Mrs. Roosevelt, as guest of honor, and Katharine Lenroot, as principal speaker. Two WPA occupational therapy workers were obtained through the initiative of the league for the children's building at Gallinger Hospital.

Service to District Is Outstanding

These accomplishments under the leadership of Mrs. Wagenet have made her department among those in the league whose work during the past season has been of inestimable value to the District.

As chairman of the department in the national organization, she will send information, on request, to the leagues in the various States and give them assistance in carrying on their programs with reference to their own localities. She has already begun replies to a sheaf of inquiries about the juvenile court law and the wages and hours law.

Although not a charter member of the League of Women Voters, she attended the first convention it held—a meeting in Chicago at which its founder, Mrs. Carrie Chapman Catt, presided. Mrs. Catt, as head of the Suffrage Association, had seen the campaign to obtain votes for women to a successful conclusion. She then turned her attention promptly to the problem of preparing women of the Nation to exercise their franchise intelligently and to take an active interest in public affairs. The league was the result.

Mrs. Wagenet was staying at Hull House at the time of the convention and attended it by invitation of Jane Addams.

Broad Experience Affords Background

She has as foundation for her work in the field of child welfare, a broad experience in social economics. Having married at about the same time she was graduated from the University of California, her work has followed opportunities offered wherever her husband, now director of the Bureau of Unemployment Compensation, Social Security Board, happened to be.

In San Francisco she was successively investigator of the Social Insurance Commission and of the Industrial Welfare Commission. In Seattle, she taught in the department of economics of the University of Washington. During the World War her work was with the War Labor Policies Board in Washington, doing research and writing, including the drafting of a special report titled "International Labor Agreements" for the use of the advisers to the Peace Conference.

The year 1919 found her in New York, writing special reports; 1920 in Chicago, writing for the race relations commission "The Story of the Riot," first chapter in the commission's voluminous report on Chicago's race riot. Since then her career has included a position as statistician for the Judson Health Center in New York, writing a special report for the J. C. Penney Foundation, and teaching her two children, Gordon and Margaret, at her home in Connecticut for three years. Her work on official reports entitled her to membership in the American Statistical Association.

Aides Assigned By Mrs. Giles

Mrs. Calvin Giles last night presided at the first meeting of Columbia Chapter, Women of the Moose, since the beginning of her administration as senior regent. The session was held at Moose Hall.

Mrs. Giles announced the following committee chairmen: Membership, Mrs. Howard Clark; publicity, Mrs. Wade Mitchell; ritualistic, Mrs. Anna Wagner; Mooseheart, Mrs. Margaret Bates; Moosehaven, Mrs. E. T. Deegan; child care and training, Mrs. Samuel Miller; homemaking, Mrs. Mae Sine; library, Mrs. William Sullivan; social service, Mrs. Robert Baldwin; alumni, Mrs. George B. Clark; emblem, Miss Irma Baker; birthday, Miss Margaret Mitchell; ways and means, Mrs. Marie Clark, and bulletin editor, Mrs. Anna Gilbert.

The new regent told her chairmen that she hoped to accomplish through the activities of their committees, an increase in membership; perfection of the exemplification of the new ritual recently adopted; sponsorship of Dixie Hall at Mooseheart for another year, including the establishment of a maintenance fund for that hall; individual contacts with the aged at Moosehaven; cooperation with the local lodge in maintaining the Moose Hall here; entertaining and instructive programs for the regular meetings of the chapter; co-operation with local agencies for the civic betterment of the community; addition of books to the chapter library as well as the Mooseheart and Moosehaven libraries; the establishment of a class in home economics and continuance of the class in child care and training; assistance to the Alumni Association of the Fraternity and the issuance of a monthly Chapter News Bulletin which will keep the members informed on the activities of the chapter.

Madame Chairman

MRS. HARRIETTE QUISENBERRY, of El Paso, international president of the Altrusa Club, will be in Washington Monday and Tuesday on a visit to the local organization in connection with a tour of the Second District.

Mrs. Quisenberry, who was elected last season at the international convention of Altrusa, held in Mexico City, has been attending the council meeting in Chicago, stopped in Cincinnati and Columbus, Ohio, and will spend a day in Pittsburgh before coming here. From the Capital she will go to Richmond, Va., and Greensboro, N. C., and then to New York, whence she will sail for Europe to attend the Women's International Week in Budapest, July 23 to 30.

• • •

ONLY SIX of the 14 members of the local Altrusa Club are in Washington to welcome their international president. The others are away on their vacations. Miss Bertha Nienburg, assistant director of the Woman's Bureau and national chairman of non-partisan public affairs for the club, will entertain Mrs. Quisenberry during her stay in Washington. A dinner is planned in her honor Monday night at Olney Inn, with members of the Baltimore Club among the guests.

• • • •

OTHER Altrusa members who are now in Washington include Miss Bess Goodykoontz, Assistant Commissioner of Education; Miss Olga Steig, chief of the over-the-counter section of the Securities and Exchange Commission; Mrs. Raleigh Gilchrist, who is the "homemaker" member of the club; Miss Sabra Vought, head of the library in the office of education and Miss Libbie Myers, department manager at Jelleff's Connecticut avenue store. Another member, who is here from North Carolina is Miss Sally Marks.

Camp opened Tuesday with 113 girls, 31 staff members and Miss Florence Jennings as director. It is in the George Washington National Forest, Virginia, in beautifully wooded hills, particularly suited to the Girl Scout outdoor program.

The first day in camp is always a busy one. After being assigned to a unit and cabin each girl pays a personal visit to the camp nurse, the camp canteen where she purchases a neckerchief of her unit color, then goes to her unit to unroll her blankets and settle her belongings. Making her bed or cot calls forth the skill she has developed as a second class Girl Scout. Covers must be tucked just so and all personal belongings arranged in a neat precision, for good housekeeping is one of the earmarks of every good camper.

By now each girl has changed from her dress to cool green shorts and a middie with bright colored neckerchief and is ready to go on a tour of the camp with her counselor. Up the hill to the beautiful stone recreation lodge. Music floats down and lures the group on up the hill. Whee-ee—what a view! Mountains, trees—and this magnificent lodge with huge fireplaces at each end, stone terraces, a library.

THIS BUILDING was given to the camp by Mr. and Mrs. Henry H. Flather. It is so beautiful in its structure and design that it sets the tone for all the activities and program throughout the camp. The girls are reluctant to leave, but are urged on by the counselor, who promises to take them to the swimming pool for a dip before supper, and the day is going fast. So down the hill, past the dining hall, through a wooded trail to an open blue pool. Blue sky, white clouds and green trees are reflected in the clear water which comes from the nearby mountain stream.

How the time does fly. This group of girls has now been assigned the duty of setting the tables and serving supper the first day of camp. A dash of green above white legs is seen as the campers cross the lawn to the dining room. Fifteen minutes in which to set the tables before the gong sounds for retreat and supper to follow.

Pavements, traffic, gasoline fumes and city noises are all forgotten in having fun and making new friendships.

Institute Draws District Group

Local members of the Woman's Farm and Garden Association will be among those attending the Virginia Institute of Public Affairs, in Charlottesville, Tuesday, when the program will be under the auspices of the association.

Mrs. Murray Boocock, national president of the organization, and Mrs. Jay Winston Johns, president of the Capital division, which includes Washington and frequently has its meetings here, both are residents of Charlottesville. The institute will continue until July 16.

Sybil Holmes, a member of the Massachusetts State Senate, is one of the speakers to be presented by the Farm and Garden Association. She will discuss "Economic Stability, a Need of Independent Living." Another speaker will be Charles J. Brand, executive director of the American Fertilizer Association and chairman of the American Committee on the International Co-operation on Agricultural Problems."

"The Relationship of Better Nutrition to Economic Stability and World Peace" will be discussed by Dr. Frank Boudreau, director of the Milbank Memorial Fund, and Dr. Elizabeth Moody Shumpeter, of the Harvard Bureau of International Research, will speak on "How Strong Is Japan?"

Mrs. Charlotte Barrell Ware, international co-operation chairman for the Farm and Garden Association, has arranged the program which will open at Cabell Hall at 9:30 a. m. Tuesday. Mrs. Raymond Pearson will be among the local members of the Capital division of the organization who will attend.

Bedtime Stories

By Thornton W. Burgess.

Farmer Brown's Boy Reads the Signs.

For seeing eyes that understand
Are records traced on every hand.
—Farmer Brown's Boy.

The great trouble with most people is that they do not see, for true seeing means understanding. Looking at things without understanding is not seeing. It was the day after Sue had followed Mrs. Snapping Turtle to the plowed ground and watched her partly bury herself in the soft earth. Farmer Brown's boy was having another search for that place, and his cousins, Sue and Sammy, were helping him. He wanted to find the eggs he was certain were buried in the soft earth at the spot where Mrs. Snapper had backed part way into the soft earth.

"You see, Sue," he explained, "when you saw Mrs. Snapper partly buried, and thought she was resting, she was laying her eggs. When she was through she just crawled out and the earth slid off her shell back into the hole and covered those eggs. I guess perhaps she smoothed it over some. Then came that heavy shower and now probably she couldn't find those eggs herself."

"When will they hatch?" Sammy wanted to know.

"Not until September if they do hatch," replied Farmer Brown's boy.

"What do you mean, Tommy, by saying if they do hatch?" Sue asked.

Tommy grinned. "A lot of things can happen between now and September. I might even find them, and then they certainly wouldn't hatch," he replied.

"I think you are horrid, Tommy Brown. Think of that poor mother Turtle going to all the trouble of burying those eggs and you saying you wouldn't let them hatch if you should find them," retored Sue.

Tommy's grin was broader than ever. "Forget that mother Turtle and save your pity," said he. "She has forgotten all about those eggs by this time. She never would know whether or not they hatched. She wouldn't know her own children if she met them. She isn't a real mother, you know. Little Turtles hatch in the ground, dig their way out, and start on their own for the nearest water. They don't know anything about mothers or fathers. And their fathers and mothers know nothing about them. So save your pity for some one who merits it. Look! There won't be any baby Turtles! Somebody else wanted those eggs and got them." He was pointing to a hole dug in one of the furrows.

The hole was a shallow one but quite large, as if whoever had dug it had wanted to make sure of finding all that had been buried there. In the earth thrown out there were some bits of white. Tommy picked up a piece. "Shell," said he. "Turtle egg. Some one had a feast and that some one was Jimmy Skunk."

"How do you know that?" demanded Sammy.

"Use your eyes, Sammy," replied Tommy. "There are prints of his hind feet and there are the prints of his front feet. Well, what do you know about this?" He pointed to another print in the soft earth.

"Well, what about it?" Sammy wanted to know.

Tommy didn't answer right away. He was bent over studying the ground. He moved this way and that, taking care not to step where any prints were visible. Finally he looked up and grinned at his cousins. "I wish that I could have been here last night," said he.

"Why?" Sue asked.

"To see who got the most eggs," replied Tommy. "Bobby Coon found those eggs."

"How do you know?" Sammy asked.

"Because right here is one of his footprints, and right across it is one of Jimmy Skunk's, so of course Bobby's was made first," explained Tommy. "Bobby found where the eggs were hidden and dug them out. Jimmy Skunk happened along and saw what he was doing. Jimmy promptly came over to claim a share. Bobby stayed as long as he dared. You can see right there where Jimmy stamped his feet in warning and right there you can see that Bobby jumped back in a hurry. My guess is that each had a share. Anyway there will be no little Snappers hatched out this year and that is just as well," he concluded.

Final Meeting Of Pen Women In Chevy Chase

Mrs. Votaw Gives Plans for Next Year; Group Studies Charts.

The Chevy Chase Branch of the National League of American Pen Women held its final meeting of the season yesterday—a luncheon at the Shoreham Hotel, with Mrs. Heber H. Votaw, the president, presiding.

Mrs. Votaw outlined her plans for next year's program. One of the projects will be co-operation with other chapters toward the establishment of a national headquarters. The National League, of which Mrs. Audrey Wurdemann Auslander is president, has maintained offices for some years in the Willard Hotel, but has never occupied a home of its own.

Mrs. Votaw yesterday distributed charts tracing the history of art, poetry, music, architecture, philosophy and exploration in the names of the men who had achieved greatness in each field. The chart followed the course of achievement from 1260 A. D. to the present. Under the program plan for the branch, each member will be asked to select the field in which she is interested and to write on or discuss its development as it appears in the works of the great men whose names are associated with it.

Euterpean Club First Used Chart

Mrs. Votaw conceived the plan last winter in connection with the program for a group of girls she organized into the Euterpean Club. There were about 30 members between 18 and 30, whom she taught in a Sabbath School class at the Seventh Day Adventist Church in Takoma Park. She made the statement to them that she believed God's message was given to mankind through music, poetry and art as well as through the Bible. They decided to investigate. In meetings in the recreation room of her home, twice a month, they began a study from this basis and, with Mrs. Votaw, worked out the chart which she gave yesterday to the Pen Women.

As an example of the way in which they found the Bible coordinated with immortal works in art, music and literature, Mrs. Votaw explained that in connection with the study of the story of Creation as given in Genesis they had studied Michaelangelo's paintings, Milton's "Paradise Lost" and "Haydn's oratorio, "The Creation." She pointed out that all expressed the same conception of creation in different ways.

Outstanding Speakers Discuss Subject

Most of the girls in the Euterpean Club were from the Washington Missionary College at Takoma Park and to add interest to their study, Mrs. Votaw invited to their meetings, outstanding authorities who discussed the composers, writers and artists under consideration.

At the close of the season the girls proved themselves familiar with all of the great names on the chart and their significance.

The Pen Women look forward to embarking on the new study prgram both from the standpoint of its unusual approach and the opportunity it will offer to gain a more comprehensive view of the development of the arts through the centuries.

Serving with Mrs. Votaw as officers of the branch for the coming year are Mrs. Ida Luek, vice president; Mrs. Lucia Ramsey Maxwell, secretary; Mrs. Gene Wright, treasurer, and Mrs. Emma Flack, historian.

How Popular Is President Roosevelt Today!

Gallup polls have shown that the President's popularity has been on the way down for months. But polls in previous years have also shown that he becomes more popular when Congress has adjourned. WASHINGTON'S HOME NEWSPAPER

President Asks Kentuckians to Elect Barkley

Roosevelt

anced not merely by the efforts of the Chandler administration, but with Federal aid, declaring that Chandler himself had never left Washington empty handed in his appeals for Federal funds.

The President referred to "charges and counter charges of the use of political influence exerted on primary voters."

He said it "is contrary to direct and forceful orders from Washington for any Federal employe to tell those under him how to vote, and I trust that the same rule applies to those who work for the State of Kentucky."

Barkley had boarded the Presidential special at Chillicothe, Ohio, and Chandler, clad resplendently in white, got on the train at Cincinnati, across the Ohio River, to ride as far as Covington.

Referring directly to Chandler's candidacy in opposition to Barkley, the President said:

"I have no doubt that Gov. Chandler would make a good Senator for Kentucky but I think he would be the first to acknowledge that as a very junior member of the Senate, it would take him many, many years to match the national knowledge, the experience and the acknowledged leadership in the affairs of our Nation of that son of Kentucky of whom the whole Nation is proud—Alben Barkley."

Under a blazing sun that beat down upon an overflowing crowd, including thousands who sat on rails along the grandstands, the President opened his address with praise of Barkley and concluded it on the same note.

Referring inferentially to Chandler's budget-balancing claims, the President said:

"Many of our States, because of help from the National Government, have got back into the "black" again—my own State of New York and your own State of Kentucky among them. I am heartily glad of it. Your Governor, my Governor, and a good many Governors are able to go before their people and announce proudly that they have balanced budgets. More power to their arms."

Then, turning to national budget problems, he remarked that in the past six years Kentucky received for relief, PWA and other New Deal projects, $280,000,000.

"Add that up when next you wonder why the National Government hasn't balanced its budget over the last six years," he said.

"If the Federal Government had not done at least some of these things the State governments would probably not have done them at all out of their own resources."

Bulkley Called "Toiler."

In the earlier address at Marietta, the President—speaking also under a broiling sun—expressed confidence the voters of Ohio would "elect forward-looking representatives" and referred affectionately to Bulkley as "Bob," speaking of him as one "toiling over the drafting . . . of statutes" for the protection of the people's welfare.

Mr. Roosevelt was introduced to the 100,000 listeners in Musgingum Park by former Gov. George White, who opposes Bulkley for re-election. The President's reference to the Senator thereby became more pointed. White was chairman of the Federal commission celebrating the 150th anniversary of the opening of the Northwest Territory. It was in Muskingum Park that Gen. Arthur W. St. Clark took the oath as first Governor of the Northwest Territory.

The crowd, which included a group wearing the buckskins and homespun garments of pioneer days, listened for the most part in silence as the President defended vigorously the policies of his Administration. He said its "protective statutes" in effect were mutual insurance companies and a return to the mutual self-help practices of the Northwest's early settlers.

"Let us not be afraid to help each other," Mr. Roosevelt said. "Let us never forget that Government is ourselves and not an alien power over us. The ultimate rulers of our democracy are not a President and Senators and Congressmen and Government officials but the voters of this country.

"I am sure they (the American people) know we will always have a frontier—of social problems—and that we must always move in and bring law and order to it. In that confidence I am pushing on. I am sure you will push with me."

Gov. Davey on Platform.

Bulkley faces a difficult primary race against White on August 9. The reference to him, it was expected, would be interpreted as indorsement of a liberal candidate in line with the President's fireside chat assertion that he had a right to support progressive candidates.

On the platform with the President were other Ohio Democrats, notably Gov. Martin L. Davey, frequently at odds with the New Deal, and Charles Sawyer, Democratic national committeeman for Ohio and Davey's opponent for the gubernatorial nomination.

White, who was Governor for two terms beginning in 1931, announced this year that he would oppose Bulkley for the Democratic senatorial nomination. He said he favored New Deal objectives but "was without the backing of a machine, group or faction of the party."

Chandler Still in Ring.

Covington, Ky., July 8 (AP).—Gov. A. B. Chandler wasn't, in his own words, "knocked out" by President Roosevelt's political blessing today on Senator Alben W. Barkley.

"Any time the President can't knock you out, you're all right," declared Chandler after bidding farewell to the President on his special train.

A crowd immediately surged around the linen-suited Governor. There were numerous requests for autographs.

The Governor, who seeks to unseat Barkley in the Democratic primary next month, said:

"The speech (referring to the President's) was all right. He didn't say anything he already hadn't said, and that was he was for Barkley."

Declares "We're In."

He signed a few more autographs, wiped perspiration from his face, looked around the crowd and asserted:

"We're in."

He repeated that statement several times, adding, in response to a question, that he didn't want to ride on the President's special train, because "one man on the President's coattails is enough."

That Kentuckians enjoyed the spectacle was evidenced by the remark of one man:

"Some show, wasn't it?" he asked a companion.

"Yeah," was the reply, "all we gotta do now is vote."

Sat on President's Right.

Returning to his train, the President sat in the right hand corner of the car. Beside him was Chandler and in the other corner was Barkley.

Gov. Chandler did not board the train, but as it pulled away he waved to Marvin McIntyre, the President's secretary, and exclaimed "Goodby Mac, I'll see you in Washington when I'm a Senator."

Asked what he thought of the President's invitation to join him in the automobile, Gov. Chandler replied:

"I think it was very nice of the President and it was also nice of him to say in his speech that I made a good governor, for I did make a good governor."

Will Speak at Arkansas.

Little Rock, Ark., July 8 (AP).—President Roosevelt will interrupt his transcontinental tour tomorrow for a platform speech at Booneville, Ark., about 10 a. m., central standard time.

Supporters of Senator Hattie W. Caraway immediately predicted the Chief Executive would indorse her for renomination at the August 9 Democratic primary.

Representative John L. McClellan, who is opposing Mrs. Caraway for Senator, was scheduled for addresses in southeast Arkansas tomorrow. His headquarters was uncertain whether he would alter his plans.

Mrs. Caraway has consistently supported New Deal policies.

McClellan voted against some Roosevelt proposals, among them the wage-hour bill. In the senatorial campaign he announced his support of some objectives of the New Deal, but said he would not be a "rubber stamp."

Text of the President's Address on Behalf of Senator Barkley

By the Associated Press.

Covington, Ky., July 8.—The text of President Roosevelt's address at Latonia Race Track follows:

I am glad to be back in Kentucky.

Every time I have come into the State in the past few years, I have not been able to forget a certain trip which I made across a large part of Kentucky in the autumn of 1932—six years ago. On that occasion, though I had been traveling in many States, what I saw in Kentucky stirred me more deeply than I had been stirred in my life—except in the days during the World War when I saw the misery and the suffering on the field of France.

On my Kentucky visit in 1932 my train moved slowly from Covington to Louisville and then in southeasterly direction, through villages and farming sections and mining districts. As we stopped at small stations crowds congregated. Hunger stared out at me from the faces of men and women and little children.

Crowds Shivered Then.

It was a chill day and for the actual want of clothes people stood there shivering. They were looking up at two men. One was a candidate for the Presidency who was going about the country telling people that the national situation was grave—so grave that the time for promises had come to an end and the time for action was at hand.

The other man on that train platform was a Senator from Kentucky—a man of experience in the affairs of his State and of the Nation—a man who had fought valiantly as a member of the then Democratic minority, against doing nothing and in favor of action to meet growing needs.

On that day's trip, I know that Senator Barkley and I were thinking little in terms of partisan politics. We were thinking in terms of American needs—not just Kentucky's needs—but the deep-seated wants that had come into the lives of millions of people scattered throughout every State in the Nation. Tears were in our eyes. We were affected not alone by misery but by fortitude—because we realized that these people still had faith—faith in the institutions of the United States—faith in the Government of the United States—faith that their Government would, before it was too late, come through.

On that trip, too, between stops, your Senator and I talked of many things. We talked of economic conditions and social conditions—of the thousands of things that had to be done in the East, in the Middle West and in the South and in the Far West if America as a Nation was to carry on.

I shall never forget that day, because I saw things with my own eyes that made me think more deeply about the fundamentals of life than I had ever thought before, and because I had an opportunity, that day, to talk of these things with a great American who had been on the "firing line" for years and had striven to avert disaster and was willing and able to give practical advice for the cure of it.

I will not recount the progress of the intervening years. You know the story of them as well as I do. I wish that I could follow that same railroad route today. I wish that I could look into the faces of the same men and women and children I saw then. And if you could do it, I know very well that the facts of today would give the lie to those who seek the overthrow of this Administration by telling you, as they have been telling you for six months or more, that conditions in the United States can be compared with the conditions of 1932. You and I have the intelligence and first-hand knowledge to laugh at this kind of political ballyhoo.

I will not go into the story of these six years. You know that your bank deposits are safe; that the problem of unemployment is far less serious; that more wheels of industry are turning; that the farmers are better off in a hundred ways; and, most important of all, that our people are not half-clothed or half-starving.

But I do want to speak to you briefly of one part of the broad policy of your Government during these six years—only a part, mind you, but an essential part of a very big whole.

In the winter of 1932-1933, because of inaction on the part of the Federal Government, thousands of communities and many of the States of the Nation were facing bankruptcy. And as Governor of New York for four years, because I could get no assistance from Washington, I had been compelled, with the approval of my State Legislature, to care for the human needs of tens of thousands of the citizens of that State. Because I could get no assistance from Washington I was compelled to create State deficits—to put the State treasury into the red—in order to feed the destitute and give work to the unemployed; in order to care for the thousands of people who had become dependent on the State for food and shelter.

Recalls State Deficits.

And, when I left Albany, the deficit of the State of New York was nearly $100,000,000.

That was the experience of most States. They could get no help from the National Government to meet national problems. They were in debt and their borrowing capacity was close to an end. That was also the experience of hundreds of cities and counties. Taxes were not being paid to them and if they had had to liquidate they would have been insolvent.

Your Federal Government—the one that started on March 4, 1933—recognized this and promptly sought to restore the credit and the finances of the States, cities and counties. We put a national shoulder under national problems. We undertook a great program and work relief paid for by the Federal Government, thus helping every community to do a thousand necessary jobs which individual communities could not afford to do by themselves—public works on a matching basis thus enabling States and cities and school districts and counties to build buildings and bridges and roads and flood control works which they could not afford to do alone; work which took the support of men, women and children off the backs of communities.

Kentucky's Out of Red.

In the six years that have intervened, many of our States, because of that help from the National Government have got back into the "black" again—my own State of New York—and your own State of Kentucky among them. And I am heartily glad of it. Your Governor, my Governor, and a good many other Governors are able to go before their people and announce proudly that they have balanced budgets.

More power to their arms!

I am happy and proud of how much the Federal Government has been able to help Kentucky and the other States. It would surprise many people to know how much that help has been. Take Kentucky, for instance:

1. In these six years the Federal Government has allotted to Kentucky in new kinds of Federal expenditures for relief, work relief, public works, the education of youth, farm rehabilitation and crop benefits—approximately $280,000,000.

2. In these six years the Federal Government has spent in more traditional forms of Federal expenditure, such as matching funds for State highways on a 50-50 basis, aid to the State for the building of State institutions, flood control and river work, Federal public buildings and the maintenance of the regular agricultural services—at least another $50,000,000.

Cites Federal Loans.

3. In these six years Federal loans, through RFC, HOLC, Farm Credit Administration and other lending agencies—extending the due date of obligations, scaling the interest on obligations, giving financial institutions and borrowers alike a chance to reorganize and turn around—have averted from the taxable wealth and the taxable citizens of Kentucky the cost of bearing the liquidation of the 1929 depression. That, I conservatively estimate, has saved the financial resources of the State of Kentucky several hundred millions of dollars.

4. And finally, in these six years the prompt willingness of the Federal Government to take care of flood damage, to begin the prevention of soil erosion, to invest in the protection of Kentucky's natural capital and property while Kentucky had to save on those items, is worth more incalculable millions of dollars.

Add all that up when you wonder why the National Government hasn't balanced its budget over the last six years.

If the Federal Government had not done at least some of these things, the State governments would probably not have done them at all out of their own resources. By assistance like this, not only in Kentucky, but in other States, State treasuries have been able to get out of the "red" and into the "black"—and that holds true for the credit of almost every municipality and county throughout the country.

U. S. Went in Debt.

It has taken courage for the Federal Government to go into the "red" to help State and local governments get out of the "red" or stay out of the "red." But it has been worth it.

Your Governor deserves due credit for getting this State on a sound financial basis. He never came to Washington and went away empty-handed. And I say to you that I have considered him and do consider him a friend of mine and that I think he has done a good job as the chief executive of his State.

At the same time, I have no hesitation in saying certain things in the presence of Alben Barkley.

You are having a primary campaign for the choice of the Democratic candidate for the United States Senate. Both candidates are men of ability. Both are representative Kentuckians.

I want to make it definite and clear to you that I am not interfering in any shape, manner or form in the primary campaign in Kentucky. I do not reside in this State—you do. You have the absolute right to vote for any candidate in accordance with the dictates of your conscience. No outside source ought to drag on you.

Asserts Right to Speak.

Nevertheless, I have a clear right to tell you certain facts relating to the National Government and national problems which I believe to be true. The people of Kentucky have a vital part and stake in these facts and problems. As one of the great States of the Union, Kentucky is interested in National affairs and is therefore entitled to know every angle of National affairs.

At this stage of world and domestic issues, leadership is important to the people of the whole country as well as to the people of each State.

We in this country operate principally through what we call the party system because we believe that party responsibility eliminates a large part of the confusion which would result from a complete lack of party leadership. That leadership is necessary not only in the executive branch of the Federal Government but in the two Houses of the Congress of the Federal Government.

Barkley Held "Liberal."

In the upper House, the Senate, the leadership of the majority party has been intrusted to Senator Barkley, the senior Senator from Kentucky. I do not need to tell you of his own experience in all of our national problems. By virtue of that experience and of ability and seniority, he serves on major committees which deal with major legislation, and in addition to this, speaks with the voice of the majority leader.

His outlook on affairs of government is a liberal outlook. He has taken a major part in shaping not only the legislation but the actual policies of these past six years.

I have no doubt that Gov. Chandler would make a good Senator from Kentucky—but I think he would be the first to acknowledge that as a very junior member of the Senate, it would take him many, many years to match the national knowledge, the experience and the acknowledged leadership in the affairs of our Nation of that son of Kentucky, of whom the whole Nation is proud, Alben Barkley.

One word more. You have heard charges and counter charges of the use of political influence exerted on primary voters. Charges have been bandied back and forth that employes of the Federal Government and workers on relief are being directed how to vote. You have heard charges that State employes—people on the State pay roll and their friends are being directed how to vote.

Denies Vote Pressure.

Let me assure you that it is contrary to direct and forceful orders from Washington for any Federal Government employe to tell those under them how to vote and I trust that the same rule applies to those who work for or under the State of Kentucky.

Personally, I am not greatly disturbed by these stories because I have an old fashioned idea that the voters of Kentucky, no matter whom they employ or by whom they are employed, are going to vote their own personal convictions on primary day. That is as it should be.

You live on a great river, the Ohio. And, by the way, the first steamboat which navigated this river was built and run by old Nicholas Roosevelt, my great grandfather's cousin. Slowly but surely we are getting the old river under control, and I am equally certain that the people of America are slowly but surely getting their social and economic problems under control.

U.S. Hangs Bandit In Michigan Jail

Milan, Mich., July 8 (AP).—Anthony Chebatoris, convicted of killing Henry Porter, a bystander, while fleeing after an abortive attempt to rob the Chemical State Bank at Midland, Mich., last September 29, was hung today in the yard of the Federal detention farm here.

Michigan's first legal execution in 108 years marked the end of a long trail of crime for Chebatoris, bank robber and murderer. He became the first person to pay with his life for a violation of the national bank robbery act, a Federal offense.

His body, unclaimed by relatives, awaited consignment to a potter's field.

Tydings Hits FHA's Ouster Of His Friend

Tydings

added that W. B. Flanders, deputy FHA administrator in Washington, had stated yesterday at the moment of his dismissal that his efficiency was not in question.

Statement Held Untrue.

Flanders said flatly last night here that Webb's statement was "not true."

Webb also asserted that Flanders, in telling him that changes were to be made in other offices as well as Baltimore, had said: "The best way out for you is to resign and make a statement saying that you wish to return to private business as your reason."

Webb continued by declaring that "I am fully conscious I am a victim of political warfare which the National Administration is waging to prevent the election of Senator Tydings. I would be deeply ungrateful to the Senator if I did not reaffirm now my loyalty to him. When he obtained my appointment he cautioned me never to play politics in office. I have never done so. Now that I am out of office, however, I shall bend every effort to see that he is re-elected."

Sees Purge Plotted.

Tydings declared in a heated statement from his headquarters in Baltimore that he had been informed nearly two weeks ago a conference of New Deal strategists had decided to oust Webb and many other job-holders owing their posts to either himself or Senator George L. Radcliffe, his colleague, who is managing Tydings' campaign against the diminutive Lewis, who studied his way out of a coal mine into a position of long-standing leadership among House liberals.

Tydings said efforts to kill his campaign were being made in two directions—"first by slander and libel in articles wholly untrue reflecting on both Mrs. Tydings and me, and second by political pressure on men whom I, jointly with Senator Radcliffe, have recommended for office."

Tydings May Ask Quiz.

In Washington, Senator Morris Sheppard (Democrat), of Texas, chairman of the Senate Campaign Investigating Committee, said that while he did not know of the Webb case, his committee "would be glad to investigate" if Senator Tydings made representations.

Tydings said last night that "at this moment" he contemplated no action, but that he had the matter under advisement and would decide shortly whether to press for Senate investigation.

Sheppard revealed yesterday, incidentally, that a secret investigation had been begun of a "serious complaint" of political misuse of public funds in an unnamed State by an unnamed Senatorial candidate. He said the case "might develop into something." A special investigator has been dispatched to study the charges.

Hits at Persecution.

Tydings struck at the Webb ouster as "political persecution" and predicted that Maryland voters would express their disapproval at the polls September 12. He asserted that Webb's post, filled yesterday by E. Lester Muller, assistant State director, as acting director, would be held over until after the election, when, if the Lewis candidacy were successful, it would be awarded to "someone who is now actively assisting Mr. Lewis." He charged:

"This inducement to the man in question was offered to secure his aid in the campaign."

Tydings said he had wired Stewart MacDonald, FHA administrator, on June 29, asking if reports of Webb's coming ouster were true. He received no reply, he said, declaring "the conspirators were caught red-handed." Day before yesterday he sent another wire and this was answered by MacDonald yesterday to the effect that Webb was to be removed.

Others Removed.

FHA officials here said the move, made in the interests of efficiency only, followed others made in Los Angeles, Birmingham, Atlanta, Minneapolis and Cleveland, where other administrators without outstanding efficiency records also were removed in the past few weeks.

It was indicated that Webb actually "beat us to the draw," according to FHA Press Officer Robert Smith, who declared that while his removal had been contemplated for some time, Webb made the first move by insisting he wanted to return to private business as a real estate man.

Lewis made no immediate statement in the matter to answer Tydings' expression of "surprise" that Lewis had consented to the move to discharge Webb.

His House Mortgaged.

Tydings, extending the battle-front over wider territory, referred to the Lewis campaign slogan, "The Man From the Mines vs. the Man From the Mansion," indirectly by retorting:

"The house I live in, I am not ashamed to say, has a $30,000 mortgage on it."

He denied reports his campaign fund would reach $250,000, declaring: "We have raised about $4,000 and are not taking in enough money to meet our printing costs and legitimate needs."

Some observers regarded the Webb resignation as a serious blow to the Tydings' candidacy on the grounds it might instill in other Federal jobholders in the State fears for their future unless they declared for Lewis. Most are appointees of either Tydings or Radcliffe.

Scion of Levi Leiter Is Sued for Divorce

Chicago, July 8 (AP).—Colin Leiter Campbell, grandson of the late Levi Z. Leiter, Chicago merchant, was sued for divorce today by Mrs. Elizabeth Campbell, who charged desertion.

The suit asked for custody of two children, Alison, 4, and Juliet, 3. Mr. and Mrs. Campbell were married December 5, 1932, at Tulsa, Okla., and separated January 10, 1937. She is the former Elizabeth Cook Lynch, of Tulsa.

Roosevelt's Speech in Ohio

By the Associated Press.

Long before 1788 there were white men here, "spying out this land of Canaan." An intrepid outpost breed they were—the scouts and the skirmishers of the great American migration. The sight of smoke from neighbors' chimneys might have worried them. But Indians and redcoats did not.

Long before 1788, at Kaskaskia and Vincennes, with scant help from the seaboard, they had held their beloved wilderness for themselves—and for us—with their own bare hands and their own long rifles. But their symbol is Vincennes, not Marietta.

Here, with all honor to the scouts and the skirmishers, we celebrate the coming of a different type of men and women—the first battalions of that organized army of occupation which transplanted from over the Alleghenies whole little civilizations that took root and grew. They were giving expression to a genius for organized colonization, carefully planned and ordered under law.

Then Came the Settler.

The men who came here before 1788 came as Lief Erickson's men to Vineland, in a spirit all of ad² venture. But the men and women of the Ohio Company who came to Marietta came rather like the men and women of the Massachusetts Bay Company to Boston an organized society, unafraid to meet temporary adventure, but serious in seeking permanent security for men and women and children and homes. Many of them were destined to push on, but most came intending to stay. Such people may not be the first to conquer the earth, but they always last possess it.

Right behind the men and women who established Marietta 150 years ago moved that instrument of law and order and co-operation—Government. A representative of the National Government entered Marietta to administer the Northwest Territory under the famous Northwest ordinance. And what we are celebrating today is this establishment of the first civil government west of the original 13 States.

Three provisions of the Northwest ordinance I always like to remember.

Religious Liberty Cited.

It provided that "no person demeaning himself in a peaceable and orderly manner shall ever be molested on account of his mode of worship or for religious sentiment in the said territory."

It provided that "religion, morality and knowledge being necessary to good government and the happiness of mankind, schools and means of education shall forever be encouraged."

And it provided for the perpetual prohibition of slavery in the territory.

Free, educated, God-fearing men and women—that is what the 13 States hoped the new West would exemplify. It has well fulfilled that hope.

Every generation meets substantially the same problems under its own different set of circumstances. Anyone speculating on our great migration westward is struck with the human parallel between the driving force behind that migration and the driving force behind the great social exploration we are carrying on today.

Most of the people who went out to Ohio in 1788 and who followed wave on wave for another hundred years went to improve their economic lot. In other words, they were following the same yearning for security which is driving us today.

Joy of Possession.

At the end of the wagon ruts there was something worth the physical risks. The standard of life in a log cabin amid fields still blackened with half-burned stumps was not high, but it was certain. A family, or at most a township, could be a whole self-sufficing economic system—plenty of food to eat if a man would but reach out and shoot or cultivate it; plenty of warm clothes if the women of the family were willing to spin; always a tight roof over the family's head if the little community would respond to the call for a roof-raising.

Whatever he used was a man's own; he had the solid joy of possession—of owning his home and his means of livelihood. And if things did not pan out there was always an infinite self-sufficiency beckoning westward—to new land, new game, new opportunity.

Under such conditions there was so much to get done which men could not get done alone, that the frontiersmen naturally reached out to government as their greatest single instrument of co-operative self-help with the aid of which they could get things done. To them the use of government was but another form of the co-operation of good neighbors.

Indispensable Instrument.

Government was an indispensable instrument of their daily lives, of the security of their women and their children and their homes and their opportunities. They looked on government not as a thing apart—as a power over our people. They regarded it as a power of the people, as a democratic expression of organized self-help, like a frontier husking bee.

There were worried legalists back in the seaboard towns who were sure it was unconstitutional for the Federal Government to help to put roads and railroads and canals through these new territories—who were sure that the Nation would never get back the money it was plowing into development of the natural and human resources of the Northwest.

But Abraham Lincoln, who incarnated the spirit of the people who were actually living in the Northwest Territory, summed up their attitude when he said: "The legitimate object of government is to do for a community of people whatever they need to have done, but cannot do at all, or cannot do so well, for themselves, in their separate and individual capacities."

A Mental Migration.

Today under new conditions and a whole Nation, the original 13 States and all the West and South that has grown out of them is on a mental migration, dissatisfied with old conditions, seeking like the little band that came to Marietta to create new conditions—of security. And again the people see an ally in their own Government.

Many a man does not own his cabin any more; his possessions are a bank deposit.

Scarcely any man can call his neighbors to raise his roof any more—he pays a contractor cash and has to have mortgage financing to find the cash. And if that financing is of the wrong kind or goes bad—he may need help to save his home from foreclosure.

Once old age was safe because there was always something useful which men and women, no matter how old, might do to earn an honorable maintenance. That time is gone; and some new kind of organized old-age insurance has to be provided.

In these perplexities the individual turns, as he has always turned, to the collective security of the willingness of his fellows to co-operate through the use of Government to help him and each other. The spirit of the frontier husking bee is found today in carefully drafted statutes—statutes insuring bank deposits; statutes providing mortgage money for homes through FHA; statutes providing help through HOLC for those in danger of foreclosure. The cavalry captain who protected the log cabins of the Northwest is now supplanted by legislators, like Senator Bulkley, toiling over the drafting of such statutes and over the efficiency of government machinery to administer them so that such protection and help of government can be extended to the full.

Insurer of Security.

On a thousand fronts government—State and municipal as well as Federal—is playing the same role of the insurer of security for the average man, woman and child that the army detachments played in the early days of the old Northwest Territory. When you think it through, at the bottom most of the great protective statutes of today are in essence mutual insurance companies, and our recent legislation is not a departure from but a return to the healthy practices of mutual self-help of the early settlers of the Northwest.

Let us not be afraid to help each other—let us never forget that government is ourselves and not an alien power over us. The ultimate rulers of our democracy are not a President, and Senators and Congressmen and Government officials but the voters of this country.

I believe that the American people, not afraid of their own capacity to choose forward-looking representatives to run their Government, want the same cooperative security and have the same courage to achieve it, in 1938 as in 1788. I am sure they know that we will always move in to bring law and order to it. In that confidence I am pushing on. I am sure you will push on with me.

to-the-land platform" and William G. McRae, Atlanta attorney and Townsendite.

New Dealers supporting Camp count on a split in the anti-New Deal vote between Talmadge and George. They say outspoken support by the President and possible swing of Gov. Rivers' State machine to Camp would make him virtually impossible to beat.

"Favorite Son" in 1928.

Friends of "George of Georgia" point to his past popularity throughout the State, his "favorite son" candidacy for the Presidency in 1928, and the fact that many intense New Dealers respect him as a man of independence and stature despite his opposition to some Administration policies.

They also contend the probable nomination of Smith in nearby South Carolina may have its effect on the Georgia primaries one week later. The South Carolina primaries are August 30, and the Georgia contest follows September 6.

George's colleague, New Deal-minded Senator Russell, is keeping out of the contest.

House Committee Named for Study Of Toll Highway

Membership of a Congressional committee to promote a proposed toll highway from Jersey City to Washington was announced yesterday by Representative Drew (Democrat), of Pennsylvania.

In an effort to obtain wholehearted support for the project, the committee would work with State highway departments and other State authorities.

Drew said yesterday the highway would be built by the States with Federal aid. He would be chairman of the executive committee.

Members are Representatives Dailey, Boland of Pennsylvania, O'Neil of New Jersey, Kennedy of Maryland, and Allen of Delaware.

The general committee would include Representatives Wolverton, Wene, Sutphin, Powers, Eaton, McLean, Thomas, Seger, Hartley, Towey, Norton, and Hart of New Jersey, Sacks, McGranery, Bradley, Dorsey, Wolfenden, Frey, Ditter, Swope, Walter, Haines and Snyder of Pennsylvania, and Godsborough, Cole, Palmisano, Gambrill and Lewis of Maryland.

Mountain Crash Kills Girl, Hurts 3

Cumberland, Md., July 8 (AP).—Nellie Combs, 23, was killed and three others were injured, one seriously, when a car in which they were riding crashed into a headwall on Gum Mountain, near here, during a heavy fog last night.

Edgar Combs, brother of the dead woman, was taken to Buckhannon Hospital with a fractured skull. Roy Haines, 29, suffered a fractured hip and Howard Bennett, fourth member of the group, received minor injuries. The four were driving to Clarksburg, W. Va.

*X — WASHINGTON: SATURDAY, JULY 9, 1938 — 13

Over the Coffee

By Harlan Miller

Presidential Special, Covington, Ky., July 8, 1938.

As President Roosevelt's open car rolled up to the park at Marietta for his first speech his eyes fell on a big sign in red-and-black letters:

Happy Chandler ... irrepressible.

• • • •

The first crowds to greet the President were looking crowds rather than yelling crowds. Open-mouthed with curiosity, it was virtually impossible for them to shout, and they said it with handclaps at their first glimpse. Later, when the first awe of the Presidential presence had subsided, there were some cheers.

• • • •

One little old lady, however, gave him reverent tribute. After he had left the platform at Marietta and stepped into his car she bent down and touched the spot where his foot had been a minute earlier.

Around the candidates who are not basking in the Presidential favor there seems to cling a faint aura of the doghouse, real or imaginary. Ohio's Gov. Davey seemed a trifle melancholy, even standing beside Roosevelt. But he got on the train nevertheless, leaving behind a chance to make a speech, at Marietta.

• • • •

Mr. Roosevelt's somewhat restrained reference to his friend, Senator Bulkley, left the Ohio crowd flatfooted; there was little huzzahing, and no hats were thrown in the air. But it was a sightseeing crowd and not a political crowd; the sort of a crowd that holds babies high in the air for a glimpse of the great man, to remember all their lives.

• • • •

Because the President makes so few casual rear platform appearances, the crowds at the railroad stations are small. In towns of 2,000 to 5,000 today there have been only 50 or 100 spectators agape at the depot as the train sped through.

• • • •

Somewhat as one nation sends a friendly battleship to another nation's celebration, so Illinois and Indiana sent State police cars to Ohio today. The Illinois police car almost stole the show; it has two motorcycles mounted on the sides, one on each running board.

"—the crowd brought its babies."

SPECIAL MEDLEY: There's a huge case 7 feet long in the baggage car containing the President's deep-sea fishing tackle . . . The park where Mr. Roosevelt spoke at Marietta was under 10 feet of water during the last flood . . . Warning to committees which make speech arrangements: It is bad to leave such a vast space in front of the speaker's stand without any audience in it, as at Marietta; the speaker is too far from his listeners.

• • • •

Even Happy Chandler's hard-varnished Pollyanna exterior, even President Roosevelt's frigidly polite nods toward the Governor of Kentucky could not save Happy from the shadow of the dog-house . . . No modest violet, Gov. Chandler elbowed his way into the private Presidential car, into his automobile between F. D. R. and his opponent, Senator Barkley; and into the limelight on the speakers' platform; he dragged the dog-house with him.

• • • •

As the irrepressible Chandler hogged the spotlight, grinning and shaking hands with photographers, Secretary Marvin McIntyre outmaneuvered him, finally, and with diplomatic insistence forced him to sit down . . . One sentence about Chandler in the President's speech went astray—"he never came to Washington and went away empty handed." It was intended to squelch Mr. Chandler, instead, it got him a big hand. But by that time Chandler had temporarily mislaid his grin.

• • • •

AIR-COOLED PIFFLE: Quick changes like the one from an air-cooled train out into a 100-degree heat at Latonia and back to the cooled train aren't healthy for the older members of the President's party . . . So far the President has run into a quiet, bedazzled crowd at Marietta and a Chandler crowd at Covington which booed both Chandler and "Dear Alben" a little . . . Like Chandler, Gov. Davey of Ohio wasn't especially welcome on the train . . . Alas, the open car has become a rarity and there are scarcely enough convertibles around for a Presidential parade; some towns might be forced to use rumble seats.

$3,500 Fire Razes Barn.

Leonardtown, Md., July 8.—A large tobacco barn on the premises of Irvin Weiner, local tobacco buyer and insurance man, was destroyed by fire of undetermined origin late yesterday afternoon. Damage exceeded $3,500.

2,000 March As a Protest In 'Brutality'

Kelly 'Censors' Banner as Crowd Demands an Inquiry.

Nearly 2,000 colored residents of Washington last night took part in a parade and protest meeting sponsored by the Communist Party, against "police brutality," and asked for the immediate dismissal of Police Superintendent Maj. Ernest Brown. The demonstration lasted nearly three hours and was viewed by about 10,000 spectators.

While marchers waved banners and placards marked, "Down With Legal Lynching" and "Stop Police Brutality," about 50 uniformed and plainclothes policemen patrolled the line of march and mingled with the crowd. No disorder was reported, however, and police intervened only once—when Inspector Edward Kelly refused to allow marchers to carry a placard demanding dismissal of Maj. Brown.

Resolutions were adopted at the mass meeting, at Ninth street and Rhode Island avenue northwest, calling for suspension or immediate trial of six policemen.

Other resolutions adopted included a request to the Commissioners to appoint a representative of labor, the colored people and civic organizations to conduct "an impartial and complete public investigation of police brutality in the District," and immediate compensation to relatives of persons "who have been murdered by the police."

Among policemen mentioned by the resolutions calling for suspension or trial—all who have been connected with shootings of persons—was Lieut. Arthur C. Belt, who recently testified that he would have done the same thing as Policeman John Sobolewski in the shooting of Wallace McKnight on June 26.

Copies of the resolutions were to be sent to the President and Commissioners. Speakers included Calvin Cousins, Tansell Butler and Martin Chaney, all of the Communist Party.

Vandenberg Asks Publicity for U. S. Officials' Incomes

Grand Rapids, Mich., July 8 (AP).—Senator Vandenberg (Republican), Michigan, proposed today that Government officials be required to make public the amount of income they derive from market transactions, personal holdings or private services.

The Senator said need exists for regulation to protect the public from "outright exploitation."

"We constantly hear ugly rumors about 'leaks' that have been capitalized for public profit," Vandenberg said.

"None of them ever comes to proof. Most of them probably are untrue. The best protection which honest officials can have, in such circumstances, is a publicity requirement, with a criminal penalty attached, which makes the whole record public."

"It is was logical for the President to warn all Federal employes against stock gambling, it, is logical to require a public record if this gambling occurs," he added.

Yelling Gunman Shoots Policeman

Newport News, Va., July 8 (AP).—Patrolman James D. Fiege, of the Newport News police force, narrowly escaped death today in an early morning encounter with a gunman. The assailant fired six bullets, striking Fiege twice, and then fled screaming into the night.

At Riverside Hospital today Fiege was recovering from painful wounds in his chest and his right shoulder.

Fiege said he saw the man walking along the avenue with a bag across his back and a box under one arm. The man apparently saw Fiege coming and opened fire at the officer, who was about 10 feet away, sending two bullets crashing into him and others whizzing about his head. The assailant then fled, yelling maniacally.

Roads Bureau Group To Have Picnic Today

Sports and food will feature the sixth annual picnic to held at 2 p. m. today in Rock Creek Park by the Division of Highway Transport, Bureau of Public Roads, Department of Agriculture. Picnic grounds No. 23, near Sixteenth street and Colorado avenue, will be used.

Six grand prizes and 18 individual prizes will be awarded. Among games "for the younger generation" will be a potato race, a cracker eating contest, a ring toss, a three-legged race and a clothespin contest.

D. C. Driver Robbed While Napping in Car

Lynchburg, Va., July 8 (AP).—When Paul W. Casserby, 1732 Church street northwest, Washington, roused from a nap in his automobile at Fifth and Jackson streets today, he was short $19 in cash and a $20 stickpin, he advised police authorities.

U.F.W.A. Group to Frolic.

Local No. 99, of Mount Alto Veterans Facility will hold a beer and ping-pong party at 8 p. m. today at national headquarters of U. F. W. A., 532 Seventeenth street northwest.

Washington's Only Traveling Summer Theater Begins Its Rambling

Suits Started To Obtain Land For Fort Drive

Condemnation Move Involves Property in Northeast Section.

A decade-old encircling movement of the District tightened yesterday as the Department of Justice instituted proceedings to acquire more land for Fort Drive to connect Civil War fortifications of the city.

The land sought is in the northeast section of the city bounded by Minnesota avenue on the west, by Gault place on the south, Forty-fourth street on the east and Deane avenue on the north. The few squares are sparsely populated. The land lies just north of Fort Mahan Park.

For the past decade the National Capital Park and Planning Commission has been slowly acquiring land to build the 23½-mile roadway which will run along rims of the hills which make a saucer out of Washington. The proposed 40-foot boulevard will be one of the most scenic and historic drives in America, as well as a means for quick crosstown travel.

Thirteen forts and four battery locations will be connected by the parkway when it is completed. In Civil War times 68 forts surrounded Washington in a circle 37 miles in circumference.

In 1928 it was estimated that $2,750,000 would have to be spent to acquire the Fort Drive property. So far, by careful purchase and condemnation proceedings, considerably less than that amount has been spent. Less than a mile of the drive property is yet to be acquired.

Vanderbilt Asks Bids on $200,000 Maryland Home

Baltimore, July 8 (AP). — Alfred Gwynn Vanderbilt asked bids today for construction of the $200,000 home in which he and his bride will live in Maryland's exclusive Worthington Valley.

The brick house of Maryland Manor design will be located adjacent to Sagamore Farms racing stables, where Vanderbilt's string of thoroughbreds is trained. It will contain five bedrooms, a clubroom, motion-picture projection room, bowling alley and billard room.

Car Hits Child, 7.

Joseph Felix Villemaire, husband of Mrs. Clara May Villemaire, owner of Olney Inn, fashionable eating place at Olney, Md., who was arrested early yesterday on charges of assault on his wife, was released later in the day on bond of $500.

Preliminary hearing will be held Friday at Montgomery County Police Court at Rockville.

The wife told State's Attorney James H. Pugh that Villemaire fired a pistol at her three times They were divorced a year ago, but remarried recently.

Angler Dives in, Nabs String of Seven Bass

Williamsport, Md., July 8.—William Ainsworth, town electrician, hadn't had a bite after fishing all afternoon for bass, when a string of seven bass came floating by his boat. He went overboard with all his clothing on and succeeded in retrieving the string of some unlucky fisherman upstream.

Wilkinson Lauds Church's Role in Public Education

The contribution of religion to the cause of education was praised last night by Garnett C. Wilkinson, first assistant superintendent of D. C. schools, who addressed the opening sessions of the seventeenth annual convention of the Christian Churches of Maryland, New York, New Jersey and the District of Columbia.

Speaking at the Twelfth Street Christian Church, headquarters of the three-day conclave, Wilkinson pointed out that "the church and public education in the District always have been closely related, and much of the progress of free education has been due to the church's support."

Others who spoke included the Rev. E. A. Love, president of the Interdenominational Ministerial Alliance; George W. Beasley, president of the Central Northwest Civic Association; Dr. Arthur P. Wilson, pastor of Columbia Heights Christian Church, and Elder C. L. Whitfield, of Baltimore. The Rev. J. F. Whitfield, minister of the Twelfth Street church, presided.

Earlier in the day brief talks were delivered by James A. Brown and S. R. Daniels, Endeavor officers, and Miss Elizabeth Brown, of Baltimore.

U. S. Aid Assured Appomattox Park

Richmond, Va., July 8 (AP).—All obstacles to the expenditure of $100,000 of Federal funds for reclamation of the Appomattox surrender grounds as a national park have been removed, Chairman Wilbur C. Hall of the Virginia Conservation Commission announced today.

Hall made public a letter from J. P. Andrews, project manager, that the Government on June 30 formally accepted the last options on the property involved.

The $100,000 appropriation, made several years ago under terms of a bill sponsored in Congress by Senator Carter Glass, could not be spent until all the land had been accepted.

Bishop of El Salvador Lands at D. C. Airport

Injured in Central America six months ago by a falling log, Dr. Alfonso Belloso y Sanchez, Archbishop of El Salvador, was taken from an Eastern Air Lines plane last night on his way to Johns Hopkins Hospital in Baltimore. There he will undergo treatment for partial paralysis. He was met by Dr. Hector David Castro, Minister of El Salvador.

Group to Study Child Welfare Needs for D. C.

Commissioners Soon Will Name Committee for Survey.

Methods of improving the welfare of District children will be studied by a special committee soon to be appointed by the District Commissioners, it was disclosed yesterday.

Following a meeting between Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen and Welfare Director Elwood Street, it was announced a committee of seven would be appointed for this work. Of prime importance would be the drafting of legislation necessary to bring about better child-welfare activities.

Hazen also said the committee would be charged with drawing up budgetary estimates for use in co-ordinating the various activities of the child agencies. These estimates must be ready before September 15, when the District auditor turns over the District estimates to the Budget Bureau.

With this in mind, Hazen said the committee would be appointed immediately, thus assuring an early start and early completion of the survey. The advisory committee will name the survey director. Upon him will be the burden of the survey with a view toward recommending a method of co-ordinating the juvenile agencies and draft legislation.

Dr. Abernethy to Talk At Endeavor Session

Dr. William S. Abernethy, pastor of Calvary Baptist Church, will speak tomorrow evening to 700 delegates to the Christian Endeavor conference at Northfield, Mass. Thousands of visitors are expected to join the delegates.

Other churchmen who will speak include Dr. Frederick B. Newell executive secretary of the New York Society of the Methodist Episcopal Church; the Rev. Prentiss L. Pemberton, minister of St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church, Eastbourne, Eng., and Dr. Joseph R. Sizoo, pastor of St. Nicholas Church, New York City.

Bids Opened For New Span On Anacostia

Contract Expected to Be Awarded in Week by D. C. Heads.

Bids for removing the present span and building a new Pennsylvania Avenue bridge over the Anacostia River were opened by District officials yesterday.

The Penker Construction Co., of Cincinnati, bid $1,821,234 for the construction, which was the lowest of ten bids received. The Ohio firm placed a bid for $23,000 for removal of the present bridge, this figure being the third low.

Four alternate bids for the construction of the bridge were also submitted by the ten applicants, but in each case the Penker Construction Co. outbid its rivals. The main plan for the new structure calls for the use of pink granite, and the alternate plans would permit the bridge to be constructed with gray granite, sandstone, concrete facing or limestone.

Congress has authorized $2,000,000 for the work, but has appropriated $620,000 for the start. Under the contract the bridge must be completed in 400 calendar days after the existing bridge is closed to traffic. The south half of the bridge, where operations will start, must be completed in a year.

The Dravo Company, of Pittsburgh, submited the lowest bid for the removal of the present bridge, $5,000.

It is expected that the contract will be awarded in the next week.

AAA Costs Put At $178,249 in Va.

By the Associated Press.

The Agricultural Adjustment Administration reported yesterday local farmers' committees and associations spent $178,249 in Virginia to execute the 1936 agricultural conservation program between July 1, 1936 and February 18, 1937.

The AAA said the bulk of funds paid for local expenses went to local farmer committee and field men paid on a day to day basis. It said the local expenses amounted to 5 per cent of the $376,907,826 paid farmers for participation.

Girl of 14 and Sailor A. W. O. L. From Hospital Sought by Police

MARY KATHERINE WILSON.

Search for Mary Katherine Wilson, 14-year-old girl last seen early Thursday night, grew more intense last night as police frankly admitted they are worried about the girl's absence.

They said she was last seen with Kenneth Ross Culter, 18, second-class seaman, who has been a patient at Naval Hospital since June 1. They left the Wilson home, 1408 V street northwest, at about 6 o'clock to go to a nearby theater. Culter, whom doctors described as "unfit for naval service" and not a mental case, is absent without leave from the hospital.

Daughter of John J. Wilson, of the Bureau of Internal Revenue, Mary Wilson is a student at St. Paul's School, Fifteenth and V streets northwest. According to her family, she had no money with her. 14 WASHINGTON: SATURDAY, JULY 9, 1938 ***

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

Clark Griffith, the old irreconcilable, whose hate for the National League dates to the winter of 1899, was still fuming at the American Legion's defeat at Cincinnati when he was approached yesterday in his little stucco office at Griffith Stadium.

POVICH

"Bad baseball . . . bad baseball," snorted Griffith as he talked of that ball game at Cincinnati. "I'm ashamed of the American League . . . getting beat that way. There wasn't any excuse for it."

Reminded that the National League had a couple of pretty fair pitchers in Johnny Vander Meer and Bill Lee who held the American Leaguers to two hits and no runs at all in the first six innings, Griffith was still obdurate.

"Yes, but there were three other innings in that ball game. We should have murdered that Mace Brown in the seventh and again in the ninth. It was bad baseball. I'm surprised at our league?"

What did Griffith think was bad, specifically, about the American League's play?

"Well, take that seventh inning. We've got the bases full and two out. And we're only behind, 2-0. What does Joe McCarthy do but send in that big Rudy York. We didn't need a home run then. What we needed was a single. York's a home-run hitter. It would have been nice for him to hit a homer, but we wanted to tie the score first. Let those homers come later.

"McCarthy had Cece Travis and Red Rolfe on the bench as well as York. They're not apt to hit home runs like York is, but I tell you we didn't need a homer. Wee needed a single. Had to get that score tied first. Both Travis and Rolfe are sounder hitters than that big York. Can't be fooled so easy. And they're left-handed hitters, too. That's where we played bad baseball.

"And another thing. We've got to stop trifling in those All-Star games. Got to take 'em seriously. What happened when Dickey threw wild to second base? Nobody backed up the throw. Where was DiMaggio when Ott's triple cleared Averill's head and hit the fence? Standing where he was when the ball was hit, that's what. If he had backed up Averill, that hit would have been held to two bases. And DiMaggio was flatfooted, too, on Foxx's wild throw past first base. It was a sin to let two men score on that play.

"That National League is taking this thing seriously and we aren't. No hustle, no pep. The first thing you know, the National League will be saying they're as good as we are."

No man in baseball—or out—has quite enjoyed the National League's discomfiture in recent years during the supremacy of the American to the same extent as Griffith. The Nats' owner has been unrelenting in his hate for the National League.

He has been battling the National League for 39 years now, ever since the winter night in a Chicago tavern when he and Ban Johnson and Charley Comiskey plotted the American League as a rival major circuit. They would have been willing to go along with the National had the older league not attempted to bring financial ruin to American League clubs.

It was Griffith who literally launched the American League by his success in pirating star players from the National before the opening of the 1900 season and who fought the National League at every turn, particularly in New York, where the older league struggled hard to keep an American League team out of the city.

• • • •

Finally, in 1909, after he resigned as manager of the New York Highlanders, Griffith took a job in the camp of the enemy—as manager of the Cincinnati Reds of the National League. Those three years he spent with the Reds found him unhappy. He simply didn't like the National League, he said.

Griffith's disgust at the American League's defeat in the All-Star game was tempered a bit following the game, when the Nats' owner met Billy Evans, general manager of the Red Sox's scouting system. Evans called Griffith aside.

"That's a pretty good catcher you've got down in Charlotte," said Evans. "What'll you take for him?"

"You mean Jake Early?" said Griffith.

"That's the fellow," said Evans. "Let's make a deal right now. Name your price and you don't have to make it too low."

"No thanks," said Griffith. "Thanks just the same, but I think we'll keep Early."

Whereupon the Nats' owner sought out Piedmont League men at baseball headquarters and discovered, to his surprise, that Catcher Early was the best-looking major league prospect in the league, possessor of a better throwing arm than any American League catcher, and owner of a .305 batting average. "He can't miss," was the unanimous opinion.

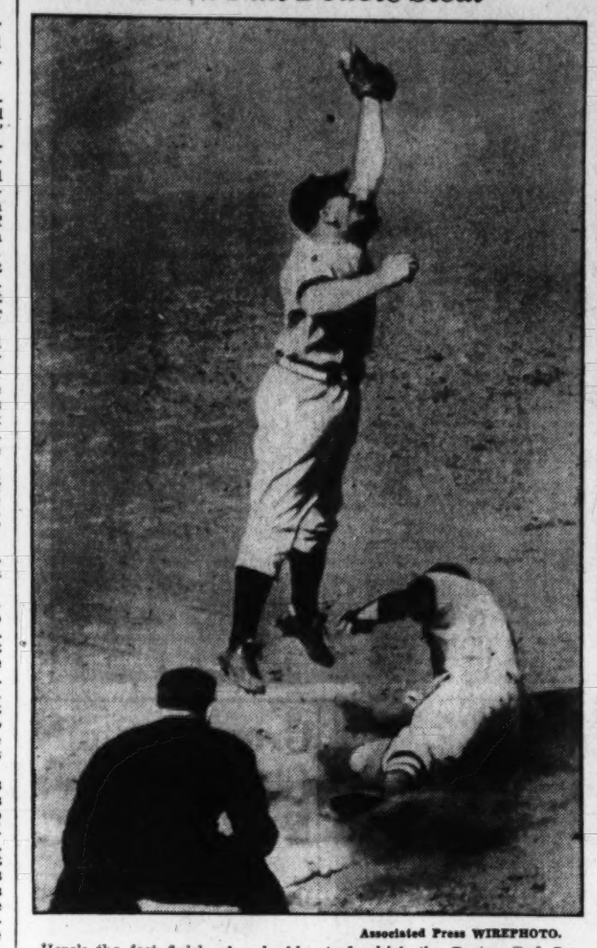
Bosox Pull Double Steal



Associated Press WIREPHOTO.

Here's the fast finish of a double steal which the Boston Red Sox pulled on the napping Yankees in the fourth inning of their game in Boston yesterday. Third Sacker Rolfe, of the Yanks, goes for a tall toss as Jimmy Foxx, of the Sox, slides safely on a dash from second. An instant before, Cronin, of the Sox, made a safe dash from first to second.

Get 7-Run Lead in First 3 Innings; Chandler Chased From Hill.

By the Associated Press.

Boston, July 8.—The New York Yankees spotted the Red Sox seven runs in the first three innings today, and then spent the rest of the afternoon in a futile attempt to catch up. The Sox took the game, 9 to 8, ending the Yanks' run of ten straight without a defeat.

Complete collapse of the Yankees' starting pitcher, Spud Chandler, and the failure of the famous "clutch" hitter, Bill Dickey, to do anything but roll into double-plays twice with men on the bases brought about the Yankees' downfall.

Both sides used three pitchers before the game ended. Emerson Dickman, who relieved Jackie Wilson during a three-run Yankee splurge in the second, took credit for the win, although Jim Bagby, jr., had to be called to halt the Yanks in the late innings.

Bobby Doerr, with a homer and a single and three runs batted in, led the Sox attack. Joe Cronin also hit a homer, while Rookie Joe Gordon clouted his eighth of the year for the Yanks.

The Sox collected 14 hits altogether. They got away to a four-run lead in the first inning when George Selkirk dropped a fly ball, Joe Cronin doubled one run across, and Ben Chapman singled two more in. In the third, Cronin and Doerr each hit his homer, and in the fourth Pinky Higgins' single sent two more runs home, ending the Sox scoring.

The Yanks scored in each of the last four innings, but in the seventh, with men on first and second, Dickey hit into a double play, and in the ninth, with runners on first and third and none out, he repeated.

Cecil Travis Tops Griffs' Batting Bee

By Shirley Povich.
A Staff Correspondent.

Harry Kelley, who was discharged as incompetent by Connie Mack two months ago, was exceedingly competent yesterday in the uniform of the Nats. While Kelley, with a shut-out performance, drove home to Mack the realization of his mistake, the Nats drove home 11 runs and won the ball game, 11 to 0.

The chunk righthander gave his old pals, the Athletics, a powerful overdose of curve-ball pitching in scoring his shut-out. Before a Ladies' Day gathering of 12,000, he pitched two-hit ball during the first five innings and finished up with a seven-hit preformance.

It wasn't until the ninth inning that the A's succeeded in pushing a runner past first base against their former colleague. And it wasn't until the eighth that they even threatened seriously to avert the ignominy of a shut-out by Kelley.

Nats Get 13 Hits.

The Nats—and the A's—made it easy for Kelley. Capitalizing on three damaging errors by the Athletics' infielders, the Nats, notably Cecil Travis, rapped out 13 hits against Lynn Nelson and Edgar Smith to give Kelley a commanding lead early in the game.

As this is being written, the Athletics haven't got Travis out yet. He made four hits in his first appearance at bat, driving in the Nats' first two runs and figuring in three others. Twice he singled to leftfield, once he doubled to left and in his last appearance at the plate he beat out a bunt by way of displaying his versatility.

With the kind help of Second Baseman Dario Lodigiani, the Nats knocked Nelson loose from two runs in the opening inning. After Buddy Lewis singled, Lodigiani made a crude muff of West's grounder and the Nats had a pair of runners on base. Al Simmons was no help with his pop-up, but Myer drew a walk to fill the bases and then Travis lashed a single into leftfield that set the Nats up in a 2-0 lead.

West Gets 3-Bagger.

It was 4-0 by the end of the third, which Sammy West launched with a three-bagger to right. It was a routine single which Wally Moses permitted to scoot past him when he lost his footing in an attempt at a shoestring catch. Then Werber fumbled Simmons' topped grounder and West scored. Myer forced Simmons, stole second base and dashed home when Travis produced another of his leftfield singles.

Travis bashed a double into left field in the sixth and the Nats' then staged a four-run inning. Wasdell bounced a single off Nelson's leg and Travis raced to third. At this point the A's defense cracked again. Nelson fielded a perfect double play ball off Rick Ferrell's bat and then threw wide to second base, Ambler muffing his throw. Travis scored on the error by Ambler and a bit later Case bashed a single to left that scored Wasdell. A bit later Lewis lined a two-bagger to left center and the Nats had two more runs and an 8-0 lead.

It wasn't until the fifth inning that the A's made their second hit of the afternoon, and it wasn't until the eighth that they threatened seriously to score. In that eighth, they filled the bases with one out but Hayes grounded to Lewis who made a force play at the plate, and Johnson popped op.

A two-bagger by Lodigiani with one out in the ninth again threatened Kelley's shut-out bid, but after he walked Ambler he grabbed a hot smash off Pinch Hitter Brucker's bat and started a fancy double play with a throw to Travis at second.

By the Associated Press.

Cleveland, July 8.—The Cleveland Indians regained undisputed first place in the American League race today by edging the St. Louis Browns, 8 to 7, in ten innings, while the Yankees were losing at Boston.

Sammy Hale's fourth hit of the game, a single to centerfield, drove in Lyn Lary from third base with the deciding run with one out in the tenth. Lary had walked in the extra inning, and went to third on Campbell's single.

The Browns got away to a 6-to-0 lead, scoring five runs off the veteran, Earl Whitehill, in the first three innings, and another off Rookie Johnny Humphries in the fifth.

Cleveland scored four runs in the fifth and tied it up with two in the sixth. The Tribe went ahead in the seventh when Jeff Heath tripled and then scored on Trosky's tap to the infield. St. Louis again tied it up in the eighth on Sullivan's single, an error by Lary, and an infield out.

Mel Harder, who took the mound in the seventh, was the winning pitcher, and Ed Cole, who went in after the Indians tied it up in the sixth, was the loser.

Reds Defeat Cubs, 7 to 6

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, July 8.—A flurry of home runs, brought to a climax by Billy Myers' tenth-inning smash, enabled the Cincinnati Reds to defeat Chicago's Cubs, 7 to 6, and end a six-game losing streak today. A five-run, ninth-inning Cub rally forced the contest into overtime.

Myers' winning clout off Larry French, the fourth Chicago pitcher, was the sixth of the game. Wally Berger hit two others for the Reds and Ival Goodman one, his twenty-first of the season.

Demaree's wallop was the only run scored off Paul Derringer until the ninth, when O'Dea followed suit, Gabby Hartnett pinch singled and Demaree doubled. Joe Cascarella was rushed to the rescue, but an infield out score one run, a wild pitch another and two walks followed. Bucky Walters then retired the side and won his first victory as a Red.

Whitcombe Is Victor in British Open Play

By Scotty Reston.
Associated Press Sports Writer.

Sandwich, Eng., July 8.—Battered by a gale, half-blinded by flying sand, Reggie Whitcombe won the British Open Golf Championship today and brought the greatest of Great Britain's trophies to the greatest of Great Britain's golfing families.

For 15 years the record of the three inseparable Whitcombe brothers—Ernest, 48; Charles, 42, and Reggie, 40,—has been distinguished. Among them they have won practically every golfing trophy in the empire, but the open always has escaped them.

Today, however, the law of averages finally balanced the Whitcombe books. Reggie came from sixth place to first, in the third round this morning, with a 75 that was magnificent under the circumstances, and then followed with a 78 for his winning 72-hole total of 295.

Whitcombe and Adams, playing together on the last round, finished a good three hours before Cotton. Whitcombe hardly could help recalling a similar experience a year ago when, under precisely the same circumstances, Cotton came from behind on the last nine and beat him by two strokes.

This time tall Henry failed. Seven shots behind Whitcombe after 54 holes by playing bravely and beautifully in the gale, Cotton made one grave mistake and it cost him his crown.

Coming to the dreaded fourteenth, the so-called "canal hole," Cotton was level fours and promptly split the fairway with a fine drive.

He still was two shots from home, however, and for five minutes debated with his caddy whether to use a driving iron or a brassie.

His choice was the iron. But after addressing the ball with it he changed his mind, took the wood instead and skied the ball into the wind. Once there the ball drifted far to the right and ended out of bounds. It cost him a seven and the championship.

Tigers Split With Chisox

Take First Game, 7-5; Drop 11-Frame Tilt.

By the Associated Press.

Detroit, July 8.—The Detroit Tigers and the Chicago White Sox battled through 20 innings of baseball to an even break in a doubleheader today, the Bengals taking the opener, 7 to 5, in regulation distance and losing the nightcap, 5 to 3, in 11 innings.

Home runs by Fred Walker, Henry Greenberg and Rudy York aided Detroit in winning the first contest. Greenberg's homer was his twenty-third of the year and enabled him to tie Jimmy Foxx, of the Boston Red Sox, for the American League lead.

The White Sox won the final game when a four-hit, three-run uprising in the eleventh broke a 2-to-2 tie. Tommy Bridges, working as a relief pitcher, was the victim of the assault.

Boys Club Boxers Withdraw From Open Tourneys

Down In Front

By Richards Vidmer.

Armistice.

New York, July 8.—All's quiet along the fighting front, at least so far as the heavyweight sector is concerned. When Joe Louis carved out his conclusive victory over Max Schmeling under the lights of the Yankee Stadium last month he silenced the roars for recognition and brought a strange and significant peace and calm to the realm of the ring.

VIDMER.

There are still a few small voices crying in the wilderness, but no one is paying much attention to them at the moment, least of all the professor, Michael Strauss Jacobs, who, in the final analysis, is the person who must be convinced before another heavyweight championship fight can take place. If the professor can't see any profits in a match he won't make it, and he holds a corner on the services of the man who holds a corner on the title.

• • • •

The professor is by no means convinced that any of the current crop of heavyweights, at least those who can be recognized over the horizon, would provide any strong public appeal if matched with Joe Louis. So there is little possibility of the Brown Bomber defending his throne this fall, and the winter, in all likelihood, will be dedicated to an elimination tournament, although almost all the entries have been eliminated already.

The list, as it now stands, would include Max Baer, Tommy Farr, Max Schmeling, Tony Galento, Bob Pastor and Gunnar Barlund. Those are the half-dozen leaders named by the National Boxing Association, which by the way, hasn't much to do with it, and they also happen to be the ones nominated by my correspondents.

But let's look over the list and see if the elimination tournament hasn't already been staged. I think a great deal of time, money and suffering can be saved in this thing.

Checked Out.

We can start right in, of course, with Max Schmeling. It is quite conceivable that the German, after he recovers from his current ills and ailments, might wade through the entire lot and bob up again as the logical challenger for the heavyweight championship — say, by next June.

But that would be only a waste of time on everybody's part, for after Schmeling regained that position, where would he be? And what would the Professor have? Merely a fellow who was 33 years old who took a terrific beating in the shortest time on record for a heavyweight championship fight. And the customers, remembering that they paid $30 and upward to see 2 minutes and 4 seconds of action, most of which was one sided, the last time Schmeling and Louis were in the ring, might be inclined toward a wave of economy.

Schmeling, it seems to me, and perhaps to the Professor too, was eliminated forever when he was pummelled to a pulp by Louis last month. He may fight again, but hardly as a challenger for the title.

• • • •

We might take Max Baer as the next possibility. He did beat Tommy Farr last winter in Madison Square Garden, but that is his one claim to recognition, and beating Tommy Farr is not exactly a unique performance. In fact, it is rather difficult to name any heavyweight who hasn't beaten Farr. Baer, Louis, Braddock.

And Farr Away.

Just why Farr should be even considered as a posible challenger leaves me rather baffled, not to add bewildered. Simply because he hasn't been knocked out he is allowed to linger on the list of eligibles. Do I hear anybody nominating the Empire State Building? It is no more vulnerable to a blow and far more active than the entry from Wales.

• • • •

And there is Bob Pastor!

Whom has Pastor ever fought? Max Baer? Buddy Baer? Max Schmeling? Tommy Farr? Anybody in the upper brackets, pitiful as those brackets might be? Somehow I have a deep founded suspicion that Pastor has lost only two fights because he has fought only one good fighter and one fair fighter—Louis and Mann. It seems to me that Pastor should go out and get a reputation before he goes around challenging for the title.

Last Survivors.

That leaves only Tony Galento and Gunnar Barlund. The others have been eliminated already. Schmeling, Baer, Farr and Pastor have had their chance against Louis and have been found wanting—woefully wanting in each case.

Perhaps it would save all the conversation, trouble, time and expense just to match Galento and Barlund, and then let the winner wait until a better man comes along. Because he would have to be better than either of these to stand a chance with Louis.

• • • •

So it seems that peace will prevail through the fall and winter on the heavyweight fighting front. Fans who are eager to see Louis in action again must wait until someone comes along who can provide some action.

• • • •

The mere placing of Tony Galento, a roly-poly fellow who can hit hammerlike blows but who has no more idea of how to box than a can of sardines, next to Joe Louis in the current N. B. A. ranking of the heavyweights, serves only to emphasize how far Joe Louis is ahead of the field!

Golden Glove Event Facing Biggest Loss

Future of Young Ring Stars Seen as Basis of Fyfe Move.

By Lewis F. Atchison.

First blood in the feud between the Intercollegiate Boxing Association and the Amateur Athletic Association trickled from the figurative nose of the latter yesterday when Charles M. Fyfe, managing director of the Boys' Club of Washington, announced his organization's withdrawal from open competition.

In a lengthy letter to Winfree Johnson, secretary of the District of Columbia A. A. U., Fyfe pointed out that the recent eligibility code adopted by the intercollegiate group made it necessary for him to take the step to safeguard the educational welfare of his youthful charges.

He inclosed a marked clipping from The Post, published June 24, dealing with the collegiate rules committee's meeting, which read that, in the future, any contestant who has participated in public boxing bouts other than those involving school teams will be banned from intercollegiate competition.

"We'll Protect Boys."

"We are also interested in the members of our organization availing themselves of any scholarships which may be available to them through the medium of sports, and if the recent ruling of the Intercollegiate Association stands with regard to those participating in amateur competition other than collegiate we will refrain from open competition in boxing altogether.

"If we can develop a boy in boxing in our organization to a point where he can capitalize on his ability in so far as a college education is concerned—we certainly will not stand in his way by permitting him to participate in competition which will outlaw him."

Fyfe's action, which will affect the Central Branch, Georgetown Branch, Northeast Branch and Southeast Branch clubs, will be a serious blow to the annual Junior Golden Gloves tournament, which was originated for boys under 16, and which drew most of its contenders from these clubs. Virtually the only organization left in the field with the Boys Club withdrawal is the Metropolitan Police Boys Club with its several units.

No Slap at A. A. U.

Fyfe's action also will materially affect the Senior Golden Gloves and District A. A. U. tournaments, for henceforth club members desiring to compete will be obliged to enter as individuals and without club support.

Fyfe, who is a member of the board of managers, had no complaint to make about the manner in which the District body has handled boxing, but emphasized the point that it virtually was obligatory for him to withdraw in the interest of club members.

"This action on our part," he wrote, is by no means to be interpreted as our being dissatisfied in any way with the conduct of boxing as it pertains to the Amateur Athletic Union in the District."

Mrs. Moody Reaches Finals.

Dublin, July 8 (AP).—Helen Wills Moody reached the finals of the Irish Women's Tennis Championship today by eliminating Miss P. O'Connell, 6—2, 6—3 in the semi-final round after taking only 20 minutes to defeat Mrs. C. F. Myerscough, 6—0, 6—0, earlier in the day.

Horse Finishes 8th But They Pay Off!

Chicago, July 8 (AP).—They paid off on a horse that finished eighth at Arlington Park today.

It came in the final race and brought glee and consternation as well to those holding tickets on Martin Barton and Merry Pete.

After Lifelike had won the mile and an eighth event and a photo placed Almac second, another photo was needed to determine third. Martin Barton's number finally went up and the mutuels began paying off an $8.60 show price as some tore up their Merry Pete tickets.

The judges learned of their mistake. Martin Barton actually had finished eighth and Merry Pete third. The track decided to pay off on both horses. So up went Merry Pete's number and $3.80 to those who still held tickets.

Man of the Month

By Arch McDonald.

(WJSV-Wheaties Baseball Commentator.)

(Each day, Arch McDonald distributes 10 points among the Nats whose play was most helpful to the Washington Club. At the end of each month The Washington Post will award to the leading player a gift in token of the honor of being The Post-Wheaties "Man of the Month.")

Cecil Travis moves into a tie for the lead in the Man of the Month contest by virtue of his performance in yesterday's victory over the Athletics, but to Harry Kelley goes the bulk of the points awarded yesterday.

To Kelley, five points, because his seven-hit shut-out against his former teammates was a brilliant pitching effort and the greatest single factor in the Nats' triumph.

To Travis, four points, because he made a hit in each of his four appearances at the plate, because he drove in the first two runs of the ball game, and because he figured in three other Washington runs.

To Buddy Lewis, one point, because his double in the sixth inning which drove in two runs was the hardest hit ball of the afternoon.

Edith Clarke Gains Final In Net Play

By Jack Munhall.

Defending Champion Edith Clarke, the tall, bronzed California girl, and Mrs. Margaret Robinson, veteran local player, yesterday advanced to the finals of the District of Columbia tennis championships and will meet for the title today at Columbia Country Club.

Miss Clarke, continuing her hot streak, polished off Willie O'Steen, public parks champion, 6—0, 6—3 to maintain her record of not having lost a set in this tournament. Mrs. Robinson, however, was extended in turning back youthful Ann Ellis in three sets, 6—0, 3—6, 6—3.

In the singles consolation round which is composed of players who were eliminated in the first round, Eleanor Fishburne and Charlotte Decker reached the finals with impressive victories.

Longest Match of Day.

Miss Fishburne, who has been showing some of the best form of her career, engaged in the longest match of the day—with Dorothy Bender—but after some two hours of heated play emerged the winner by 2—6, 7—5, 8—6.

Miss Decker's path to the "money round" was considerably easier, for she thrashed Gertrude Smith in straight sets, 6—2, 6—2.

Miss Clarke and Mrs. Robinson and Miss Ellis and Margo Lee landed the first two semifinal round berths in the doubles as they beat Lillian Rixey and Eleanor Fishburne and Mrs. Margaret Graham and Mrs. Ella Owens, respectively.

The mixed doubles got under way, although only one of three scheduled matches was completed before darkness curtailed further play. In that George Herbert and Willie O'Steen outlasted H. Hathaway and Mrs. Margaret Robinson in three well-contested sets, 5—7, 7—5, 6—1.

Surprise Entry.

The mixed doubles was thrown into something of an uproar by the last-minute entry of Edith Clarke and David Strand Johnsen, District junior champion, who shape up as strong as either of the seeded combinations of Mr. and Mrs. Stanley Robinson and Buddy Adair and Eleanor Finckel.

As a result of the late entry, Miss Clarke and Johnsen are drawn in the same bracket as the Robinsons, top-seeded duo.

Miss Clarke's victory over Miss O'Steen, herself a fine woman player, was totally expected but the decisive manner in which the champion put her foe to rout amazed the gallery. In the first set, Miss Clarke who hits the ball as hard as the average man allowed Miss O'Steen only 7 points and took the fourth and fifth games at love.

The second set was much closer but at no time was there any doubt as to the winner. Miss Clarke annexed three love games in this chapter—the third, fourth and ninth.

Miss Ellis, for a time, appeared able to score an upset victory over the second-seeded Mrs. Robinson but the latter's amazing accuracy on her tricky drop shots upset Ann's carefully-planned attack. Then too, Miss Ellis, in the opinion of all observers, followed the wrong strategy in not rushing the net where she is strong because of her unusual height. A net attack would have stopped many of Mrs. Robinson's drop shots which caught Ann flat-footed in the back court.

Lewis Gains Net Finals

Haverford, Pa., July 8.—Morey Lewis, of Kenyon College, Ohio, and Frank Guernsey, jr., of Rice Institute, Tex., today battled their way into the finals of the National Intercollegiate tennis championships.

Lewis, whose home town is Texarkana, Ark., came through with his third surprise victory of the tourney by beating seventh seeded Lewis Wetherall, of the University of Southern California, 3—6, 6—4, 10—8, 7—5.

Guernsey won over Robert Harman, of the University of California, 3—6, 2—6, 6—3, 6—2, 8—6, in the most exciting match of the tourney.

Joseph Hunt and Wetherell, of U. S. C., won their way into the doubles final by beating Kamrath and Edgar Weller, of the University of Texas, 3—6, 8—6, 6—3, 6—3.

In the other doubles semifinal, Don McNeill and Lewis, of Kenyon, defeated the University of Chicago twin brothers, William and Chester Murphy, 4—6, 6—3, 6—2, 9—7.

McGee Wins Medal.

Caster, Ferrell To Pitch Today

Wes Ferrell will take the mound today for the Nats in their attempt to make it two straight victories of the Athletics. George Caster, whose last performance against the Nats was a four-hit shut-out, will pitch for the A's.

The Washington Club announced yesterday that the game with the Athletics originally scheduled for Monday has been moved forward as part of a double header on Sunday.

Club officials also announced that youths engaged in the Chamber of Commerce's "Clean Up Washington Campaign" will be the guests of the Washington Club at Tuesday's game between the Nats and Cleveland. Officially the youths were to attend the canceled Monday game with the A's.

Club Titlist Wins Prize

Mrs. H. M. Brundage, Columbia Women's Club champion, won the low gross prize in the William Wade Hinshaw trophy tournament, concluded yesterday, with a 368 total for the 72 holes medal play.

Mrs. Brundage had rounds of 92-92-95-89 in winning over Mrs. F. G. Crisp. First low net scorer in the four-week tournament was Mrs. Howard Foley, with Mrs. R. A. Bogley second.

Mrs. J. Franklin Gross won the best 18 holes prize with Mrs. Hugh MacKenzie second, while the best selective holes went to Mrs. H. Stabler with Mrs. W. C. Geleng next.

Martin R. West, chairman of the golf committee, presented the prizes in the absence of the donor of the eight prizes, Mr. Hinshaw, former opera singer.

INDIAN SPRING.

Mrs. K. S. Giles, Mrs. H. W. Sharpe and Mrs. Nellie Dunbar were winners in the Indian Spring Ladies' Day Tourney yesterday, a 4-5-6 event; Mrs. Giles had the most 4s, three; Mrs. Sharpe eight 5s, and Mrs. Dunbar eight 6s.

Mrs. L. Kihlken won low net with 103—25—78.

The main guest prize went to Mrs. F. B. Helan (Manor), for the second consecutive week, with 110—21—89, for low net. Mrs. J. T. Powell and Mrs. H. P. Brown (Manor) were winners in a guest 5-6 tourney, Mrs. Powell scoring nine 5s and Mrs. Brown 13 6s.

Pepco Mound Ace Hurls No-Hitter

Charlie Bailey pitched a no-hit, no-run game yesterday as the Pepco nine walloped Thompson's Dairy, 18-0, in a Commercial League tilt played on the South Ellipse diamond.

While Bailey was displaying this excellent mound work, his teammates, led by Frank Tonker, who slammed a homer, two doubles and a single in five trips to the plate, knocked the ball all over the lot with a 20-hit attack.

Joey Rules Favorite to Win Monday

Betting Gentry Lay 7-5 He Will Take Mike in Stadium Bout.

By Lewis F. Atchison.

That Joey Archibald's mitt duel with Mike Belloise Monday night at Griffith Stadium will draw more than a 5-cent bag of peanuts, or its equivalent in cigars, is quite evident by now, judging by the carefree manner in which the sporting gentry are tossing around money.

Usually the boys who bet judiciously wait until just before the first bell to make a move for their bankrolls. Trial balloons are sent up to sample atmospheric conditions. The Gallup Poll of the previous Sunday is searched religiously for an inkling of the people's feelings. The matchmaker, promoter, publicity man, ticket sellers, newspapermen and even the gladiators themselves are consulted. Then, and only then, will the boys risk a few bob.

But this match has generated more steam than a freight locomotive among the financial fanatics, and right now you can get 7-5, a bop on the nose if you're too voluble about it, that Archibald wins. Five dollars will net seven—if you bet against Joey and he loses. The Providence half-pint is a tremendous favorite among District ring fans, and an admission that Belloise possibly might take all the marbles is nothing short of heresy, punishable by hanging.

As noted above there is an abundance of Archibald money on the exchange, and you can have all you want at the above quotation. It merely demonstrates the respect Joey commands in these precincts, respect born of 11 consecutive victories not the least of which was his eight-round knockout of Lou Gevinson. The odds may change, and should, unless the entire populace has been affected by the heat, before Monday. It's more of an even money mager than anything else, but you can't tell that to Archibald's supporters.

Paul Lee's Here.

Meanwhile, Matchmaker Goldie Ahearn announces that neither Archibald nor Belloise will be in town until tomorrow. One fighter did arrive in the person of Paul Lee, a feudin' man from Tennessee, who tangles with Armanda Sicilia in the eight-round semi-final. Lee peeled off his coat and worked six brisk rounds at the Huron gym. He looks good and is feeling fine, thank you.

PAUL (TENNESSEE) LEE.

The remainder of the card includes Eddie Saugsted vs. Baby Face Jerry Hall, six rounds; Billy Banks vs. Buster Brown, four, and Pete Lacek vs. Young Palmer, four.

Another of those always welcome tennis matches between Barney Welsh and Gil Hunt may come off in the Middle Atlantics, August 23 to September 3 . . . Hunt, one of the few players in this vicinity who has a chance to upset the Rockville squire, disappointed local followers when he failed to enter the recent District of Columbia singles championships . . . They are a bit tired of the way Welsh waltzes through the event every year . . . In winning the city title for the fifth consecutive year last week Welsh lost only one set in six starts, that to Hugh Lynch in the finals . . . Incidentally, local net fans are eagerly awaiting the opening of the Maryland State Amateur in Baltimore Monday, for it appears that Welsh will run into a little difficulty in defending his championship . . . Four Canadian Davis Cup players are entered and at least two of them—Watt and Murray—are rated just as highly as Barney . . . Note to B. M. . . . Thanks for your letter, correcting an erroneous statement in this column . . . Though the rumors that Frankie Frisch is nearing his end as Cardinal manager have been circulating for more than a year, the wise boys say the end of this season will definitely end Frisch . . . Unless, of course, his Gassy Gang does an abrupt turn about face and soars into the first division where they are supposed to belong . . .

The Phillies' transfer from their bandbox park into the more spacious confines of Shibe Park probably will aid them—if aid for them is possible—although they must accustom themselves to the comparatively strange field . . . Time was when the Phils could slug it out with the best of 'em but now their greatest strength lies with the pitchers who have been moaning about pop flies which sailed over the short fences in Baker Bowl . . . Rose Chapman, well-known California professional swimmer, is a sister of Sam Chapman, Athletic outfielder who is being called the outstanding major league rookie of the year . . . If there are any who still doubt that the St. Louis Browns' pitching staff is one of the worst ever assembled a gander at the records for the club's first 62 games should dispel their skepticism.

In those games the Browns have scored the respectable total of 263 runs but their opposition has dented the plate 401 times . . . Lefty O'Doul, former big league outfield star and currently successful manager of San Francisco, is reported to have turned down an offer to manage Brooklyn because he is slated to succeed Pie Traynor as boss of the Pirates next season . . . Traynor is due to move to the front office and become vice president.

Johnny Gilbert Rides 37th Winner, Piloting Mr. Canron to Victory

Vaughan Colt Pays $12.40 At Delaware

Jockey Gets Him Away to Early Lead and Wins Handily.

By Walter Haight.
A Staff Correspondent.

Delaware Park, Stanton, Del., July 8.—Johnny Gilbert continued to cut a big swath in this meeting today when he rode his thirty-seventh winner of the long session aboard Mr. Canron, owned by W. W. Vaughan. Gilbert sent Mr. Canron to the front with the echo of the starting bell and the pair was never headed, or seriously threatened. Gilbert having a grip on the colt at the end.

Gilbert followers, who have cleaned up hereabouts and those who backed Mr. Canron for other reasons, collected a substantial $12.40 mutuel. The first horse saddled by Royal Roberts, who recently took over a new training position, Mr. Canron stepped the mile and a sixteenth in 1:44 3-5, four-fifths of a second off the track record.

Carvola, E. K. Bryson's hope, was second and beaten two and a half lengths with C. K. Bassett's Guest of Honor 2d, third in the field of six.

Bulwark, the favorite and representing H. W. Jackson, made futile efforts to catch Mr. Canron in the early running and then folded, finishing in fifth place.

Rideaway, 10-year-old gelding owned by Gwladys Whitney, set a new track record for the two-mile steeplechase course here by winning the day's jumping feature by a neck margin. Ridden by Rigan McKinney, wealthy sportsman and gentleman jockey, Rideaway barely downed Ramond Guest's Swingalong. The Stag 2d, was third in the field of six. Swingalong was in front all but the final few feet of the race. McKinney rated Rideaway nicely and gained the decision by taking command on the flat after the final fence. Rideaway paid $7.10 and his time was 3:48 4-5. El Dorador had raced the route in 3:49 1-5 yesterday.

As usual Jockey Johnny Gilbert had a hand in the winning daily double. He started the program off by winning with Breadanbutter, a first time starter which was backed into favoritism in the field of a dozen maidens. Breadanbutter led most of the way and paid $6.60.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—ROBESPIERRE, $6.40, $4.40, $2.90; BOB JUNIOR (entry), $10.70, $5.50; FIRE BALL, $4.70.

ROBESPIERRE, forwardly placed from start, disposed of PROSIT to take command approaching stretch and won in hand. BOB JUNIOR, forced to be steadied along while racing in close quarters, came with a rush in final three-eighths. FIRE BALL, blocked at break, improved position steadily and closed with good energy.

Daily Double, Breadanbutter and Robespierre, Paid $51.40.

THIRD RACE—About 2 miles (regular course). Purse, $1,000. Selling Steeplechase. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post 3:52½. Off 3:55. Winner, Gwladys Whitney's ch. g. (10), by Wildair—Bubble. Trained by S. J. Holloway. Value to winner, $700; second, $150; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 3:48 4-5. (New record.)

Two-dollar mutuels paid—RIDEAWAY, $7.10, $4.50, $3.40; SWIMALONG, $6.00, $3.50; THE STAG II, $3.70.

RIDEAWAY, steadied along for a turn of field while fencing nicely, gained steadily on SWIMALONG when put to drive and disposed of latter on final flat to be up in concluding strides. SWIMALONG, first away and saving ground while setting pace, was hard ridden to end, but could not resist winner. THE STAG II, taken back after running close to pace for first half mile, rallied mildly in closing stages.

FOURTH RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1,000; allowances. For 3-year-old fillies. Start good from stall gates. Won driving; place same. Went to post 4:26. Off 4:30½. Winner, Millsdale Stable's b. f. Two-dollar mutuels paid—JOLLY TAR, $3.50, $3.10, $2.40; DISSEMBLER, $6.40, $3.10; RED JACK, $2.60.

JOLLY TAR, much the best, was allowed to settle into best stride, moved around field boldly when asked and drew clear in final stages, to win with speed in reserve. DISSEMBLER, rated while within striking distance of CARNAGE'S pace, saved ground entering stretch and closed gamely, but was no match for winner. RED JACK, rated closest to CARNAGE'S pace, took brief lead and hung on with good courage in closing test.

SIXTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $2,000; allowances. The Five Point Handicap. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates. Won handily; place driving. Went to post 5:29½. Two-dollar mutuels paid—MR. CANRON, $12.40, $5.60, $3.50; CARVOLA, $4.10, $3.10; GUEST OF HONOR II, $4.00.

MR. CANRON, hustled to front at once and taken under steadying restraint while setting pace, was placed to drive approaching stretch and was taken up nearing finish. CARVOLA came around horses with bold rush leaving backstretch and closed gamely, but could not menace winner. GUEST OF HONOR II went well placed for half and tired gradually thereafter.

SEVENTH RACE—One and one-eighth miles. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates. Won handily; place driving. Went to post 6:00½. Off 6:01. Winner, W. Two-dollar mutuels paid—BOUNDING COUNT, $4.30, $3.30, $2.60; MISS ADELINE, $19.30, $5.80; SECRET VOTE, $3.00.

BOUNDING COUNT, rated during early stages, gained sharply when placed to drive, disposed of MISS ADELINE and won while in hand. MISS ADELINE had excellent speed from start, took command going to first turn, saved ground while opening a long lead and continued willingly, but could not resist winner. SECRET VOTE was badly outrun for half, came to outside for racing room and closed some ground.

EIGHTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 3-year-olds. Start good from stall gates, for all but Petit Jean. Won driving; place same. Went to post 6:31½. Off 6:36½. Bob Klinger Allows 10 Hits, Well Scattered.

By the Associated Press.

St. Louis, July 8.—Young Bob Klinger jinxed the St. Louis Cardinals for the fourth time today as his Pittsburgh Pirate mates slugged three Gashouse hurlers for a 6-to-2 win in the first of a four-game series.

Klinger kept the ten hits he allowed well scattered and the Cards went scoreless until the eighth. He failed to strike out a single batter, but issued no passes.

Andy Vaughn and the Waner brothers were the main cogs in the vicious Pirate attack. Each got two hits and between them scored four runs.

Giants Trim Bees, 4 to 2

Homers by Chiozza and Kampouris Win Tilt.

By the Associated Press.

New York, July 8.—The Giants evened matters with their Boston jinx, Jim Turner, today by whipping the Bees, 4 to 2, on homers by Lou Chiozza and Alex Kampouris.

Harry Gumbert gave up only four hits in notching his eighth victory against five defeats for the year. The win was the second of the season for the Giants over Turner, who has beaten the National League leaders twice. Last year he whipped them three times and lost only one.

Kampouris' fourth homer of the year, with a mate aboard, featured a game-winning three-run rally in the fifth inning. Chiozza clouted his four-bagger in the third.

The Bees got away to a two-run lead in the first inning when Rookie Max West walloped a homer into the upper rightfield stands after Vince DiMaggio had walked.

Despite Chiozza's round-tripper, Turner had the upper hand through the first four frames. In the fifth, however, Dick Bartell opened by drawing a walk. Kampouris followed suit by lining a single to left. Chiozza lofted a long fly to Medwick, scoring Bartell. Left on bases—Philadelphia, 6; Brooklyn, 11. Rust Damage Reports Lift Wheat Prices

By the Associated Press

Chicago, July 8.—Increased reports of serious black-rust infestation in nonresistant spring wheat both sides of the Canadia boundary did much today to lift prices a cent.

Gains, however, failed to hold well, being handicapped by backslides of securities. On the other hand, something of a stimulus to purchase resulted from unfavorable harvest weather in parts of the winter-crop belt, a circumstance suggestive of curtailed movement to market.

At the close, Chicago wheat futures were ¾-¾ higher, compared with yesterday's finish; July, 71⅝-71¾; September, 72⅞-73; corn, ⅜ off to ⅜ up; July, 58; September, 59¾-59½; oats, varying from ¼ decline to ⅛ advance; Rye, showing ⅜-½ bulge, and provisions, unchanged to a jump of 15 cents.

Cottonseed oil was firmer today on increased covering and commission house buying encouraged by a bullish view of Government acreage report on cotton pointing to the smallest area planted since 1900 and a moderate cottonseed oil crop. Final prices were 11 to 20 points net higher. Sales, 337 contracts. Bleachable spot nominal: July closed, 8.53; September, 8.65; October, 8.66; December and January 8.67.

Stock Seat $80,000, Advance of $12,000

New York, July 8 (AP).—Arrangements were made today for the transfer of a membership in the New York Stock Exchange for $80,000, up $12,000 from the last sale and a new high since last November 4.

The latest price paid for doing business on the floor of the exchange represents an increase of 57 per cent over the 20-year low for memberships established June 15, this year, when $51,000 was accepted for a "seat."

Gold Imports Total $11,161,724 in Week

Gold imports totaled $11,161,724 last week, the Commerce Department said yesterday. A week ago they amounted to $2,827,000.

The report stated that of last week's imports $7,680,000 came from Sweden. All silver imports in that period amounted to $5,709,469, of which $4,300,000 came from China.

The Market

Stock Advances Are Cut With Profit-Taking as but Find Final-Hour Support.

New York, July 8.—The sharpest reaction since stocks broke away on the upside three weeks ago was sustained today but losses were reduced by a renewal of support in the final hour so that at the close the list was off only 0.70 point. Between the high point reached Thursday and the low point today there was a decline of more than 2 points in the composite average, indicating that the list had been given a good shakeout.

The opening showed gaps of 1 to 2 points in leading issues, with the steels, coppers and rails particularly weak. It was the rails, however, that brought about the rally of the last hour. There was good buying in this group even before the release of the weekly carloading report, which showed the handling of revenue freight up more than seasonally.

Release of the report was delayed and did not appear on the news tickers until about 2:30. Just as in the case earlier in the week of the passenger-fare increase granted to the Eastern carriers, there were a fortunate few who bought the rails in advance of the announcement and were well rewarded for their shrewdness.

Trading Dwindles.

Trading on the big board today fell away to 1,566,670 shares, which was entirely pleasing to the bullish forces. The street retains its optimism despite the sell off, even the majority of those who expect a more sizable setback holding that a drop of 25 to 35 per cent of the ground gained in the last three weeks would be entirely healthy.

Most of the active stocks showed moderate recessions but the most active on the big board, Greyhound, continued to receive support on the assumption that higher passenger fares on the railroads will react to the benefit of the bus lines.

Curb Stock Active.

Most active stock in New York was on the curb exchange, where Pantepec Oil, which has had a long and stormy speculative career, jumped about a point on the announcement that Standard Oil Co. of Venezuela has exercised its option to drill in the Pantepec concession. The announcement was somewhat of a surprise, as foreign companies have not been pushing their developments in South America since the unfortunate Mexican expropriation.

Steels Drop.

United Air Lines and Texas were two of the popular stocks to close with plus signs. Pressure on the steel group forced Bethlehem to drop 2⅛ and United States Steel 2¼. Anaconda was an active, but soft, member of the metals division, giving up 1⅜, while less active Kennecott clumped 2¼. Chrysler was down 1½.

Among the commodities wheat was bolstered on reports of black rust infestation in the spring wheat areas on both sides of the Canadian border. Gains were not held entirely, but the close was up ¼ to ¾ cent. In cotton, the Government estimate showing the smallest acreage planted since 1900, brought about a gain of 11 to 14 points.

Bond Trading Dull.

With the exception of local traction bonds, listed bond trading was a dull affair today. The local traction issues moved rapidly upward, under the stimulus of unification rumors. But the main trend otherwise was downward, although losses were small. Rail issues in the speculative classification were subjected to profit-taking.

United States Treasury and other money market issues were almost motionless. Foreign dollar bonds reflected mild interest. Turnover in all bonds was $7,640,000, against $12,500,000 the previous day.

Interborough and B. M. T. bonds forged ahead 1 to 5 points on the move for including transit debt incurring power for New York City in the State constitution. This evidence of progress toward unification stimulated excellent buying of the transit issues, with Manhattan and Third Avenue bonds joining the movement.

Secondary Rails Lower.

Intermediate railroad bonds drifted lower under liquidating pressure, with the better-rated obligations inclined to resist the trend. Borderline rails lost fractions to a point or more and default bonds likewise suffered. The buying of Eastern passenger-carrying rails fizzed out. Steel and other industrial bonds were well supported, with convertibles in better demand than others. Rail and utility holding bonds dipped.

Treasury Issues Steady.

United States Treasury bonds reflected week-end dullness, with quotations changed only nominally. Guaranteed issues of the Farm and Home corporations were similarly idle. In counter trading good inquiry was reported for Treasury notes and bills. Highest-rated utility, railroad and industrial bonds held to former levels.

Latin-American default issues showed gains in the foreign section, but the movements were fractional. European pledges that are being disregarded were idle. The Japanese group resumed its downward drift, while Italian bonds held. Argentines were higher, and other well-rated foreigns merely held their ground.

Chicago Trade Board Favors 'To Arrive' Rule

Chicago, July 8 (AP).—Members of the Chicago Board of Trade today overwhelmingly defeated a proposed amendment to rescind the "to arrive" rule. A total of 703 votes was cast, 190 for and 513 against abolishing the rule.

The rule, applying to purchases of grain in the country, to arrive, binds members of the exchange to charge a minimum commission. It has been in effect 32 years.

General Electric Co. Orders Drop 41%

New York, July 8 (AP).—Orders received by General Electric Co. during the second quarter of the year totaled $62,847,423, a drop of 41 per cent from $111,518,589 in the comparable 1937 period, Gerard Swope, president of the company, reported today.

$100,000,000 Bills Offered by Treasury

The Secretary of the Treasury gave notice yesterday that tenders are invited for Treasury bills to the amount of $100,000,000, or thereabouts. They will be 92-day bills; and will be sold on a discount basis to the highest bidders.

Tenders will be received at the Federal Reserve Banks, or the branches thereof, up to 2 p. m., Monday. Tenders will not be received at the Treasury Department.

Odd-Lot Selling Exceeded Buying

The securities commission said yesterday customers' orders to buy that week totaled 63,205, involving 1,782,455 shares valued at $56,607,107. Customers' orders to sell totaled 67,804 involving 1,818,589 shares valued at $56,398,098.

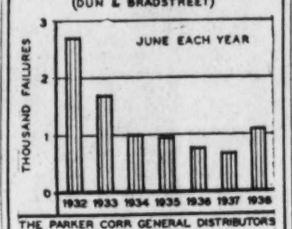
Failures in June 64% Over Last Year



THE PARKER CORR GENERAL DISTRIBUTORS INCORPORATED INVESTORS

Boston, July 8.—The estimated number of business failures in June increased slightly from May and was up 64 per cent from a year ago. This is not an alarming situation, however, because business failures have been running very low. Even in the boom years of 1928 and 1929 failures were nearly twice as great as they have been in recent months.

Curb Favors Reorganization

New York, July 8 (AP).—Drastic reorganization of administrative policy was recommended for the New York Curb Exchange today by a special committee appointed a few months ago by Fred C. Moffatt, president of the organization, and would closely parallel those adopted by the New York Stock Exchange in its sweeping "housecleaning" early this year.

Principal among the proposals is the hiring of a full time salaried president of the curb, in place of direction by members serving without salary. Reorganization of the board of governors to provide for representation of outside interests and associate members also is urged.

The proposal, now in the hands of the reorganization committee, is expected to form the basis of amendments to the constitution to be voted upon later by the membership.

Mrs. Dunn Off To Reno; Noted In D. C. Society

Daughter of Ex-Senator Hawes Is Known as 'Bird Woman.'

Mrs. Peyton Hawes Dunn, wife of Henderson Dunn and daughter of former Senator Harry B. Hawes, of Missouri, is on her way to Reno to sue for divorce, it was learned last night. A member of the family said Mrs. Dunn left yesterday.

Mrs. Dunn, whose wedding two years ago was one of Washington's most brilliant social affairs, has been living with her mother, Mrs. Eppes Osborn Hawes, at Stratford, Va., for the past few months. Mrs. Hawes is a director of the Robert E. Lee Memorial Foundation at Stratford.

After their marriage, the Dunns made their home at 6000 Nevada avenue northwest—just a few blocks from Reno road. Her husband is a director of the Federal Storage Co. here.

Mrs. Dunn and her sister, Mrs. Eppes Hawes Moore, of Long Island, N. Y., are both known in society circles throughout the country for their beauty and charm. The prospective divorcee was extremely popular here with the younger set before her marriage, and was known as "the bird woman" because of a number of birds she brought back from the Philippines.

Although she has lived in this city most of her life, Mrs. Dunn has degrees from the University of Missouri and from the School of Journalism at Washington University, St. Louis, Mo.

Hearing Delayed In Hospital Row Until Next Week

Warrenton, Va., July 8 (AP).—The Fauquier Circuit Court has postponed until next week a hearing on a petition by Dr. J. E. Knight and Dr. William R. Pretlow, members of the Fauquier County Hospital Association, for a court order to compel J. C. Williams, treasurer of the association, to allow them to inspect the hospital's books.

The postponement was granted at the request of counsel to allow more time to prepare for the hearing. No definite day next week has been set.

Dr. Martin B. Hiden, secretary of the Fauquier County Medical Society explained that the legal action was the result of a break between the Warrenton hospital and a majority of the county's practicing physicians.

Woman Is Indicted In 2 Girls' Deaths

Roanoke, Va., July 8 (AP).—A Hustings County grand jury which has been meeting in special session today returned its second murder indictment against Mrs. Lillian W. Hippert and also indicted Frank Waldron on charges of performing an illegal operation.

The charges of murder and performing an illegal operation were brought against Mrs. Hippert today alleging that she caused the death of Beatrice Dillon by such an operation in February 1935, while the true bill returned Tuesday charged that another such operation was responsible for the death of Margaret Elizabeth Smith this year.

Would-Be Slayer Gets 10-Year Term

Lynchburg, Va., July 8 (AP).—The law's limit of ten years in prison was imposed in corporation court here this afternoon upon Walter R. Hudson, 38-year-old plasterer, who tried unsuccessfully to kill his wife and himself a little more than a month ago.

The court room was crowded when Hudson pleaded guilty to a felonious assault and waived jury trial. Mrs. Hudson testified against her husband and the trial lasted 45 minutes.

Writ to Release Bevans Denied

Snow Hill, Md., July 8 (AP).—A writ of habeas corpus asking the release of Luther Bevans from the Maryland Penitentiary was denied today by Judge James M. Crockett, who ordered the applicant, serving a 15-year term for arson and an attack on two Worcester County officers, be returned to prison.

Bevans was indicted this year by the Worcester County grand jury for the three-year-old slaying of Charles Pusey, but was freed when his wife, principal witness for the State, failed to appear at his trial.

Boy, 4, Badly Hurt By Hit-Run Driver

Prince Frederick, Md., July 8 (AP).—William Durbaugh, jr., four, was critically injured last night by a hit and run driver while playing near his home on the Bay Side highway near Randle Cliffs, Calvert County.

Witnesses told police the automobile was travelling at high speed. The car slowed down about 200 feet away, then sped on, they said.

The child was taken to the Calvert County Hospital where physicians said he suffered internal injuries.

$10,000 Asked for State Medical Needs Survey

Baltimore, July 8 (AP).—The board of State aid and charities awaited a reply today from a request forwarded to the State board of public works for permission to spend $10,000 on a survey of unmet medical needs in Maryland.

Samuel E. Shannahan, director of charities, said the survey was discussed by a sub-committee of the Baltimore council of social agencies, which decided the State welfare board could undertake the survey more efficiently than a private group.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Hagerstown, Md., July 8.—Thomas Schroyer, 22, Myersville, crushed beneath the wheels of a Boonsboro trolley Monday night came to his death by unavoidable accident, a coroner's jury ruled today.

A physician who attended Schroyer when he entered the hospital here where he died testified that he had been drinking. Earl Worten, driving the car from which Schroyer alighted shortly before the accident has not yet been located.

Board Hears Charges Against Union Officer

Detroit, July 8 (AP).—Charges against George F. Addes, suspended more than a month ago as secretary-treasurer of the United Automobile Workers of America (C. I. O.), were heard by a majority of the union's international executive board late today despite his withdrawal from the trial. The board's findings will be announced at 11 a. m. (E.S.T.) tomorrow, said Homer Martin, international president of the U. A. W. A.

Freed in Slaying

Mrs. Nora Boycle, 47-year-old mother of six, was acquitted at New Brunswick, N. J., on charges of shooting to death her husband, Frank, 44, with a shotgun.

Spain Impasse Perils London, Rome Accord

Chamberlain's Bluntness Held Preparation for Pact Breakdown.

By the United Press.

London, July 8.—Relations between Britain and Italy have reached a decided impasse because of Prime Minister Chamberlain's blunt words to Premier Mussolini regarding the Spanish war issue, informed quarters believed tonight.

Unusual secrecy in official British quarters concerning recent diplomatic exchanges between London and Rome cloaks the fact that Chamberlain, for the first time since the Rome pact was signed last April, bluntly told Mussolini that Britain will not give way and sidetrack settlement of the Spanish war problem in order to implement the Anglo-Italian friendship pact.

Pact Breakdown Seen.

Mussolini claims to have fulfilled "as far as possible" all pledges made under terms of the agreement—cessation of anti-British propaganda, reduction of garrisons in Libya and stoppage of reinforcements to insurgent Spain—while to crown Italy's contribution to appeasement Mussolini used his influence to stop Gen. Francisco Franco from bombing British ships.

But terms of the pact stated that it was not to become effective until foreign "volunteers" had been withdrawn from Spain, and this has not been accomplished.

Both publicly in the House of Commons and privately Chamberlain this week stated that Britain could not yield.

The explanation in parliamentary circles for Chamberlain's stiffened attitude was that the prime minister is preparing for a possible breakdown of the new Anglo-Italian pact.

Chamberlain, who shared Mussolini's view when the pact was concluded in April that the Spanish war could soon be liquidated, has now learned from Britain's representative in Burgos, Sir Robert Hodgson, that a speedy conclusion to the war cannot be expected.

W. S. Sugden, 58, Ex-Shrine Leader, Is Dead in W. Va.

Sistersville, W. Va., July 8 (AP).—Walter Smith Sugden, 58, immediate past imperial potentate of the Shrine, died last night. He had been in a coma since Wednesday after a cerebral hemorrhage.

Although in ill health for the past two years, Mr. Sugden presided at the annual Shrine convention in Los Angeles last month until election of his successor, Andrew A. D. Rahn, of Minneapolis.

Funeral services will be held at Mr. Sugden's late home tomorrow afternoon with the Right Rev. W. L. Gravat, Episcopal Bishop of West Virginia, presiding. Burial will be in Amsterdam Sunday.

Rites Set Monday For Edwin Lawson

Edwin A. M. Lawson, 75, past master of the East Gate Lodge of Masons and retired foreman in the Government Printing Office, died yesterday at his home, 2116 Kalorama road northwest.

A native of Salem, N. J., Mr. Lawson came to Washington half a century ago. He was a former president of Typographical Union 101.

Surviving Mr. Lawson are a son, William H. Lawson, of Washington, and two daughters, Mrs. Edith L. Beach, of Washington, and Mrs. Pauline L. Heinmiller, of Vicksburg, Miss.

Funeral services will be held Monday at 10 a. m. at the Hysong undertaking establishment, followed by burial in Cedar Hill Cemetery.

Dr. James L. Kellogg, Noted Biologist, Dies

Williamstown, Mass., July 8 (AP).—Dr. James Lawrence Kellogg, nationally known authority on shellfish, who retired as professor of biology at Williams College in 1934, died today.

Dr. Kellogg had worked with the United States Bureau of Fisheries and had taught at Williams since 1899. He leaves his wife, the former Ida M. Archambeault, and four daughters.

He Gives Death Odds Of 5 to 1 in Pistol Game

Houston, Tex., July 8 (U.P.).—Paul Grasso's favorite game the past two years, according to his friends, was "Russian roulette," putting one cartridge in a revolver, twirling the chamber, placing the muzzle on his temple and pulling the trigger.

Last night he felt exceptionally lucky and put five cartridges in the revolver instead of one. Coroner's verdict was accidental death.

Barksdale Indorsed For Judicial Vacancy

Lynchburg, Va., July 8 (AP).—Alfred D. Barksdale, attorney, had the indorsement of the Lynchburg Bar Association today as a candidate for appointment to the judgeship of the Sixth Judicial District to fill the vacancy created by the death last month of Judge Don P. Halsey.

A committee was named to present the resolution of indorsement to Gov. Price.

Martinsburg Chamber Indorses New Highway

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Martinsburg, W. Va., July 8.—Indorsement of a projected new primary road connecting United States Route No. 11 through this county with United States Route No. 40 near Clearspring, Md., where it joins the road to Mercersburg, Pa., was given by the Martinsburg Chamber of Commerce here yesterday.

Harold Walker, 61, Rites in New York; Burial to Be Here

Funeral services for Harold Walker, 61, Georgetown resident who died yesterday in New York City, will be held today in New York and the body will be returned here for burial.

Mr. Walker suffered a heart attack while at the University Club in New York and died shortly afterwards. He was the father of Mrs. Lawrence Wood (Chip) Roberts, of this city, and of Aldace Walker, son-in-law of Joseph Davies, Ambassador to Belgium. He is also survived by his wife, Mrs. Alonsita Walker.

Born in Vermont, Mr. Walker spent many years in Mexico and other Pan American countries. Prior to becoming counsel for the Standard Oil Co., a position he held at the time of death, he was vice president of the Pan-American Petroleum & Transport Co., later absorbed by the Standard Oil Co.

He had made his home here for 20 years, living at 1224 Thirtieth street northwest, and at his estate near Claiborne, Md. He was a member of the Cosmos, Metropolitan and Chevy Chase clubs here and of the Amherst and University clubs in New York.

Mr. Walker attended Amherst College in Massachusetts and was a friend of former President Calvin Coolidge and Dwight W. Morrow, both graduates of Amherst.

C. R. Allen, Retired Interior Worker, Is Buried in Texas

Funeral services were held yesterday in San Antonio, Tex., for Charles Ricketson Allen, retired employe of the Office of Education of the Interior Department, who died Wednesday following a heart attack.

Mr. Allen was taken ill while motoring from Florida, where he had been teaching in the University of Florida summer classes, to Colorado, where he was to instruct at Colorado State College of Agriculture and Mechanic Arts.

A member of the staff of the Federal Board for Vocational Education here from 1918 to 1933, when it was merged with the Office of Education, Mr. Allen was well known in Washington.

During the World War, he served as assistant superintendent of training for the Emergency Fleet Corporation, training 88,000 men for shipbuilding.

He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Arda Talbot Allen.

Walter Dordell's Rites Held in D. C.

Funeral services for Walter Dordell, 52, Bureau of Statistics senior clerk, who died Thursday in Garfield Hospital after a lingering illness, were held yesterday afternoon at the Church of the Reformation. The body then was placed on a train for St. Paul, Minn., where it will be interred.

A native of St. Paul, Mr. Dordell came to Washington in 1918, returned home to enter private business, and then came back with the Government here in 1920. He was a member of King David Lodge of Masons, the Four Points Club, the Interstate Masonic group and Central Camp, Modern Woodmen of the World.

Md. Merchant's Death Laid to Natural Causes

Salisbury, Md., July 8 (AP).—A coroner's jury ruled today Orlando Bounds, Salisbury merchant whose body was found in Johnsons Lake Wednesday, died of natural causes.

Dr. Albert W. Kitts, who performed an autopsy, said wounds on his head were inflicted by the grappling hooks with which his body was recovered.

J. G. Beall Succeeds Tabler As Acting Head of Md. Roads

Ex-State Senator, 42, Will Fill Post After July 15, Nice Intimates.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Baltimore, July 8.—J. Glenn Beall, 42-year-old member of the State road commission and former State senator from Allegany County, was appointed acting chairman of the commission today by Gov. Harry W. Nice.

Beall, a Republican, succeeded Dr. Homer E. Tabler, Hancock physician, who resigned the roads chairmanship last night.

Gov. Nice said Beall's appointment "in all probability" would become permanent when the Governor decides whom he will appoint July 15 to fill the vacancy on the three-man commission. The chairman's post pays $6,000 annually.

Beall served on the Allegany County Roads Board from 1923 to 1927, and served on the roads and highways committee and the important finance committee while in the State Senate. He was appointed to the commission last March 28, after the death of Commissioner C. Nice Wilkinson.

The other vacancy on the commission will be filled from either southern Maryland or the Eastern Shore, an official close to the Governor said today. He will likely be a contractor, or one who has been closely associated with the contracting business, it was intimated.

In resigning as chairman of the State road commission, Dr. Tabler did so because he realized that he was a political liability to Gov. Harry W. Nice, who is aspiring for his second term as Governor, and not alone because of his desire to return to the practice of medicine, friends close to the former roads chairman said today.

It is said that Dr. Tabler has realized for some months that he must sacrifice himself in the best interests of party harmony. He wanted, however, to step out at a time when no pressure was being brought upon the Governor for his resignation, as had been done on at least two occasions since he assumed the chairmanship three years ago.

It was said that in naming July 15 as the date he wished his resignation to take effect, Dr. Tabler wished to leave the proposed bridge-tunnel program in some degree of shape for early approval of a $18,000,000 Federal grant for the Chesapeake Bay Bridge, Baltimore Harbor Tunnel, Havre de Grace Bridge and the Potomac River Bridge at Dahlgren.

Dr. Ttable will take no part in State politics after he returns to Hancock July 15, he has informed friends. While in Baltimore he has taken special courses at Johns Hopkins University, with an idea of devoting himself entirely to his profession after leaving the commission.

During his term as chairman of the roads commission, Dr. Tabler has endeavored to build up Maryland's arterial road system, contending that this must be done first if people were to be brought into the State.

Labor Board Cites Carolina Company

The National Labor Relations Board last night found the Mock-Judson-Voehringer Co. of North Carolina, Inc., Greensboro, N. C., guilty of violating the Wagner act for distributing to its employes a magazine, "Industry and Labor," which the board said contained "violent diatribes against the C. I. O."

It marked the third time within a week that the board or one of its trial examiners had ruled distribution of anti-union literature was an unfair labor practice.

Charles B. Dodds Dies; News Writer

Charles Barnes Dodds, 50, a Washington newspaperman since 1923, and a member of the National Press Club, died yesterday at the home of an uncle in Riverside, Conn., it was learned here. He had been ill several years.

Born in Chicago, he began his newspaper career in Tacoma, Wash., and came here in 1923 as secretary to Senator Shortridge, of California. He established a Washington news service for Pacific Coast papers and represented the San Francisco Chamber of Commerce.

Surviving are his wife, Mrs. Elinor Walsh Dodds; his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Barnes Dodds, of Chicago, and a brother, William Dodds, of San Francisco. The funeral will be tomorrow afternoon at Riverside.

The Federal Diary

Accustomed though we are to deficits, public and private, we were somewhat taken back on first learning that President H. B. Vincent, jr., of the Farm Credit Club, stated at the recent business meeting that it might have been better if the net loss of $12.01 had been larger.

We have heard bigger and better deficits advocated by certain economists now and then but never by a club president. Thinking that maybe there was, after all, something new under the sun, we rushed to the phone, only to learn from Vincent that the club (a non-profit organization) has a "relatively large" existing surplus. Vincent merely thought that some of the unnecessary surplus ought to be used up in expanded club activities.

It seems impossible now, but there was a time when the Government of the United States was faced by the same problem as faces Vincent. Just over 100 years ago, the Jackson Administration was sorely troubled by the question. However, it didn't trouble the Government long!

* * * *

Passing by the Railroad Retirement Board the other day, we thought we heard sighs of relief, exclamations of joy and other vocal manifestations of pleasure.

It was all just natural reaction from a letter sent by Chairman Murray Latimer to the employes, who "have had to worry about their jobs because of known budgetary and other situations."

Recent developments, said Chairman Latimer, "now make it possible for us to issue the assurance that, so far as we can possibly predict, the employes whose services are satisfactory are as secure in their tenure as would be the case in any other branch of the Federal Government."

Mr. Latimer added that all appointments to the new Bureau of Unemployment Insurance (which has not yet been set up) "will be on a strictly civil service basis." So far as possible, positions in the new bureau will be filled "by those who have had service with the Retirement Board."

Others who are (or should be) rejoicing these days are the charwomen of the Senate Office Building. Working 4 or 5 hours a day on a 6-day week, they have been receiving half the annual leave granted full-time employes.

President Jacob Baker, of U. F. W. A., recently protested, however, to Senator Neely, who, as chairman of the Senate Rules Committee, is in charge of such matters. Baker claimed the charwomen should be given the full 26 days annual leave and 15 days sick leave —and Senator Neely, representing a beneficent Government, has agreed. The order will be effective as of January 1 1938.

"The War on Slums" will be fought over Station WJSV at 9:45 this morning by the Federation of Architects, Engineers, Chemists and Technicians in a broadcast on housing. Part of the script from ". . . one-third of a nation . . ." will be used. Some of the actors who took part in the Washington production of the much-discussed play will take part in the performance, as will some George Washington University students.

Acting Administrator Milo Perkins, of the Farm Security Administration, yesterday outlined the work of FSA to a group of 16 teachers, ministers and students in a "traveling seminar" conducted by Dr. W. E. Uphaus, of New Haven, Conn. Starting with Greenbelt and Government buildings in Washington, the party plans to visit Harlan County, Ky., the work of the TVA in Tennessee and various Farm Security projects in the South.

A trip like that puts a new and interesting twist on seeing America first.

Ihlder to Speak.

Bob Burns Says—

One reason why so many people get away with speeding in a city is because they have a law that the motorcycle officer has'ta follow the speeder a certain distance and check the speed with his own speedometer.

One of those speeders came through my home town once and when an officer on foot arrested him for speeding the man says, "How did'ja know I was goin' that fast?"—you ain't got no motorcycle!"

The officer says, "Well, if you'd see that yellow dog chasin' your car—when that dog can't keep up with a fella, I know he's doing more than 30 miles an hour."

The Most Popular Activity

1 Nothing can take the place of the old swimming hole on these sultry Washington days unless it is the pool at the Southeast Boys' Club at Seventeenth street and Massachusetts avenue southeast. That swimming is lots of fun is indicated clearly on these streaming faces. Another activity is . . .

Lovely "Miss Washington" Candidate

Absorbing the Beneficent Rays

2 . . . Sun bathing. Yesterday was the first day of the season for sun bathing on the roof of the Southeast Boys' Club, and the activity "took." The boys will build up healthy tans and take in rays which will help to prevent those winter colds after school days roll around.
